

Bobbed Heads

Lady Godiva Lost on Campus
Shorn Heads Number 174
House Average is 87-10 Girls

Now we ask you frankly what kind of a chance do you think Lady Godiva would have had on the Oregon campus?

No, we fear that Lady Godiva would have short shrift on this campus.

Do your realize how many bobbed hair girls there are on the University campus?

One hundred and seventy-four young women with bobbed hair in nineteen young women's organizations means an average of eight and seven-tenths bobbed headed girls to each house.

Seven-tenths of a girl! Perhaps that seven-tenths of a girl in each of those houses is one of those masculinely inclined women.

In these glorious days of freedom; in this year of grace, 1922, from the raucous voice of Dame Fashion is heard shrieking, in French, across the land, demanding in no uncertain tones the submission of American women to long skirts, and long hair, the Oregon co-ed stands forth from among her sisters and says, "I won't!"

Gone for her are the days of mid-victorian prudery, when girls walked on "limbs" or anything except legs, and gone are those days, when fainting was the favorite feminine indoor sport.

Varsity. In his third year there he was elected captain of the team and placed on the mythical all-American for that year.

Another great player in those early days was Harry Templeton, the first of the famous Templeton brothers, five of whom upheld the honor of Oregon on the gridiron.

he was captain of the team; and Frank was substitute of the team of '00. "Red Demon" Coleman played end rush on the great team of '95 and for years all the ends at Oregon were judged with Coleman as a standard and for years the highest compliment that could be extended to an Oregon end was to say that he was as good as "Red" Coleman.

Certainly the most famous pair of guards ever at Oregon was that famous pair "Big John" Edmonson and Ted Shattuck. Those were the days when the guards were all important and the playing of Shattuck and Edmonson was famous all over the Northwest.

$100,000 DEAN STRAUB'S GOAL FOR STUDENT FUND

PORTLAND WOMAN PROMISES TO LEAVE $25,000

$13,000 in Offers; Money Available to All Students Except First or Second Term Freshmen

Dean John Straub, "Oregon's grand old man," has one great ambition to fulfill before he closes his desk, following 50 years of service, in 1928. That ambition is to make the student loan fund reach the $100,000 mark.

"The sight of a boy sinking back into the ranks of the uneducated simply because he lacked a few dollars to complete a term's work was the inspiration which led President Campbell and myself to see the possibility of establishing the fund," the Dean told an Emerald reporter this week.

It was in 1902, shortly after the arrival of President Campbell, that the foundation of the fund was laid. Since that time it has been Dean Straub's favorite project and he has worked to the accomplishment of the $100,000 goal on his many trips throughout the state.

$13,000 in Fund

The fund now contains $13,000, all of which is loaned except a few hundred dollars. It has been added to from time to time by voluntary contributions and by thank offerings from students it has helped. Several years ago one man who was able to complete his University education with $100, which he borrowed through the offices of Dean Straub, gave a $1000 Liberty Bond in payment.

The greatest encouragement which the Dean has received recently is the promise of $25,000 from a Portland woman, who has placed this amount in favor of the loan fund in her will. Several other citizens of the state are said to be contemplating assisting the work.

Requirements for the management of the loan are simple. No money is loaned to freshmen unless it is to finish out the third term. Sophomores may borrow $100, juniors $150 and seniors, $200. However, no student may have more than $300 at one time. Six per cent interest is charged and as long as interest payments are made, students are not pressed to repay the loan until after they have finished their University work and have had time to accumulate some funds.

Students Honest, Says Dean

"Students are honest for the most part," the Dean soliloquized, when asked about difficulty in collecting the notes. "In all the time the loan has been in existence we have only lost track of one $50 note and we still have hopes of collecting it," he said, declaring that if the tardy debtor is not found he will make the amount good himself.

Dean Straub has expressed the hope that graduating classes will follow the example of the class of '96, who gave $3000 to the loan fund, which is to be turned over to the University at a later date after it has had time to add to itself through compound interest.

Dr. Straub has visions of a fund of $500,000 in future years. "Even if Oregon grows to the size of California, we would then have enough to keep all deserving students in the University," he believes.

RHODES SCHOLAR WINS HONOR

Reed college, Portland.—(P. I. P. A.) Frank Flint, first Reed man to receive a Rhodes scholarship to Oxford, has been awarded the Chancellor's prize for English essay. To the best of our knowledge, the prize has never before been given to an American, and is one of the highest honors open to any student of any college at Oxford.

Fair Athlete Is Prize Winner in Aquatic Events

Among the many interesting students registered here this fall is Muriel Myers, '24, champion fancy diver and long distance swimmer.

Last summer while on vacation with her parents at their summer camp at Lake Big Moose, in the Adirondacks, she entered in the annual regatta held there, carrying off honors in diving, swimming, canoe racing, and capsizing. As the prizes were donated she says she is supplied for life with "stuff." One of the events she won was a combined swimming and canoeing race. It is regarded as very difficult feat.

For several years she has been taking part in the regattas held at the various summer resorts in the east, each time carrying off her share of the prizes. Four years ago she won two bronze cups for swimming and canoe racing. Her closest competitor was Sylvia Woodbridge, champion diver of Vassar college. In swimming, her sister, Ilicne Underwood, runs her a close second. Miss Myers is a member of the United States life saving corps. She is a typical American girl, free, capable, and tremendously interested in living. She has been swimming since she was five years old, learning to care for herself in water quite accidentally. One day she was standing on a high dock playing with a pair of water wings, when they fell overboard. In trying to seize them she too fell off into the water. As no one was with her, she had to concentrate her mind on getting out, thus mastering the first essentials of swimming.

NO BAN ON WOMAN'S HALL

Building to Be Made Beautiful and Fit For Homecoming Dance

"Decoration of the Woman's building for the Homecoming dance will not be restricted because of any previous ruling against elaborate decorations," said Mrs. Wilson, caretaker of the building, last night. This question arose at the meeting of the several Homecoming committees held Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Wilson states that the floor in the gymnasium has become unusually slippery from the constant use that it is put to. The use of floor wax is prohibited as it is injurious to the rugs when tracked through the Alumni hall. It is probable that corn meal may be sprinkled on the dancing area.
