Housecleaning Time

Who cannot recall the housecleanings which preceded visits from distinguished guests—when everything from the front gate to the back yard was put in perfect order because "someone was coming."

Within two weeks the University will welcome to the campus several hundred friends, our own alumni, alumni of other Universities and others who are interested in our Homecoming festivities. Many of these never visit us excepting at the Homecoming time, and consequently the impression made will be one that will remain. Old grads, coming back with their memories of "days gone by," will be especially sure to notice anything that might indicate a spirit of carelessness on the part of the present student body—and we should be particularly anxious to convince them that the old spirit of loyalty and of pride which characterized their school days is still alive.

Oregon rain, Oregon mud and the falling autumnal leaves are acts of Nature and their traces are removed as far as possible by the University campus department. Cigarette packages, gum wrappers, scraps of paper and other debris, however, can be directly traced to thoughtlessness among our own members. It is quite time for us to remind ourselves that we are soon to stand for inspection, and that the whole University may be judged adversely through our own careless act.

The Armistice Day Parade

With Armistice day and Homecoming both on November 11, this year, patriotic exercises are to be combined with the observance of the University's annual reunion. It is particularly desirable that the University cooperate with the American Legion in keeping the spirit of the day.

The military parade in the morning will be distinctly a part of the University's program and the program for the observance of the national holiday. The move to have all ex-service men in college march has been sponsored by the American Legion and by the Homecoming committee. It will be an activity of the University on that day. Colonel Sinclair has proved his willingness to cooperate by allowing the R. O. T. C. to participate in the parade and by announcing that attendance would not be compulsory, but would be a matter of supporting University activities. Since the Homecoming game is to be played on Armistice day the military organizations will be in the limelight, and every member should realize that his part of the parade is just as essential to a successful Homecoming as some of the more spectacular duties.

COMMUNICATION

"CONDORS" IS SUGGESTED

To the Editor:
Why limit the selection of a name for athletic teams to beasts of the field? There are numerous birds whose names might be appropriate. Take the largest and noblest of birds, the Condor, why not call our teams the "Condors"? Or the "Eagles"? Or the "Hawks"?
STUDENT.

ADVOCATES PORTLAND TRIP

Editor of the Emerald:
Was the game at Whitman satisfactory? Yes. The team and coaches went to Pendleton to win the football game and they did. They did all that was expected by any reasonable thinking student. Does it matter to this student body what Gregory, the sport writer of the Oregonian, thinks about the score of the Oregon-Whitman game? The coaches have these things all worked out and cannot play a game just for the "mere" pleasure of some sport writer.
Oregon has a game Saturday with Idaho at Portland and this should prove to be an interesting contest and one worth watching. The team and coaches did all that should have been expected last Saturday and next Saturday the students should help that team to win. Let's all go to Portland, "box car" or otherwise.
I'M ON MY WAY.

WOULD REVIVE OLD NAME

To the Editor:
I have been greatly interested in the campaign waged in the communicator's column of the Emerald and wonder that more names are not suggested. The various points suggesting the need for a name seem well taken and I should like to see every one send in a good name that might be used or if they do not feel that a name could be used state their reasons. It seems that if the students would all take it on themselves to suggest a suitable cognomen out of the suggestions might come a name that would lend itself handily to newspaper heads and to the spirit and traditions of Oregon. The name that I have in mind is a revival rather than an innovation. For many years the Oregon teams were called the Web-footers and while the name is long it is distinctive.

VOX.

FORMER EDITOR WRITES

To the Editor:
I have resigned my place on the Oregonian desk to go to Sheridan to continue my newspaper activities with my father there. This is a move I told you I was contemplating. I have disposed of my home here and purchased one there and expect to be comfortably settled in a couple of weeks. The Emerald has been coming to our address here unusually regularly; in fact so unusually so that we have formed a habit of looking for it. May I ask you to see that the address is changed to Sheridan, Oregon, so we will not be forced to cure ourselves of the pleasurable addiction. I thought I would get in my request early to insure the change.
Please be sure to look us up if you chance to visit in Yamhill county. With kindest personal regards, I am,
Sincerely,
HAROLD HAMSTREET.

ORCHESTRAS FOR HOUSES

Director Underwood Takes Steps to Form Small Musical Groups

Each of the houses will have orchestras of their own if Rex Underwood, director of orchestra, is able to work out plans that he has in mind for such an undertaking. Letters have been sent to all of the houses, requesting that names of people who can play be sent to him. It is obviously an advantage for each house to have its own orchestra, and for this reason consensus of opinion on the campus is that at least several of the houses will have orchestras.

The sale was not as successful as was expected yesterday, since many were unaware of the sale and came unprepared to buy.

BUILDING LACKS COGNOMEN

Geology Department Wants Name for Shack in Rear of Johnson Hall

Now that the contest for a Homecoming slogan has ended, the geology department of the University has announced that there is a building on the campus which has not yet been named. This is the diminutive shack at the rear of Johnson hall, now used as a class room and laboratory by the geologists. Earlier in the term this structure was erroneously listed as Condon hall, but it has been made known that the official Condon hall is the place in the Administration building formerly called the Condon museum.
Several names have already been suggested. "Rock Crusher," "Smelting Pot," "Quartz Hall," and "Quarry" are some of the names turned in.
Persons who believe they have an appropriate name for the geology structure have been requested to turn in their suggestions to Ian Campbell, president of the Condon club, or to members of the geology faculty.
