Are Students One-sided?

Two weeks from today is election day in the state of Oregon. It will come as a climax to a campaign peculiar in many respects and one in which issues have played no small part. In the next two weeks political activity will be at its height. Argument and talk will be cheap. Principles and policies will be reviewed.

The student who is to select the good and reject the unsound from the deluge of talk must keep himself informed. He or she must read the newspapers and keep eyes and ears open. Students have always been criticized for their apathy toward the world outside. "You do not even read the newspapers," has been the cry. And the cry has not been altogether unjustified.

If a University graduate is to assume a place of leadership in his community his training in college should be of some assistance. The undergraduate years are the time when habits of reading and of thinking are formed. Activities may be numerous and studies may be pressing, but they should not be allowed to monopolize the student's time and interest. Knowledge of world conditions during college years will make possible the coupling of theory and actuality.

In the two weeks before election students should acquaint themselves with the measures which are being brought up and with the qualifications of the candidates for office. Try to determine the issues which are represented in the measures and candidates. Try to go below the surface and see what this or that political move may mean.

Students of voting age should see to it that they have their certificates of registration, and that they are properly qualified. Those who are not yet of legal age should interest themselves in the issues and prepare themselves for the time when they will be able to take an active part.

The time has come when something should be done to prevent speeding on Thirteenth avenue within the bounds of the campus. With hundreds of students crossing and recrossing every hour, and with cars parked along the curbs, it is only a matter of time until someone will be injured. Ultimately the traffic will be diverted to other thoroughfares, but the thing to do now is to put up warning signs. Signs at both entrances to the campus will eliminate much of the rapid driving, and will reduce the probability of accident. The element of noise is also to be considered.

Name Campaign Draws Interest

To the Editor:

The suggested name, "Pioneers," for Oregon athletic teams seems a peculiarly fortunate one in that with the famous statue of "The Pioneer" on the campus the spirit of the Pioneer could be thoroughly incorporated into Oregon traditions. A cut of the Pioneer could be used on A. S. U. O. stationery and on the name plate of the Emerald. Last year's Oregon bore on its cover the "Pioneer" and seemed particularly appropriate.

There is some thought on the campus to the effect that the name Pioneers is in use by Whitman, but at the Walla Walla institution the name is used only as the name of the college paper and is never applied to their athletic teams.
SENIOR.

To the Editor:

As one humble suggestion, I would like to submit for your approval the representative name "Wild Cats" to our fighting University teams. I believe this name appropriate for the following reasons:

1. Oregon spirit will have eight more lives than those of our rival institutions.
2. It is a well known fact that Oregon teams can "lick their weight in Wild Cats."
3. They are cautious, alert and cunning.
4. The "Beaver" is pie and cake to the "Wild Cat" when they meet.

C. J. B.

To the Editor:

I gladly submit for your consideration a name for our team, and that is "The Bulls."

We all know how fearlessly a bull would fight, how gamely it would run and plunge, and how cleverly it would defend itself. Anyone who sees a loose bull is soon assailed by fear, not because the bulls are the most dangerous in the world, but because there is always a certainty that a bull will fight.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor:

In a recent story which I gave to one of your reporters a misleading caption was used in which it was stated that I "preferred to live among the islanders." What I actually stated was given in the body of the story; i. e., that in some ways I preferred to live in the islands, because of the interesting work and the interesting surroundings. I did not mean to give the impression, and no-one else had the right to so interpret my statements, that I prefer to live among foreign rather than among my own people.

Will you kindly make a suitable correction in order that this unfortunate, for me, mistake may be corrected.

WARREN D. SMITH.

Conduct of Patrons Unsupervised in Study Rooms Says Dean

Dean E. C. Robbins of the school of business administration is especially pleased with the manner in which patrons of the commerce library have conducted themselves this term. Although there is no supervisor in charge of the four study rooms, the Dean states that very good order has been apparent at all times.

Some little trouble has been experienced through the use of some of the study rooms for committee meetings by student groups in the evenings, but in the future whenever such meetings are permitted they will be held in one of the basement rooms away from the possibility of disturbing the study room students.
