

PLANS FOR SOLONS' VISIT COMPLETE

Legislative Guests Will Meet Student Friends on the Campus

Plans are rapidly crystallizing for the program which the members of the Oregon legislature will follow during their visit on the University campus between eleven and five o'clock on Wednesday, February 21. A list of the names of the legislators has been printed and students are asked to report the names of those whom they know personally with their own name and address so that guides may be assigned to each guest for the day. The student committee in charge of campus inspection is composed of Hadden Rockey, Betty Pride, LeLaine West, Marion Lawrence, Jack Myers, Maurice Eben and Randolph Kuhn.

The general outline of the program for the day includes a University assembly at the Woman's building immediately after the special train bearing the guests arrives; a luncheon at Hendricks hall, tours of the campus and a trip through Eugene under the guidance of representatives of the Eugene chamber of commerce.

A faculty committee made up of Justin Miller, James Gilbert, Ralph Casey, H. R. Douglass and Alfred Powers is cooperating with the student committee in arranging the details of the assembly program and in the work of assigning students to guide the legislators about the campus immediately after the luncheon. Students will not be asked to entertain individual guests, since the time of the official visit is so limited, but it is hoped that many of the guests will be able to remain in town longer than the special excursion allows. In this event they may be entertained by their friends on the campus. Individual tickets for later trains will be arranged for by a committee in charge of transportation which includes Frank Chambers and W. K. Newell of the chamber of commerce.

An itinerary will be suggested in order to avoid complication in taking the legislators on an inspection tour of the campus and student guides who are assigned to this work will be expected to be informed on all the points of interest on the campus and to report whether they have classes or not. Dean Allen, of the school of journalism, and Dean Colin Dymment, of the College of Letters and Arts, are preparing printed information for the visitors, guides to the campus and official badges. Those in charge of the luncheon are Dean Fox, Miss Gertrude Talbot and Mrs. Edna P. Datson.

MATERIAL ON OREGON IS COLLECTED BY LIBRARY

Documents Giving History of State are Preserved

A collection of books, magazines, pamphlets, railway folders, telephone directories, and maps of every conceivable size, shape and dimension, preciously kept under lock and key in what seems to be a silent and secret room in the top of the library, comprises the "Old Oregon Collection."

This collection includes Oregon voting records, state reports, government documents, illustrated annuals of Oregon, scenery, medical journals of Oregon hospitals, records of law, criminology, industry, war, military organizations, horticulture, agriculture, dairying, biography, factories, railways, labor, education, marine history, theology, fishing, road building, state grange proceedings, maps, fiction, and every sort of document.

There are besides all these many volumes of the history of Oregon, among these Julian Hawthorne's "Story of Oregon," and Bancroft's two volumes.

Six little shelves have been especially reserved for fiction, poems, and literary essays by Oregon writers. These do not necessarily relate to Oregon, though incidentally many of them do. These shelves are already full. Many of the volumes are attractively bound and invite the reader to linger over them.

There are in all 39 book-shelves filled with literary material relating in every way to life, history, achievements, famous men, and institutions of Oregon. This collection will become almost priceless as the years pass, and will be an invaluable source of material for future staccos and historians of the state.

tributed to the laughs. Portia Kid-character of Mrs. Hammond. Claire Keeney, Vern Fudge, and Morris Bock scored triumphs in the old men parts. Gladys Keeney, Star Norton, and Katherine Pinneo all acted well in comedy roles. Katherine Watson, Little Orphan Annie, told stories to the children gathered wide-eyed about the fireplace. Lorna Coolidge won round upon round of applause on her interpretation of 'Elizabeth Ann, the hired girl out to Wigginses, who does her best to set a number of things right and finally succeeds with the aid of one of her famous custard pies.

In fact all of the cast, too numerous to list, played well, and would have pleased Riley himself. And now that The Raggedy Man has folded its country store and gone away, the most generally voiced hope is that Mr. Reddy will produce another of his inimitable original plays very soon.

Idaho and U. W. Play Again

The Washington outfit did not show half the basketball here that Idaho did and it is hard to see just how they managed to come out ahead of the Vandals, when they played at Seattle. Idaho still has a crack coming at the Huskies on the Moscow floor and should revenge themselves for that one point defeat.

COLIN V. DYMENT ADDRESSES GIRLS

Speaker Says Organizations Are Too Numerous on Oregon Campus

"Student Activities" was the topic for open discussion at a recent mass meeting of Women's league. Dean Colin V. Dymment, as speaker, gave those present new thoughts on the methods by which they can be regulated.

It is the opinion of Dean Dymment that clubs and organizations cannot be regulated through legislation. "It is not possible, or even proper, for the University through the faculty to legislate as to how a young woman shall spend her time," he said. The solution, according to Dean Dymment rests with the women themselves.

"The business of the faculty," said the speaker, "is to work out a sound curriculum to meet reasonable difficulties." If standards are raised so that a higher grade of work is required, it will be impossible to spend time in activities that are not beneficial, thinks Dean Dymment. He said that when student activities came into prominence on the Oregon campus, in 1915, a code that would govern them was attempted, but this method did not prove workable. In 1916 standards were raised so that activities would have to be self-regulating and these problems have continued to rise since that time.

Dean Dymment pointed out the fact that women were beginning to look into the matter was proof that this method was satisfactory. The point system so far has not been put to actual practice, but more important than this, in the opinion of the speaker, is the personal interest and opinion of the women. If the Oregon women would take this problem to heart, a point system would not have to be enforced.

The reason a great number of students leave school before their four years are up, according to the speaker, is because of the discontent such a system makes. In organizations, he said, the difficulty with grades is activities and that most students who might otherwise be good scholars drag themselves wearily through four years of bondage, attending meetings every night of the week, thus breaking down health and spirit.

The result of a recent campus census of clubs and organizations was read by Dean Dymment, and there was found to exist 121 clubs and organizations on the campus, many of which, he said, merely elect officers, hold a banquet or give a yearly dance, and publish their list of pledges. It is this sort of organization that Dean Dymment and Women's league, as a whole, in favor of ruling out.

A short business meeting was held, including a brief announcement of the result of the Christmas ball. Although hot as large a crowd attended this affair as was expected, due to conflicting affairs, a goodly sum was realized, part of which will be added to the foreign scholarship fund.

BIENNIAL REPORT GIVEN

asked in the immediate future to increase its appropriations, but the pressure on maintenance funds is again being felt and the prospect of securing much needed buildings from present sources of income grows steadily less promising. Under the auspices of the alumni of the University a campaign is being planned to educate the state to the importance of giving, and to the opportunities offered by the University to place gifts where they will do good to the largest number for the longest time. It is reasonable to suppose that an adequate presentation of the needs of the University to the alumni and other friends of education throughout Oregon would result in increasingly large gifts being made year by year. Judging from the experience of other state universities, these contributions may be expected to usually take the form of gifts for buildings and special purposes, rather than endowment."

DEAN SHELDON TO SPEAK

Dean Sheldon of the school of education will speak before the graduate club this evening, making a survey of the eastern universities, regarding the graduate work done in the humanities. Professor Stafford of the chemistry department will make a scientific survey.
