Here's One Opinion!

An interesting contribution to the current discussion of the relative value of studies and of student activities is made by F. C. Ferry, in "Proceedings of the Association of American Colleges." "Is it the student with the high grade average, or the student with the large number of activities, who is more often successful in life after graduation?" he asks.

"Many attempts have been made to prove that it is distinction in the extra-curriculum affairs, the so-called 'activities,' which leads to distinction in the man's more serious subsequent undertakings, but such attempts have led to no confident conclusion and no announced findings. Yet one has been permitted to read within a half-dozen years many articles made up of sound statistical evidence in support of the argument that high scholarship in college makes for success in life. To such abundant evidence of the close connection between scholarship in college and success in life the ears of the undergraduate are peculiarly deaf," says Mr. Ferry.

Are students biased in their consideration of the subject? Do they close their ears when an argument is brought up contrary to their own notions? The opinion of Mr. Ferry is printed for what it is worth. What is your opinion? Sit down and write it for the communication column.

We're Glad It's Settled

The decision of the faculty to retain the term plan is highly gratifying to most of the students. With the troublesome question finally out of the way it will again be possible for faculty and students to make plans for the future. In the future there should be some means of preventing passing of legislation of a drastic nature by a bare majority.

Red "Galluses" Not Needed

Oregon men sympathize with the men at the University of Chicago who declared for "freedom of the male" by wearing red "galluses" to classes. Western freedom of dress was accomplished without any such dramatic demonstration, however.

Only a Matter of Time

With the constantly increasing number of cars parked on the campus it is probably only a matter of time until some enterprising business man will want to construct a service station and auto camp under the Condon oaks.

The Emerald congratulates Scroll and Script on the successful petition to Mortar Board, and expresses the sentiment of the campus in welcoming it to Oregon.

EXTENSION MONITOR IS POPULAR PUBLICATION

Next Issue to Contain Summary of Activities for Past Year; Miss Mozelle Hair Is Editor

The Extension Monitor, published by the University extension division, has been used since 1913 as a means of making announcements to correspondence students. "This is the way in which these students receive general information about lessons, which they would otherwise get in class, according to Dr. Dan E. Clark, assistant director of the extension division.

Well written short stories and parts of instructive and interesting lessons are published in the Monitor, as are the names of those who complete their courses. Copies are sent about nine times during the year, at irregular intervals, to correspondence students.

Last year, several women's study clubs, throughout the state, interested in Oregon history, sent for the Monitor, in order to get suggestions for study. In this way, numbers of wider interest were published and there was a larger circulation. However, the ordinary routine numbers are made of the student's own work.

The next issue, which will be out next week, will contain a general summary of the activities of the division for the last year. About 1500 copies are usually printed although this number varies. The Monitor, of which Miss Mozelle Hair, secretary of correspondence study of the University, is editor, is printed in Eugene by the University press.

"MOTHER'S MILLIONS," HEILIG Augustus Pitou, Inc., takes great pleasure this season in presenting his popular star May Robson in an artistic comedy entitled "Mother's Millions" coming to the Heilig tomorrow night.

There is no theatrical attraction that is more looked for than Miss Robson and her new play will be a big surprise to the theater-goers who see her every year.

No matter what she comes to us in, it's always a good show and she improves every year.

We have our favorite this season as a successful financier, one of the greatest women in the world, "Harriet Breen."

MATHEMATICS USEFUL IN TRAINING STUDENTS

Records of Department's Graduates Are Praised

The list of honor students for previous years includes a large percentage of those students who are well trained in mathematics and especially is this true in the fields of economics, chemistry, biology, physics and law, according to E. E. DeCou, head of the mathematics department.

Graduate students in the department have made fine records in other institutions including Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cornell, Columbia and Chicago universities.

Word has just been received that Miss M. Lucile Copenhaver who was an assistant instructor in the University for two years after taking her degree, has received a graduate scholarship from Chicago University. The head professor of mathematics in that institution, a personal friend of Professor DeCou, writes that Miss Copenhaver has been doing fine work and is well liked by her associates.

Mrs. Elizabeth Carson-Nichol, a graduate student, is director of the extension courses and under her supervision the enrollment has greatly increased. Mrs. Nichol is now working on some keys or explanations and suggestions for the solving of problems, to be used in algebra and trigonometry correspondence courses which will be used by the United States Navy. A survey of extension courses was made by the director of educational work of the United States Navy with the result that the Oregon courses were chosen and have been in use for about three years now.

Two students will probably take their master's degree in the department this summer, states Professor DeCou. They are Richard M. Elliot, graduate of Pacific University, who has been taking work here for the past two years, and Mrs. Minnie Holman who was in school last term and expects to return in the spring. Mrs. Holman has been a high school teacher and principal and has taken work at the University of Chicago.

Miss Alice Thurston, an honor student and graduate in the department, is now teaching in the Klamath Falls high school.

"Mathematics is not a finished and complete subject," said Professor DeCou in discussing the discoveries that are constantly being made in the field. "The American scholars," he continued, "rank with the best in the world. The University department," said Professor DeCou, "is promoting research work and strengthening the department by building up a complete library of mathematical books and files of mathematical journals including American, German, French, English and Italian periodicals.

MISS SCOTT BUSY AT SALEM

Margaret Scott, a senior in the school of journalism, who is in Salem for three weeks, working on the staff of the Oregon Voter, is covering committee meetings, gathering statistics, and aiding in the office work of making reports. According to letters received here, she is getting a great deal from the experience. She often sees Dr.

James Gilbert, professor of economics, who is doing investigational work on taxation for legislative committees. She will return to finish the term's work on the campus.

RAKING CAMPUS IS BIG JOB

Thirty Wagon Loads of Leaves Make Mountain Behind Depot

The falling leaves in autumn may be a favorite theme for poets but they cause a lot of work for the University clean-up men. Back of the University depot is a small mountain of leaves that were raked off the campus last fall. One workman estimated the pile to contain at least thirty large wagon loads of leaves. The raking of leaves was not finished until the last of the fall term.

According to H. M. Fisher, superintendent of grounds, in charge of the clean-up on the campus, the maples shed the most leaves, and next come the oaks.

HANDBALL FINALS POSTPONED

Because of an injury by one of the Sigma Chi players, the final game of the do-nut handball series between Friendly Hall and Sigma Chi which was to have been played Saturday, has been postponed until next Saturday.

ROLLIEN DICKERSON IS SICK

Rollien Dickerson, head of the department of history and the social sciences in the campus high school, has not been able to meet his classes for the past week because of an attack of la grippe.
