HEILIG PICTURE HAS APPEAL

A well known New York critic commenting on the William Fox special, "Who Are My Parents?", now fulfilling a two-day engagement at the Heilig theater, characterized the picture as one of the finest and most timely films of the day.

"It appeals to everyone," he said. "It appeals to children because there are a lot of children in the play, and their frolics naturally amuse those of their tender age. It appeals to the grown-ups because it deals with a very vital problem in our everyday life."

PHYSICAL ED GANG AND NEWSHOUNDS TO BATTLE

Hoop Game This Afternoon to Be Bloodiest in History

Prepare for the "battle of the century." This afternoon at four o'clock the most "crucial game" of the campus season will be played in the men's gym, with the Knights of Hunt and Peck and the brawny physical education faculty in the points. This is the bloodiest contest, the typewriter-maulers having tasted the bitter dregs of one defeat are out for revenge and vow to smear the gym with the gore of the faculty.

Since the beating they administered to the newshounds, the physical ed gang has been keeping under cover, watchful, waiting. Although no one has seen them practice, it is assured that they have not rested on their oars, but have been putting in some vigorous lies in the way of perfecting team play and devising new combinations to humble the journalists. It is rumored that they have worked out a unique scoring attack which combines bar vaulting, rope climbing and catch-as-catch-can wrestling with a smattering of jiu-jitsu. It is also said that Pete Ringle will unlimber several new bullfighting tactics which he acquired in the armory arena, one evening not long ago.

Since the bombing they received at the hands of the faculty, the pen-pushers have come to the fore in great strides, vanquishing the Geologists and the Architects in a barrage of typewriters and diplomatic journalism. Several secret sessions have been held in the "shack" in the late hours of the evening, at which times Skipper Youel, General Hoyt, and Lieutenant Fraser have outlined a new offensive which they expect to down the gym mentors.

The new formula for slipping in counters is so intricate that the writer was unable to solve the thing in its entirety, but the plot is something like this: Youel and Hoyt advance nonchalantly up to the fortifications of Scott, Fairbanks and Ringle on the Isthmus of Basketonia. Piper is lurking in the offing with his guns trained on the isthmus. Akers is left guarding the home base Journalia.

Hoyt and Youel then send forth a diabolic squadron of type cases and proof galleys. This brings up the curious guards of the isthmus who take an interest in the line of the two scribes. At this juncture Fraser, who has been hibernating off the coast anticipating battle, steams in and with Piper in the van, plumps a shot square into the isthmus. There are other numerous details, but the headquarters of the scribes wouldn't give them out.

As it now stands the game will be a good one, with both sides not giving an inch of ground. A capacity crowd is expected and barbed wire entanglements are being erected and trenches dug by the two opposing camps. Come early and get a seat for the battle of the age.

PRIVILEGES ARE GRANTED

So much student interest has been shown in film feature "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," now playing at the Rex theater, that several living organizations have granted their underclassmen special mid-week privileges to allow them to attend the show. In commenting on this, the head of one house stated that the historic background of the picture was considered of sufficient value to warrant this leniency in rules.

There were many very interesting and spectacular events connected with the filming of this production. For example, Dug Fairbanks carried $480,000 insurance during the entire period because of the dangers involved in many of the scenes.
