

University Day Slated LAST WOMEN'S LEAGUE for April 4

Every Oregon student, whether member of the Greater Oregon committee or not, must make it his duty during the spring vacation to see the alumni chairman of his community and assist the latter in every way possible in making University Day, April 4, the biggest yet; and cooperate with alumni members in bringing before students of the state high schools the educational advantages of the University. This is the word sent out by Paul Patterson, chairman of the Greater Oregon committee, who with members of the committee is planning the work that body is to do during the spring vacation.

Although the talks to be given before high school students on University Day will very likely be engineered by alumni, the representatives from the present generation in college can be of valuable assistance in furnishing up-to date information, said Patterson.

April 4 will be the seventh annual University Day put on by the alumni of Oregon. It is a day when Oregon people in every community make concerted effort to let high school students know of the educational advantages that the University has to offer. This year unusually great interest is being manifested in the occasion. Meetings have been arranged in all the big cities of the state for University alumni. The last issue of Old Oregon was devoted entirely to University Day.

Thursday, March 22, there will be a meeting of the Greater Oregon committee at 5:15 p. m. in Dean Straub's office. "Everybody is asked to come, and if he can not come to send a representative from his community, whether he is going home during the vacation or not," said Patterson. This will be the first meeting of the committee since Christmas.

Members of the committee who are asked to report Thursday are as follows: Portland, James Meek; Salem, Leon Culbertson; Albany, Mildred Fort-miller; Lebanon, Bandolph Kuhn; Eu-
