

SHY WANTS MORE MEN FOR SPRING FOOTBALL

Coach Fears Lack of Practise Will Handicap Team

FEW REGULARS TRAINING

Graduation Cuts Wide Swath in Ranks of Veterans

"I want more men out for spring football," said Coach Shy Huntington when asked about the grid game. "There are only a few out now, and there are a great many doing nothing that should be out." Huntington also stated that the men out for spring practice will get a great deal more consideration next fall than those who do not come out.

Shy explained that he knew most of the men that are out for track and baseball and excused them under the circumstances, but the ones he is after are those who are not out for any other sport, and are spending their time on the millrace or loafing in the sunshine. There are a great many in this class, he said, especially some of the men on the frosh team this last season, and a few varsity men also come under this class.

Two Teams Needed

The plan for the practice as outlined by Shy at the first of the term was that enough men for two teams would come out, and after they worked into condition a few practice scrimmages would be engaged in, but with the present turnout this is impossible, and Shy is desirous of getting enough men out to carry this plan through.

There will be a great many places vacant on next year's team left by the graduation of Spike Leslie, Mart Howard, Bark Laughlin, Neal Morfitt, Hugh Clerin, Scotty Strachan, and several other men may not return, so, contrary to the general opinion of the students, there is plenty of room on the squad for men who want to come out and work.

Two Varsity Men Out

Shy deplored the fact that the students as a whole sit back and talk about the strong football team that Oregon is going to have next year, and still only eight or ten men come out for spring practice, and only about half of the regular varsity squad this year will be available next season.

Chapman and Gram are the only two letter men who are coming out regularly at present, and most of their practice is in the kicking line. Hunk Latham is expected to come out as soon as the baseball team returns, and will practice kicking every night before baseball practice. Shy says that all of these men are good punters, except for the reason that they get their kicks off slowly, but he is breaking them of this fault now, and thinks that any of them will be able to handle the punting end of the game by next fall.

Several men on the frosh team who should make good next year are Chappy King, Russel Brown, Guldager, Quinn, Tergeson, Spear and Bliss. They all showed up well in the frosh games this fall, and although only two or three are out for spring practice, most of them are interested in other lines and are excused on that account. Haak, who played a good game all season, will not be back next year and will be greatly missed from the backfield.

Shy to Have More Time

As soon as the baseball team returns from its trip the football squad will get more attention from Coach Huntington, for under the present system he is coaching both freshman baseball and spring football, but Baseball Coach Bohler will take charge of the baseball men when he returns, thus leaving Shy more time to devote to the grid prospects for next season. He emphasized the fact that it is not too late for men to turn out now, and that the men who do will stand a much better chance of making the squad next season than those who do not.

ART EXHIBIT TO BE HELD

Drawings to Be Shown Here Until May 10 Instead of Beattie

The exhibit of the architectural drawings of Louis C. Rosenberg, formerly of the faculty of the University school of architecture and allied arts, will not be sent on to Seattle immediately, as was formerly announced, but will remain here and will be open at the Architecture building until May 10. Students in the department are copying and photographing a number of the sketches for use in their classes in the future. The drawings represent the best examples of the various styles of European architecture, including several of the most famous ancient cathedrals on the continent.

GEOLOGY CLASS TO VIEW ROSEBURG ROCK STRATA

Students to Camp Out; Will Visit Mine Near Riddle

For the purpose of examining the geological formations and ore deposits of the Roseburg country, 18 members of the dynamic geology class, headed by Dr. Edwin T. Hodge, will leave this morning for the Umpqua region. This is the first trip ever taken by an entire class in geology, although advanced students have frequently taken trips into various parts of the state to investigate characteristics of different regions.

Members of the party, all men, will take a bus from the University this morning to Riddle, south from Roseburg. Camping outfits and cooking utensils will be included in the commissary department of the student geologists, who will camp under the stars with the eroded walls of the Umpqua valley as their only protection against the winds of the night. From Riddle the party will hike down the river to Roseburg and will return to Eugene Sunday evening.

Dr. Hodge explains that there are some very interesting formations in the section of the state to be visited, some of the oldest in Oregon being exposed near Roseburg. The strata are folded and faulted and the young geologists will have an opportunity to see some extraordinary formations. The quadrangles adjacent to Roseburg have been mapped and various places can be visited without a waste of time, said Dr. Hodge.

This week-end field trip by members of the elementary geology class will substitute for laboratory work during the remainder of the term. While near Riddle the party will examine a nickle mine, not in operation at present.

SAVAGE TO USE SLIDES

A request for slides to be shown at a teachers' meeting has been received by the visual instruction department of the extension division from Carlton Savage, former president of the associated students, who is now principal of the Glendale high school.
