Come Out in the Open

In the Oregon of the past there was a spirit of cooperation and friendship between faculty, student governing groups, and students themselves. But the past two years have shown that a new unrest and a new tension is creeping in. The gaps are growing unmistakably wider and there is danger of a lack of understanding and a lack of cooperation. It may be occasioned by too centralized control and a failure on the part of all to realize the value of the traditional harmony. Only too frequently have evidences of a new unrest been noticeable. It is not too late to check the evil. Perhaps cognizance of the danger and a recognition of its seriousness by all concerned would be the first step.

Students have failed to understand the viewpoint of the faculty in one or two affairs, and the attitude of the administration has not been at all times particularly conducive to confidential relations. The whole problem could be ascribed to a lack of frank, open discussion. When real causes are hidden and real reasons are camouflaged there can be no other result than misunderstanding. Oregon's traditional friendly feeling was the result of sincere, straightforward opinions. In view of circumstances it is surprising that there has been so little expressed dissatisfaction.

The Emerald firmly believes that there should be no inner circle for the control of student affairs. It believes that except in the rarest cases pertinent problems and discussions of the faculty, the executive council, and the student council should be presented to the students for opinions. It believes that star-chamber sessions and hidden motives have caused more harm to the University than any other one influence.

A centralized organization is most efficient for the transaction of business, but care must be taken that those in authority do not forget that they are responsible for their actions. The executive council, although it is supposed to be a faculty-student-alumni body, cannot be said to represent the students. Its decisions are influenced by a certain group of its members and campus opinion makes not a great deal of difference.

Members of the student council are prone to forget that they have been elected as representatives of the students. Their actions are more often prompted by personal motives than by any thought of those for whom they are acting. An incident of this was the reluctance of the council to give the Emerald permission to print the way the members voted on the recent Campus Clean-up discussion.

The only solution to the whole problem of cooperation is more open, frank discussion. The situation has probably been worse this year than ever before, and it may go on getting worse and worse unless there is a general realization and a general broadening of viewpoints. The present student distrust of the wisdom of dismissing George Bohler is but one example of what may continue to happen under the policy of repression.

For the future of the democracy of Oregon, for the assurance that the old democratic friendly cooperation may be continued, let frank and open discussion take the place of guarded statements and sessions behind closed doors.

Caps and Gowns for the Faculty

The O. A. C. faculty may appear in the academic cap and gown in the various formal ceremonies of commencement if the recommendation of the senior class, favorably acted upon by the administration and college councils, meets final approval of the president and board of regents.

The move is a splendid one, and certainly will add more dignity to commencement if the faculty, as well as graduates, are uniformed in the regulation cap and gown. Other institutions have adopted this plan, which has had the effect of bringing more faculty members into the academic procession and in the faculty section at commencement.

The cap and gown idea is based on democracy. It puts everyone on an equal plane. This is the reason it has been adopted as a standard costume for graduation. Since the senior woman no longer worries over her commencement gown, nor the senior man over a graduation suit, why should the faculty not be relieved of similar anxieties, it is argued, and thus free to devote their minds undividedly to the purposes of the occasion?—O. PLANTING DAY NEW PLAN

Four Journalism Organizations Arrange to Beautify Shack Environs

Planting Day will hereafter be an annual spring event around the journalism building, the old journalism "shack," and the University Press building, as a result of a decision reached yesterday by Sigma Delta Chi, Theta Sigma Phi, Hammer and Coffin, the Ad club, the four journalism organizations at the University. Every spring each one of the organizations will set out a vine, or a climbing rose with suitable ceremonies. It is expected that before many years the three buildings will be adorned with many attractive vines.

ANIMAL FILM AT HEILIG

That popular old adage, "Truth is stranger than fiction," was never better exemplified than in the remarkable series of moving pictures shown at the Heilig Theatre last night under the title "Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera." Here for once we find no scenario writer except chance and circumstances and luck, no director save Nature itself, no cast of film favorites, but in their places a charging rhinoceros, a giraffe herd, posed ludicrously against the skyline, a fiercely attacking phalanx of elephants, a strange, mixed company at a water hole.

DRAMA APPEARS AGAIN TONIGHT

The dance drama given by the advanced students in Miss Lillian Stupp's dancing class, will be presented for the last time in Guild hall tonight. The first presentation of the drama was given Thursday night and was enthusiastically received by a large group of townspeople and University students. Twenty-eight women from the women's physical education department are taking part in the event which is the first of its kind ever staged on the campus.

"GRUMPY" HEARTILY RECEIVED

The Paramount picture, "Grumpy," featuring Theodore Roberts, May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel and produced by William de Mille, was given its premiere at the Rex Theatre last evening and was heartily received by the large audiences. A diamond has been the cause of many a quarrel between sweethearts, but seldom are the circumstances similar to those found in "Grumpy."

is also assisting with the decorations for the prom.

Another new committee chairman is Bill Godlove, who heads the floor committee of the junior prom. He will work with Jones during the week on various activities connected with the prom.

Announcement has been made that the Anchorage board walk will not be used at the fete this year as a spectator's stand, due to the fact that it is not strong enough to hold a large crowd. However, the Anchorage management plans to have tables to reserve for the event, which will permit a limited number to see the fete from the platform.

It is a tale of how love came into the life of the daughter of a South Seas missionary. What better setting for a tale of romance than the far away islands of the Southern Pacific. Here is romance in its essence. The very atmosphere breeds romance—the clean, white beaches leaping in the brilliant sun, the tall, waving palms against a glowing sunset.

To the Man in Love with his work money is not the incentive that urges him to attain the heights, but the thoughtful expressions of appreciation from those who sense the difference between the mediocre and the excellent. In our work we are constantly receiving just such commendation and this, far more than the money which merely expresses the cost of a commodity, is the "urge" for us to attain the heights with our creations.

It's peculiar how great a part of college depends on a good eye. It's the indispensable organ of the cake hound, the billiard player, the baseball star, the tennis player and the poor fish.

It is not an accident that a majority of college men choose OBAK'S as their favorite hunting grounds.

What Some Men Don't Know

That OBAK serves the best cold drinks in town.

The rival clans of Eugene and Corvallis duly shocked this morning at the announcement of the engagement of Pete Pioneer, protgee of Procter, California's sculpture and Irona Lady, for many years the most prominent female on the O. A. C. campus.

The announcement came as a complete surprise to the friends of the popular couple. It means that some sort of peace terms will have to be drawn up between their respective clans as the two factions have been hostile for a number of years.

The former Miss Lady was for a number of years very prominent on the Corvallis school yard. She was especially known for wandering and aesthetic dancing abilities. She gained particular fame by daring the elements both summer and winter, being frightened neither by freckles or frost bite. Although the Krier could not find the record of Miss Iona Lady's family she undoubtedly comes from a good essay as her friends all say she always rings true.

It is reported that she spent her last year's vacation on the University of Washington campus, but returned to the country upon violent protest from her clan.

Pete Pioneer has for the past several years been Oregon's most steadfast man. At no time has he deserted his post.

Mr. Pioneer admits that his wonderful endurance is due to his wise choice of cigars. He has bought OBAK Wallace Havanas through his stay in Eugene.
