

PSYCHO-PHYSICAL TESTS INCOMPLETE

Correlation Between Mental and Bodily Ability Not Yet Demonstrated

"Not all of the psychological and physical tests which have been given the students of the University during the past few months have as yet been correlated, but enough has been accomplished," says Dr. John F. Bovard, dean of the school of physical education, who has been organizing and directing the work, "to show that the results were not what we expected to find.

"I am disappointed," said Dr. Bovard, "because I hoped the tests would show that there was a positive correlation between physical and mental ability, and despite the records, I still think it is true. The only thing which we have found out is that the general run of students here ranks as high as at any other college.

"We must back up and start over again and find out where the fault lies. It seems that the trouble is not with the mental tests but with the physical tests. So many of these experiments are in the form of a trick which some men can perform because they know the trick and therefore get a high standing, while others do not rank so highly because they have not mastered the difficulties of the trick. To correct these faults, we must either have tests which none are proficient in or else give every one the same amount of time to practice and learn.

"Another disturbing factor is that so many of the fellows don't try. They do just about enough to get by and let it go at that. Here a psychological factor enters in which is disturbing in so many physical and mental tests."

The mental test, which was given the students, is known as the Otis Mental Ability Test. It consists of a series of questions and problems, presented in such a manner that they must be analytically considered in order to be solved. It is a higher type of mental examination than the Binet test, which gauges only the average adult and the superior adult. The Otis test is essentially a college test.

The first attempt at a correlation of this kind was accomplished recently at the University of Indiana by Dr. Samuel Edwin Smith, a psychiatrist who has done much in that field. Dr. Smith found by comparing the football men and the general run of students that the football men ranked a little higher than the others. However, no data was ever published and the experiment was lost to the public.

Dr. Bovard does not intend to stop his experiments with what he has found by these tests. He will have to spend some time in reorganizing his material, discarding some of it and investigating new methods. He hopes in the end to prove that there is some correlation between mental and physical ability.

are not registered in the P. E. department—and who have not taken a physical examination must take a thorough examination before they can participate in interfraternity bouts.

Standings Are Posted

The physical education department maintains a scoreboard in the office of the men's gym where the results of all do-nut competition are chronicled and the team standings given. Word has been received that Stanford has adopted the interfraternity award system used by the University of Oregon. Oregon's system was evolved by Jerry Barnes who has charge of the do-nut program.

Although Barnes is in charge of the do-nut activities in general, he is assisted in the various sports by the coaches of these sports. George Bohler, basketball coach, ran off the basketball series, and Earl Widmer will take charge of wrestling.

FILM PRIZE INCLUDES $1000 FOR COLLEGE

Winner Will Also Receive $1,000 Scholarship

Besides the $1000 scholarship being offered to college students by the Universal Pictures corporation for short stories adaptable to scenarios, an additional $1000 will be given to the institution at which the winner is a student.

In this novel way Universal offers another reason why all students who can write and are interested should try. The money can be used in any way whatsoever in the interest of the college.

The winner of the contest receives pay for his story also, the rules providing that he shall receive not less than $500. The exact compensation however will be determined by the company. Thus the scholarship and purchase price of the manuscript will amount to not less than $1500. If any other stories entered can be used, they will be bought for not less than $500.

Concerning the form of the story, W. F. G. Thatcher of the school of journalism says: "It is my opinion that this contest will not be won by expression, but by a clean-cut novel idea." He believes that a short story of the usual form is not wanted, but that the writer should tell his story in as few words as possible, and in chronological order, in most cases.

The rules provide that all stories from one college shall be sent in one package. All manuscripts from Oregon are to be handed to Mr. Thatcher before May 15, when they must be forwarded to the Universal Film corporation.

The scholarship money will be sent to the registrar of the university at which the winner is enrolled, and will be divided into as many equal parts as the student has years in college. The money will then be paid in yearly installments.

LAST SHOWING OF LOENA DOONE

The "poet producer" is the title which has been given Maurice Tourneur whose film production of Blackmore's novel, "Lorna Doone," is showing at the Castle theater today for the last time. Tourneur was a student of sculpture with Rodin and of painting with Puvis de Chavannes before he began his work on the stage, later entering the field of motion picture production.

New Styles for Spring

Spring and its opportunity for greater outdoor activity brings a natural and effective change in clothes.

In fabrics you will see decided preference for the light colorings and more pronounced patterns.

In models you will find the plainer styles discarded for the season's novelties. The sport types created by us in wide plaits, belts and patch pockets, will be a popular departure from the sombreness of winter clothes.

For complete satisfaction you will want fit, correct balance, drape and design, high-grade workmanship and durable light-weight all-wool fabrics. In Campus Togs you will find all these and have the added assurance of our guarantee, backed by thirty-five years service.
