Cent a Pound Makes Up for Weight Lost in Love Affair

One cent a pound for the ten pounds of weight lost by Miss Elsie Skoog during the week she missed school as a result of a breach of promise to marry her, made by Arthur Rosebraugh, was the verdict of the jury at the court hearing Tuesday evening.

Miss Skoog's complaint as justice to her wounded pride, broken heart, and lacerated feelings, against Rosebraugh was $250,000.

The couple, according to Miss Skoog, became engaged on the night of April 20 in the Odd Fellow Cemetery, commonly known as the 'graveyard.' The engagement had been announced at the Delta Zeta house of which the plaintiff is a member and Mr. Rosebraugh had told her he was going to order a pin for her.

Mildred Burke, accompanied by Leith Abbott overheard Rosebraugh ask Miss Skoog to marry him. Miss Burke and Mr. Abbott had been to a dance but had left early coming to the cemetery to rest. Miss Burke testified that she had been engaged several times and was quite an expert in engagements. She said Rosebraugh had told her he intended to order a pin for Elsie and that they were to be married this summer.

A letter sent to Miss Skoog from Seattle bearing Rosebraugh's name told her he did not intend to marry and that he was engaged to Mary Smith of the University of Washington. Rosebraugh admitted he wrote the letter but said it had been changed. He declared he had never been engaged to the plaintiff nor had never kissed her. He said Miss Skoog was just trying to get his money. He had told her that he was worth two million dollars in his own name and that his father was a multi-millionaire.

Howard McCulloch, witness for the plaintiff and a retired capitalist, declared that he had proposed to the plaintiff once but she did not accept him because she did not love him. She said she held love above money. He said he had noticed a change in the plaintiff and that her friends did not hold her in such high esteem as before she was engaged to Rosebraugh.

Leith Abbott, president of the matrimonial bureau, declared he was engaged to the plaintiff. He said he had gone to a dance with her the night after the track team had gone to Seattle and she seemed in the best of spirits. He said she told him she didn't care for Rosebraugh, but he had lots of money. Abbott declared that he kissed the plaintiff when he wanted to.

In the rebuttal Gladys Everett, council for the defense, made an extremely appealing talk, bringing in the loss of weight, the plaintiff had had to suffer, the disappointment, the absence from school, the blighted plans of a home, a loving husband and a social position.

Ogden Johnson, attorney for the defense contended that the ten pounds lost, the week's absence from school did not compensate the amount of money and that the plaintiff being engaged to Abbott proved her scheme to try to get the money. He further contended that the plaintiff was poor and her tastes had been cultivated and she thought that Rosebraugh being a millionaire would afford an easy opportunity to satisfy her tastes.

Miss Skoog put up a very dramatic fight throughout the trial and only once during the examination did her voice entirely fail when she was questioned as to whether she still loved the defendant.

Mr. Rosebraugh appeared to be confident throughout the trial and during the examination willing to answer in detail the questions of the opposing council.

Judge Kendall of Marshfield declared that both the councils put up excellent arguments and showed much promise as amateurs. These moot cases will be staged every Tuesday until the end of school.

LAME DUCK LINE TO FORM TODAY

Defeated Candidates' Ranks Add Recruits

Well, it's all over now. They've gone and done it. The political batter has been smeared about considerable. Yet there remains something to be done—a deed of charity and mercy, and the Lame Ducks are supposed to do the good turn.

After the smoke of battle cleared away, it was found that several had been maimed and wounded. Crushed in the rush for the best seats, they found themselves groping in the dark, groveling in the dust of their fortunate competitors.

So today the right royal order of the lame ducks will waddle forth and rescue those unfortunates by the wayside. Gather them in and comfort them in their sorrow, for the lame webfooters know what it is to stagger and falter by the roadside.

So they will parade today and gather the unlucky ones into the order. They will flaunt themselves before the world, happy in the thought that they have found a haven of refuge, even if it hasn't a political atmosphere.

The lame ducks are the good Samaritans. They will see to it that all the stray sheep are brought to the fold.

EXTENSION DIVISION GROWS

Correspondence School Shows Marked Increase in Enrollment for April

In the correspondence school, the enrollment for April showed 74 students registered in 80 courses, compared with 58 enrolled in 62 courses in April of 1922.

During the month 33 students completed 38 courses, and 880 lesson papers were received and corrected. The greatest number of these were from those taking English, while education came next and mathematics third.

In the Portland Center 413 students have registered to date, although more are expected. The spring term always shows the smallest enrollment, according to Miss Mary Kent, of the extension division. There were 1413 persons registered during the fall term and close to 1,000 during the winter term.
