

SMITH PRESENTED WITH CREDENTIALS AS OREGON ENVOY

Old-Time Gridiron Hero Given Send-Off by Students at Homecoming Rally

ABBOTT ANNOUNCES PLANS

Alumni and Visitors Will Be Registered When They Arrive on Campus

Presented with his credentials and with greetings to be carried to the University of Washington, at the assembly held in the Woman's building at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, Richard S. Smith, Oregon's ambassador to the University of Washington homecoming, was started on the first lap of his journey.

Smith was authorized as Oregon's official ambassador to the northern institution by President Campbell, who at the same time delivered a message of friendship on the part of the University of Oregon, to the sister institution. In this message President Campbell said, "Good fellowship is one of the greatest things in the world and nothing is impossible between good friends. Washington was at one time a part of Oregon and by virtue of that we are hereditary friends. On the part of the University of Oregon I send this bidding of good will and good wishes."

Greetings on behalf of the Alumni association, the Associated Student Body, and the women of the University of Oregon, were presented respectively by Miss Grace Edgington, secretary of the Alumni association, John MacGregor, president of the student body and Margaret Beatie, vice-president of the Women's League.

Harmony Is Purpose

Mr. Smith, in a short address, stated that it would be his aim to carry to the University of Washington a message of friendship and good will. It was his impression that the old-time enmity which existed between the two institutions, when every man stood for himself, is now gone and he hopes to perpetuate and extend the friendship which now exists between them.

Smith signified his regret at not being able to be present at the Oregon-W. S. C. game and exhorted the students to give the team their undivided support. Talking on Oregon spirit he stated that it is easy for spirit and pep to manifest itself in a warm, dry room, but that the team likes to see that spirit go out into the rain and the cold. Sacrifice and loyal support, whether in victory or defeat, is necessary on the part of the students, he said, as he told of the sacrifices made by the football players.

Faculty Aid Urged

In closing his address Smith asserted that a spirit of cooperation on the part of the faculty is also a vital factor in producing a winning team and keeping up its morale. He declared that instead of greeting the athlete with a scowl because of a fall in grades the professor should greet him with a smile and thus encourage him to do better. He told of the difficulty which the athlete encounters in keeping his grades up to the standard during his season of training and playing and asserted that with constant opposition on the part of the faculty he soon becomes discouraged. Smith declared that it is not only a courtesy but a duty of the faculty to display this spirit of cooperation.

"The long-looked-for event is upon us. And this isn't our party, but it is for the homecomers," declared Leith Abbott, general chairman of the homecoming committee, as he outlined the plans for the occasion. According to Abbott between 1000 and 1500 old grads and former students are expected to return to the campus this year and that it will be the duty of every student, by his "hello," to show them that, even though many changes have been made on the campus and although the faces of the student body are strange, the spirit of democracy is the same.

10,000 May Come

In addition to the old grads and former students it is estimated that there will be more than 10,000 visitors on the campus to attend the homecoming game. Among these visitors will be many graduates of other institutions who have been invited to Oregon where they will be received as sons of the University at the adoption ceremonies to be held on Hayward field between the halves of the homecoming game.

Speaking of the alumni from other institutions, Abbott stated that it will be the duty of every student to make the visitors feel at home while they are on the campus and that the "hello"

President Extends to Oregon's Guests a Cordial Greeting

To Alumni and Visitors:

The entire University extends to you a welcome. The old graduates already know the cordial hospitality which always awaits them on the campus; and to the newly adopted Alumni who come to us from other institutions we wish to give assurance that they will be no less warmly greeted and sincerely welcomed.

The entire student body is organized to greet you with the old-time democratic "hello." We hope you will receive it in the same spirit in which it is given, and excuse, if you are a new-comer, the seeming informality of the customary expression of good will.

The one earnest desire is to assure you that the University is yours at command, and that if anything is overlooked in the way of hospitality, the omission shall be at once corrected by your good-natured reminder of our dereliction. We are all working together for a greater University and a great state.

P. L. CAMPBELL.

NOISEMAKING MACHINES FEATURE OF PARADE

Lighting of "O" on Butte New Plan This Year

"All set and rarin' for the gun," is the way Jack Myers, general chairman of the Homecoming pep rally, stated the situation last night.

"Everything is in readiness with the exception of a few minor details, which will be ironed out tomorrow. Several of the houses have not made known their entries in the noise-making contest. By the whole-hearted co-operation of the Eugene merchants we have been able to get 50 trucks to carry the students in the parade. Added to this, five big passenger cars have been donated by the Terminal Stage line. These will accommodate about 100 girls."

Taking all this into consideration, the pep parade ought to go over as the biggest one in the history of the University. Last year's pep carnival will be remembered as the greatest ever, but the noise fest scheduled for tomorrow night will eclipse it by several city blocks.

Working with Jack Myers, who incidentally was one of the main factors in the success of the parade last year, are Emil Ghio, Robert Monroe, Betty Pride, Ted Baker, Jack Sletusk, and Lee Culbertson. This year the California club took over the handling of the parade.

The parade will form at the corner of Thirteenth and Alder streets at near 7:00 as possible, the band leading. Following there will be a truck load of rosters then a noise making instrument and they will alternate this way throughout the line of march so that the noise makers will have a fair chance at the prize. Most of the houses are entering the parade as dark horses, but those that have been lined up promise to shake the air considerably.

ADOPTION CEREMONY PLEASING TO GRADS

Enthusiasm Shown in Congratulatory Letter to the President's Office

The general attitude of the alumni of other institutions toward the proposed adoption ceremonies, to be held during homecoming, as shown in letters received by the president's office, is a very favorable one.

"I desire to express my gratification," a prominent Roseburg attorney writes, "at your plan of getting college men together. You know the Greeks had a Pan-Athenaic festival which did much to knit the states into homogeneity, a result which will, doubtless, be accomplished by your excellent plan."

The adoption ceremony will take place on Hayward field between the halves of the Homecoming game. At that time President Campbell will administer the oath of friendship and adoption, and extend a greeting to Oregon's new associates and sons.

FEW PATIENTS CONFINED

Colds Are Diminishing; Septic Troubles and Boils Prevalent at Infirmary

Ten patients were confined to the infirmary yesterday with various minor complaints. None of them is very seriously ill. The dispensary has been as busy as ever, but the treatments have been mostly for other causes than colds. Only a few coughs are to be heard now on the campus.

Boils and septic conditions of a more or less non-serious nature seem to be the prevailing trouble.

VARSITY TO HAVE FULL STRENGTH IN COUGAR CONTEST

Bill Spear and Cogs Campbell Will Be in Opening Lineup

W. S. C. EXCELS IN KICKING

Zaepfel and Dunton Powerful Booters; Chapman Will Do Kicking

The real test of the varsity comes tomorrow in the Washington State contest. Oregon will have full strength in the opening lineup and will have no alibis to offer if its fails to come out on the long end of the score. In all previous engagements the eleven has been handicapped by injuries and the coaches have not been able to put a first line squad on the field. With Bill Spear and Cogs Campbell in the lineup along with the rest of the first string men, the squad presents a formidable appearance.

This is the game in which the team needs its full strength, for this is undoubtedly the most important on the Varsity schedule this season. If Oregon wallops the Cougars chances are good to play at Pasadena on New Years, but if defeat comes all there is to look forward to is the annual clash with our neighbors, the Aggies.

Cogs Campbell fits in the lineup just right, as only a few days before it was found he was eligible, McKeown developed an abscess in his nose and was prohibited from playing football. Cogs will not be in the best of shape Saturday though, as in scrimmage last night he was hit in the side and badly bruised.

Cougar Punters Good

For the first time this season Oregon's first string backfield will start the game intact, with Hunk at full, Chappy at quarter, and King and Gram as halves. Hunk still is suffering from a weak knee though, so Chappy will do the punting for the team against the Cougars. The visitors will excel in this department as both Captain Dunton and Zaepfel, who handle the kicks for W. S. C. will average better than Chappy does.

The northern team is coming to Eugene with the definite object of winning the game, for so far this year they have been nothing but a disappointment to their followers, and will attempt to make up for all their defeats this season by taking the Varsity down the line.

The game is the critical one for both elevens, as for Oregon it will decide whether or not they will be able to accomplish anything of importance in the Coast conference this year, while for W. S. C. it will prove whether or not they are still one of the leading teams on the coast.

Weights About Even

The weights of the teams will be about even, although the Cougar backs

BONFIRE TO BE READY DESPITE TIME LIMIT

Boxes, Beer Barrels and Baby Carriages in Pyre

Five gaunt poles in a space 20x20 feet stretch their lengths skyward on Kincaid field. Will the freshman class have the emptiness that is between them filled by this evening, so that the touch of a lighted match will transform it into a flaming inferno?

"Yes!" says Eugene Richmond, president of the freshman class.

"Yes!" says Floyd McKelson, chairman of the freshman bonfire construction committee.

"Yes!" echo the freshman class members, as they heap box after box upon the growing pile.

For the past week or so, plans for the bonfire have been discussed, but only since yesterday afternoon has the actual construction taken place.

In previous years, there has been no limitation upon the time of construction or the height of the bonfire, but this year a faculty committee has given the babes two days only in which to erect the pyre, the height has been regulated to 40 feet by a municipal fire rule. So if the class of '26 succeeds under these restrictions in equaling the efforts of previous classes, much credit will be due them.

Plenty of material is assured the frosh. The material has been conveyed to Kincaid by a fleet of four trucks with trailers which worked ceaselessly all yesterday afternoon. The inflammables consisted of all kinds, from broken baby carriages and dry goods cases to antiquated beer-barrels. Several truckloads of lumber odds and ends were gotten from the Booth-Kelly Lumber company, and the timbers of the old bridge near Springfield were also secured.

Heavy timbers built around two rows of packing cases placed end to end form the base of the pyre. The ends of the packing cases have been knocked out, thus making passageways beneath the huge heap, and insuring a good draft. A column of barrels rising through the middle constitutes a flue for the draft to pass through.

Late last night, under the light of two brilliant nitrogen lamps, the toiling freshmen brought the height of the pyre up to about 14 feet, and it is thought that by this morning it will have reached at least 25 feet.

EISMAN WITH STATESMAN

Former Journalism Major Accepts Position on Desk of Salem Daily

Stanley Eisman, who was graduated from the School of Journalism last year, has accepted a position at the desk on the Statesman, a Salem daily publication.

In a letter to Dean Eric W. Allen, of the School of Journalism, Mr. Eisman says, "My reporting is rather light. Police, justice court and district attorney, and now and then schools. The telegraph and make-up seem to be the biggest jobs. Here, my night work on the Emerald will come in handy."

Mr. Eisman is well known in campus journalism circles, where he was an active member of Sigma Delta Chi, Hammer and Coffin, the Emerald and Oregon staffs, and editor of the Lemon Punch for the past two years.

By THAD BYRNE,

Sports Editor, W. S. C. Evergreen Washington State College, Pullman, Nov. 9.—(Special by P. I. N. S.)—Washington State is at present facing the crisis of its present football season. The consensus of opinion of W. S. C.'s student body is that their football team must take a sudden brace, or be toppled permanently from the respectable niche which they have occupied in the football hall of fame in previous years.

Pre-season dope gave the Cougars a formidable gridiron aggregation—credited them with having a team potentially more powerful than last year's championship contenders. In the early part of the season, Gus Welch, dusky Cougar mentor, made the following statement:

"This year has been the first year since I have coached football at W. S. C. that I have had a score of dependable men with which to work."

Welch is Ambiguous
Those who know how little the silent Indian is given to talking of his prospects at any time, at once construed this to mean that W. S. C.'s grid chances were even better this year than last.

Like most "dope" predictions, however, this optimistic guess failed to materialize. Although the Cougars won their first two games, which were with Gonzaga and Idaho, they just managed to nose out their opponents in the final minutes of play in both contests. In contrast to this, last year Welch's proteges administered severe trouncings to both teams.

On October 28 the Cougar gridders lost their first game of the season to the heavy U. of W. team, 16-13, in one of the most thrilling games ever witnessed on Rogers field. The terrific pounding to which Bagshaw's powerful forwards subjected the entire W. S. C. line, was largely responsible for the 61-0 defeat meted out to the Cougars by California at Berkeley last Saturday.

With but three days in which to recuperate for the Oregon contest, Welch's players are facing the crisis of the present season. If they lose to Oregon tomorrow, they know that they will perhaps lose the remaining three games on their schedule. Chafing under the sting of a 61-0 humiliation, it might be said that the Cougars will be even more dangerous tomorrow than if they had held California to a respectable score.

Coach Welch will send a much battered eleven out to Hayward field tomorrow afternoon. There is scarcely a man on the first string but has received a minor hurt in the last two games with the Huskies and the Bears.

The severest loss to the team will be "Bud" McKay, all-coast guard of last season, who is out with a sprained ankle. Verne Hickey, who has starred in every game that W. S. C. has played this year, received a peculiar injury in the Bruin melee that may impair his usefulness for the rest of the year. He was struck in the head in such a way that he was unable to remember the meaning of the signals, although he could call them perfectly. This was the reason he did not play the entire game at Berkeley.

Aside from these two injuries, all of the men are expected to be in shape to play tomorrow's game.
