

Fritz Leiber to Portray Great Character in Macbeth Monday

Fritz Leiber

Fritz Leiber, often hailed as "America's greatest Macbeth," will arrive in Eugene, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, from San Francisco, and will be brought directly to the campus in order that the members of the various literary organizations, who are especially interested, may meet him before his performance at the Heilig, Monday night.

Scores of University students stood in line, Saturday morning, in order to take advantage of the special student rate, which was made with the special consent of the great actor.

In his message to Manager McKee of the downtown theatre, Mr. Leiber said: "It is always my policy to favor students for they are my best friends."

Campus Shakespeare enthusiasts consider the University particularly fortunate in obtaining Mr. Leiber as he is playing only the larger cities of the coast, and comes directly from a sensational triumph in New York.

Advance press information concerning the appearance of the much heralded Shakespearean promises a large, strong, supporting company and a number of unusually good stage and lighting effects.

Those who saw Walter Hampden, last winter, are especially interesting in the prospective appearance of Mr. Leiber.

The local Shakespeare club have contracted for all the boxes for Monday evening's performance.

WOMEN PLAYING JACKS

Strange Terms Heard in Sororities Taking Up New Pastime

Such terms as "split jack," "overs," "double strikes" and "cart before the horse" can be heard resounding through the halls of some of the sorority houses on the campus these spring days.

"What could it mean?" ask the uninformed.

It merely means that simultaneously with the formation of a pinocchio club among the men of the campus, the women, not to be outdone, have instituted a jack-playing tournament, and many of the fairer sex have already become quite proficient at the art of throwing jacks.

If one has never learned the game in childhood days; if one has never spent hours at a time, throwing a small rubber ball into the air and at the same time, picking up a jack, or two jacks, as the case may be, then it is high time to learn the intricacies of this new pastime as it bids fair to become a formidable rival to dancing and canoeing as a popular campus sport.

TUTENKHAMEN TOMB TO INFLUENCE FUTURE ART

of Egypt. All its thought looked instead of out. Instead of expanding, the country grew into itself and lost its vitality.

This spirituality was the cause of the formality of Egyptian art and sculpture. All this work was religious. The glorification of Amen, their god, was its aim and for that reason it must have an awe that could not be obtained by impressionism such as ours. The figures were stiffened and made rigid. The professor pulled himself up from his slouching position in the arm chair, drew his knees together and folded his arms to illustrate the usual posture of the Egyptian statue.

During the conversation the artist

LIBRARY HAS NEW BOOKS

New Feature Is Bound Periodical List Posted in Magazine Stacks

New books recently received at the library include the following: "Football, How to Teach It," by P. D. Haughton; "The Waltz of the Dogs" and "He Who Gets Slapped," two plays by Andreyevs; "The Heart of Little Shikara," by Edison Marshall; "The O'Henry Memorial Prize Stories of 1921;" "Knave of Hearts," by Symons; Poems by J. C. Squires; "Rootabaga Stories," by Sandburg; "The Verge," by Glaspell; and "Americans" by Stuart P. Sherman.

A new feature in the library is the alphabetical list of all bound periodicals which has just been posted on the end of one of the magazine stacks. This list will be greatly appreciated by those who have spent hours looking for periodicals only to find they are not in the library. By glancing at the list it may quickly be ascertained how many years of back volumes are on file without loss of time, as the years are listed with the volumes.

PROFESSOR SENT TO JAIL

A Yale graduate was so anxious to do research work in criminal psychopathology that he stole an automobile and got eight months in prison. Before being freed, he revealed his identity and said he had been sentenced to Sing Sing, but was not able to do much because he was not a prisoner and his field was accordingly limited.

And They Lived Happily---

Do you want to do that, too? Well, then come to THE RAINBOW and have a fruit salad. One blended by our experts will surely make you happy. First they take luscious sliced oranges, pineapple and bananas and mix them with rich mayonnaise. Then they put it on a crisp lettuce leaf and top it off with chopped nuts and whipped cream. You will never taste anything better.
