

TWO OREGON MEN GO TO CONFERENCE

Benefiel and Howe to Uphold University Stand in Stanford Case

Graduate Manager Jack Benefiel and Professor H. C. Howe, Oregon's representatives to the Pacific Coast Conference Athletic Association, left yesterday afternoon for Portland where a meeting of representatives of all members of the conference is being held today to determine what shall be done in the Stanford case.

This case deals with a post season football game which Stanford has scheduled with the University of Pittsburgh for December 30. The reason for complaint of the game is that it will interfere with attendance at the annual New Years championship game which is scheduled under the direction of conference officials in the future, and is to be taken out of the hands of the Tournament of Roses committee, which has handled it for the last few years.

Stanford athletic directors maintain that they are in the right in this case and should be allowed to schedule games as they desire. The officials further state that they will withdraw from the conference rather than cancel the proposed game.

Conference Is Threatened

Drastic action by the members of the conference assembled at Portland today might mean the dissolution of the conference as it is hard to believe that California will stand by the rules of the conference if it means the giving up of the big annual game with Stanford.

This is the second time in the last two years that the southern institution has come in contact with the conference rulings, as last year Stanford, California and Washington made an attempt to take over active operation of the conference by forming what they termed "the big three." This soon blew over though as the three institutions, although among the most powerful on the coast, found they would be unable to dictate. Stanford is now jibing with the rulings again and if action is taken to cancel the game states she will withdraw.

About the only way to make them reconsider the question would be to have all other members of the conference call off all scheduled games with Stanford and refuse to schedule others. This would no doubt prove effective, but most of the colleges would not be willing to go to such extremes, so it looks as if the southern school is going to get away with the game.

Division Is Proposed

One way to settle these annual squabbles with the California schools would be to divide the conference into two parts having the northern part include the schools in Washington and Oregon, thus eliminating the necessity of long trips and unnecessary expense. The winners in the two divisions could then meet to settle the coast championship, the winner of that game then meeting a team from the East in the annual East-West classic.

An arrangement of this sort would not only serve to cut down expenses but would eliminate much of the quarreling over schedules, and would also make the work of the conference much easier as it is very bulky and unwieldy at present. The California schools under this arrangement could then do their quarreling among themselves and would probably quit it altogether.

FINE ARTS TEACHERS' PERSONAL LOSS HEAVY

Mr. Fairbanks and Miss Kerns Lose Valuable Collections in Fire During Summer

Personal loss, which money cannot replace, is one of the disastrous effects of the fire which destroyed the Fine Arts building last summer.

The entire art collection of Avarad Fairbanks, an instructor in the department, which he has kept since the beginning of his career at the age of twelve years, was completely destroyed. Professor Fairbanks had kept a photographic record of all his work, including plates and equipment for developing which also was destroyed. The "Mother Group," which Mr. Fairbanks is modeling to be done in marble for the entrance to the Woman's building, was saved however. Janitor Baird, proved that he had the art department at heart, for in the midst of the confusion he dashed out with the model. Miss Kerns lost $3750 worth of valuable art pieces. Practically all of the equipment of the art building was destroyed and until the new building is completed the art students will be working under many difficulties. The need for equipment is very great and the slogan "Ten Million Dollars in Ten Years" is heartily supported by the Fine Arts department, according to Professor Schreff. Professor Schreff himself was very fortunate, as all of his paintings were in the Woman's building, except those which had been sent to Portland for sale.

CONFERENCES TO HELP FROSH GET BEARINGS

That the freshmen in the University may start life on the campus, with as little handicap as possible from unfamiliarity with University life and customs, and especially with Oregon traditions, the student administration is instituting the custom this year of a series of conferences, during the first month of school, in which the older students, and the faculty members will be given the opportunity of meeting the members of the incoming class.

At each of these conferences, some faculty member or upperclassman will speak to the freshmen on some phase of the scholastic or student life.

The first of these meetings will take place next Tuesday afternoon, when Dean Colin V. Dymont of the college of literature, science and the arts will speak on "Scholastic Standards, Rules and Requirements." At the second meeting, Delbert Oberteuffer, last year's yell leader, will speak on "University of Oregon Traditions," and "Student Activities" will be the topic of John MacGregor, president of the associated students, at the third meeting.

Dr. Harold Leonard Bowman pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Portland, and a frequent visitor to the campus, will address the fourth conference, on the topic "The By-Products of University Life." Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, dean of the school of education will complete the series with an address on "The Big Objectives of University Education."

FOURTEEN LEAVE BY FLUNK ROUTE

Probation Claims Thirty-Nine; Scholarship Committee Makes Statement

Fourteen students were flunked out of the University at the end of the spring term for having failed either to make three hours in that term or to make seventeen hours in their last two terms.

Thirty-nine other students went on probation at the end of the spring term for failure to make nine hours. Those of the 39 who have returned will flunk out in December, unless they succeed in passing in 17 hours for the two terms.

The foregoing figures were given out yesterday afternoon by the scholarship committee, which also added the following statement:

"There is no University law or University custom requiring the scholarship committee to re-admit, after nine months, students who have flunked out. The rule (U. R. 90) reads: 'A student dropped from the University under any of the provisions of this (scholarship) code may petition the scholarship committee for readmission after nine calendar months have elapsed.'

"This rule is permissive merely and not mandatory. Until about one year ago flunkouts were permanent. The faculty then modified the scholarship code to permit the scholarship committee to readmit at its discretion any students of whose scholastic promise it is convinced, but usually the committee does not readmit."

The list of probationers and flunkers is commonly highest in the fall term; next highest in the winter term, and lowest in the spring term. The scholarship committee is said to contemplate going over the records of students now in the University to determine whether those students whose averages are very low should not be dropped as well as those who failed to make seventeen hours in two terms. The University's bachelor degrees are at present protected in part against the V student by the requirement that 140 hours must be above V before graduation.

The members of the scholarship committee are Dr. F. L. Shinn, Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, Dr. E. C. Robbins, Miss Mary Watson, and the chairman, Dean Colin Dymont.
