Too Many Returned Checks

Bankers and merchants of Eugene say that more student checks have to be returned this year than ever before. Elsewhere in The Emerald the University business office has called attention to the prevailing spirit of carelessness in regard to bank accounts.

If students cannot learn how to keep their accounts at the banks before they come to college they may never learn. It's essential in business, and perhaps it would be better if the penalties were made stricter.

The banks of Eugene welcome student business, but in handling it there is little profit for them. And the inconvenience and cost of a returned check makes a considerable item when there are many of them.

If students would keep their stubs and know at all times how they stand most of the trouble would be eliminated. Some of the trouble is caused by ignorance of business methods, but most of it is caused by carelessness.

Go to It, Frosh

The plan for the construction of the Homecoming bonfire in a limited time is largely experimental this year and students and alumni will be interested to see what the result will be.

The bonfire will not be as large as formerly, but the limit had to be reached some time. This year's class will set a mark for succeeding freshmen to measure up to—and exceed.

Show us what you can do, Frosh! The University has protected you in limiting the length of time and it's your duty to show the University and its alumni that you can give them a real bonfire and still carry work in the University.

Jackie Coogan in "Trouble"—"Trouble"—with Jackie Coogan. When one reads this title and thinks of the famous little star in the title role of the First National picture at the Rex theater, nothing but the thought of a fun-fest is in view.

There is a courtroom scene in the forthcoming Coogan production in which twelve "types" were selected for jurors.

So intense was the child's acting that when his director gave the cue to stop—many of the jurors' eyes were filled with tears.

Jackie Coogan does not have to be "coaxed" to cry. He can stand on the stage in the midst of any surroundings and bring big bitter tears to his little blue eyes at a moment's notice.

EVANS IS DIRECTOR OF VESPER MUSIC

First Appearance of Year to Be Made Sunday

Glee club work divides itself into various activities and one of these is to supply music for the University vesper services.

The services this year have been planned in a series of eight, the first of which will take place Sunday afternoon, November 5, at 4:30 o'clock in the Methodist church.

Mr. Evans is especially pleased with the prospects for the vesper services this year, because so many of the members of last year's clubs have returned.

Rev. C. H. Harrison, of Portland, is to make the address. He was formerly field secretary for the western district of the Congregational church and is now state superintendent for the church.

The vesper service of December 10 is to be entirely musical and it is at this time that the glee clubs give their annual presentation of Gounod's St. Cecilia mass.

Vesper services are held at the Methodist church because of a lack of either an organ or an adequate auditorium on the campus.

The program for Sunday is as follows:

- Organ prelude Antiphonal service Hymn 53 Prayer Response by choir Anthem: Hark, Hark My Soul...Shelley Miss James, Miss Price and choir Organ offertory Solo: The Lord Is My Shepherd...Curran Ruth Akers, soprano Address...Rev. C. H. Harrison Organ interlude Nunc Dimittis Hymn 43 Benediction

The outburst of noise at the Oregon-W. S. C. game, homecoming week, will be punctuated by the loud boom of a 75 millimeter field gun, if present plans of the military department materialize.

A military salute of 21 guns to the flag will be paid just before the start of the big game, and the piece will be fired every time a touchdown is made.
