

ART EXHIBIT OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

Best Work Will Be Sent to Donovan Prize Donor for Decision

Architectural problems and art work will be judged today at the jury day for the term. The studio in the architecture building will be open all afternoon to visitors desiring to see the exhibit. Morris Whitehouse, the Portland architect, and W. G. Holford, partner of Dean Ellis F. Lawrence of the school of architecture and allied arts in the Portland firm, will be the architectural jury. Mrs. Lucy Ramberg, the Portland portrait painter, will assist the art faculty in judging painting, sculpture, drawing, design, and the crafts.

The judges will not attempt to award the Donovan prizes for the school problems, but will send the first mentions to John J. Donovan of Oakland, California, for his own decision. "This is the best set of problems as a whole that the men have turned out for some time," said Dean Lawrence. "The standard is unusually high, and the school ought to be proud of the work."

Mr. Donovan, an Oakland architect, has offered a real stimulus in the way of prizes—the seniors have as a problem a "general, cosmopolitan or inclusive high school to accommodate at least 2000 students," with first prize of $50 and second of $25; the juniors have designed elementary schools to be laid out on large grounds for the prizes of $30 and $20; there is a special prize for the sophomore design of a rural school of the Donovan book on school architecture. In addition to these prizes, each of the four winners of the upper classes will be given a copy of the book.

Besides the school problems an entrance to a tunnel on a highway, designed to symbolize the completion of the highway, has been completed by the students. There is also a commons building, and a commons room, presumably for an architectural club, and a house problem of a large country estate.

Oils, water colors, and life drawings line the walls. Color work by Miss Maudé Kerns' class in design to be used in batik work are unusual in effect. The sculpture includes portraits, original compositions, and studies from the model.

The usual banquet will not be held, due to the conflict with a number of campus affairs. Opportunity will be given, however, for the students to meet with the jury for discussion.
