

UNION BUILDING NOT EXPERIMENT

Other Institutions Taking Up
Work; Six Schools On Coast Interested

ARTICLE NO. 2.
By Leith Abbott

In launching a project for a student union building the University of Oregon student body is not entering a new or experimental field. Such buildings have filled an important need on the campuses of large eastern universities for many years and each year finds other colleges taking steps toward the erection of a union building.

Pacific coast institutions of learning are particularly progressive in this regard. Stanford has had a large and well equipped union building for several years. California students have just moved into the new $400,000 structure completed on the campus at Berkeley. The student body of Oregon Agriculture College has had the union movement under way for the past two years, each student paying $3 per term upon registration to go toward a fund for this purpose. It is expected that the O. A. C. union building will become a reality within a few years. University of Washington students have drafted plans for a building which will be started when the debt on the recently completed stadium is paid and a new basketball pavilion built. Washington students expect to have a student union building before many years. W. S. C. and Idaho students are discussing the project on their respective campuses.

An association of college and university unions was organized in Cleveland in 1914 for the purpose of providing a medium through which delegates from institutions supporting student union buildings could cooperate in advancing their common interests and to encourage and assist in the organization of unions in colleges and universities. Sixteen institutions are members of this association and hold yearly conventions. Members are: Columbia University, Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, O., University of Chicago, Cornell University, Harvard University, University of Indiana, University of California, University of Illinois, University of Michigan, Michigan Agricultural College, University of Minnesota, Ohio State University, Purdue University, University of Toronto, University of Vermont, University of Wisconsin.

At the University of Wisconsin the student union building now on the campus has proved to be entirely inadequate and a campaign is underway for funds with which to build a new Memorial Union building. Over $800,000 has been raised and the campaign is still being waged.

Indiana University is also conducting a drive to raise a memorial fund of $1,600,000 of which about one million has been raised. Of this amount one-half will be used to erect a new union building, one-fourth for a stadium, and one-fourth for a women's dormitory.

All of the buildings are beautiful structures and variously equipped and managed for the benefit of the students of the institutions. Each year sees their support more readily furnished, according to the enthusiastic reports of managers and secretaries who gather for the annual meetings of the association of college and university unions.

into the hands of elected representatives.

It is to the executive council that all matters relating to financing, to raising and spending money, to athletics, to all student body activities, the hiring of coaches and managers, and many other matters of supreme importance to the future of the University are entrusted.

Membership in the executive council is not merely an honor—members of past councils will testify that it is far from that—and will tell of late night sessions which have been held in order that important matters might be given proper consideration, and of the times when important issues have been decided by the majority of one vote.

Intelligent Selection Wanted

It must be remembered that every member of the council has a vote—and whether or not he is capable of casting that vote intelligently will depend upon the intelligence of the student body in electing him.

Student members of the council are president, vice-president, and secretary of the Associated Students, two men and one woman elected at large. The entire council consists of faculty, alumni and student representatives.

FACULTY FROWNED ON ATHLETICS IN EARLY DAYS

with a stout rope. However, when the students arrived they found that by pushing on the doors, they were able to slip a knife between them. They did so and cut the ropes.

This outrage against faculty authority caused a great deal of commotion, but since permission had been given the students to use the room by the board of regents, the faculty finally gave reluctant consent.

In 1888, the men petitioned the board for a gym building, and the men's gym which later became the art building, destroyed in last summer's fire, was given the University. In this building, without instruction, and with but little apparatus, the men founded the beginnings of athletics at Oregon.

A form of amusement and sport which was at once enjoyable and which won the approval of the faculty, was duck hunting, according to Mr. Veazie and Judge Beekman.

Dr. Johnson was very fond of duck hunting, and the students often accompanied him on his trips.

Riding was also very popular and Mr. Veazie kept his own horse when on the campus. He tells of a time when he came to Professor Straub's Greek class unprepared. The professor called upon him, and when he found Mr. Veazie unable to recite, he demanded an explanation. Receiving the excuse of very urgent work, the professor reproved the culprit for letting anything interrupt his studies. Wishing a more complete explanation, he demanded to know what this all-important business might be. Mr. Veazie replied that his pony had had colic, and that he had spent the time he should have used for his Greek lesson in doctoring the sick horse. Being a good sport, the professor forgave the young man.

STUDENTS HAVE CHANCE TO SELL TEXT-BOOKS

Co-op Sales of Last Term Amount to $7,500; Candy and Cigarettes
Bring in $2,200

Monday, April 23, will be an important day at the Co-op, when R. B. Campbell, representative of the College book store of Lincoln, Nebraska, will be on the campus to purchase second hand text-books. The College book store provides all books for the University of Nebraska, near which it is situated. It is also a nation-wide wholesale store for second hand books. Cash will be paid for all books purchased here next Monday and all students having text books for sale, are requested to bring them to the Co-op. Mr. Campbell will be there from nine o'clock in the morning until closing time.

Figures given by M. F. McClain of the Co-op, show that the sales last term amounted to $15,000. Half of this or about $7,500 was received through the sale of text-books, while $2,200 worth of candy and cigarettes were sold. The fall term always brings in the largest sales, according to Mr. McClain, because of the number of full year courses that begin then. The sales in the fall term are about three times as large as in winter and spring terms. A large increase in the sale of tennis goods is expected as soon as the new courts are completed.

The board of control of the Co-op, which held its quarterly meeting Thursday night, is composed of two faculty members and five students. Dean J. F. Bovard and Dr. J. H. Gilbert are the faculty members and Jack Myers, president; Ben Maxwell, vice president; Paul Staley, secretary; Paul Sayre and Orlando Hollis make up the student membership of the board.

VILLARD BASEMENT IS CAMPUS STOREHOUSE

Story of University Unfolded
In Relics of Past Days

The storehouse of the University, the odds and ends for years, is the basement of Villard hall. Until recently it has been almost the only place to put things away on the campus.

The bulk of the stuff is uninteresting chairs and laboratory tables; but in the corners and scattered about the dark cellar are neglected objects that tell the story of the University. Barrels and boxes of trash are lying around everywhere. One box was apparently put in the storeroom in 1898, for tattered books and pamphlets all bear dates before that time. Every few years, the departments have cleaned out according to what can be gleaned from the dates of periodicals, and sent their useless junk to the basement of Villard.

In open boxes, and stacked around on the ground, is part of the Condon collection. Most of the display material is in the Administration building, but the duplicates, and that material which Dr. Condon worked with, the geology department has been compelled, because of lack of space, to store away here.

About 75 mattresses are stacked in one end. They are relics of war days when soldiers were being trained at the University. Another relic is a Victorian folding bed, which, when the combination is worked, looks like a cupboard. Just how it found its place among the old University furniture is not clear, but maybe it's waiting for the prospective museum building.

A coffin, with the word "referendum" printed in large letters along both sides may bring back recollections to those who were here during the fight over the Millage bill. Packed away under a table are records and paid checks of the Associated Students, dating back to 1912. A couple of hula-hula skirts are among the more recent arrivals of the east-asides.

What remains of a small hot-air furnace sits back in a dark corner. According to the janitor, it used to heat Villard hall.

AGGIE RELAY TEAM IS FAST

Squad Works Out on Hayward Cinder
Path; May Go to Drake Carnival

O. A. C.'s two-mile relay team composed of Hollinger, Stone, Dodge, and Simms was on the campus yesterday afternoon trying their paces on the Oregon cinder path. They hung up a time of 8:10 for the two miles which, considering the inclemency of the weather, was exceptional.

The track at Corvallis is a dirt one and is not exceptionally fast and the Aggie distance men wanted to tryout for the Washington relays with the conditions as near as possible like the cinder path at Washington. If the team makes good at the Washington relay carnival it is rumored that they will represent the Aggies at the Drake Relays.

is particularly fortunate in having actors who are actually types of the characters they interpret. And those portraying military officers have had actual army experience. Not that this drama is a war play by any means, simply its scenes take place in a military atmosphere. For instance, Frederick Worlock, the leading man, was a major in the British army. C. T. Davis, who plays the husband, is a retired Lieut.-Colonel of the British Indian service, and he has been stationed in the various Far East points, where this play is supposed to take place.

To Be Run Off Next Week

Hendricks hall took its second victory yesterday in a game with the Gamma Phi batters, which resulted in a complete gain for the former, the score being 3 to 2, and the Tri Delt hitters trampled on the Chi Omega team, 28 to 6. This early in the season, few teams have showed up well, although Hendricks hall has made a good lead toward being one of the strongest teams in the series, 20 games are slated to come off next week. The schedule, beginning April 23, is as follows:

gain," which will be the attraction at the Castle Theatre for two days, commencing Monday. In this thrilling picture he adds two faces to the thousand he has previously accumulated and it is safe to say that without the guidance of the cast of characters no one would recognize him either as the half-mad physician, Dr. Lamb, or as the hunchback victim of one of the doctor's experiments in turning man back into his simian prototype by transplanting live monkey glands into his body. The two characterizations are as opposite as day and night.

"LOST AND FOUND" COMING

A fine example of what a romantic motion picture should be is coming to the Rex Theatre on Monday for two days. This is the Goldwyn photoplay, "Lost and Found," written by Carey Wilson and directed by R. A. Walsh. It is a story of tropical passions, as sudden and violent in their fury as tropical storms. The action takes place partly on the Island of Tahiti and partly on board the ship of Captain Blackbird, a planter whose bitterness upon being deserted by his wife for another leads him into the South Sea slave trade, sworn to revenge upon every woman who comes into his power.
