Keep Your Vision

Usually, after a riotous good time, on a week-end of excitement, a queer feeling comes over all of us. We call it "the blues"; we say we are "low"; in general, we subject ourselves to a few hours—or possibly days—of mental misery, agonizing moments of self scrutiny and criticism.

Sometimes it does, but more often it doesn't. Perhaps the sun shines, or, if it has been warm, it rains. And we say that the change in the weather is what was needed. In reality it is a change in ourselves we need—a stronger purpose, a renewed energy sufficient to carry us ahead, a bigger vision which will give us this strength and energy.

Sit by yourself out of doors a while. Look at the far-off horizon, listen to the ripple of a continuously-flowing stream, enjoy the chatter of the birds high up in the trees, and then let your eyes wander to the shrubs and flowers far enough away from you so they appear perfect. Everything will be beautiful—inspiring. Of course around you there is soil—mud perhaps—; tiny ants chase over your shoes; worms appear from under the leaves; a fat slimy snail crawls slowly toward the rotting log on which you are seated. But don't look at them. Keep your larger vision and the tired, low feeling will soon disappear.

—M. S.

A Word of Commendation

Since the Emerald has felt free to criticize the plans for Junior Week-end, it is only fair that a word of appreciation and commendation be extended to the committee and to the class through the columns of the paper. This year's program was probably better arranged and more smoothly conducted than ever before, for which the general chairman and his subordinates should be given due credit.

It is hoped that this year's experiences may be placed at the hands of those responsible next year, and that the program can be made somewhat more simple. It is hoped that the type of preppers will continue to improve, and that the number of guests will be held down to reasonable limits. It is to the advantage of the University to reserve more time for the display of educational facilities.

The Juniors have made the event a success and they deserve the commendation of the student body.

OREGON GRAD IS ON WAY TO JUNGLES OF AFRICA

Claire Holdredge Will Work in Diamond Mines Two Years

Three weeks' wait in Brussels has lengthened the three months required to take him to an indefinite destination in the African jungle, Clair P. Holdredge reports. Holdredge, an Oregon graduate, writes of his difficulties, to Ian Campbell, graduate student in geology. Holdredge has obtained a position in diamond mines in the heart of Africa, and will stay there two years.

He sailed from Brussels on June 16, after lingering three weeks in Brussels when the boat on which he had booked passage was sold.

Speaking of the coming trip, Holdredge says: "You should see the amount of baggage I have. There are 13 pieces of personal baggage, including a bathtub, on easy chair and an iron hat box. I fancy I will make quite a procession going through the jungles. It will take at least 15 packs to carry it all."

After sailing 20 days from Brussels, Holdredge will reach the mouth of the Congo. He will then proceed up the river and land at Tshikopa within a month. Directions as to his final destination will then be given him.

The language of the blacks has its bad points, he writes. "I am having a great time trying to learn enough of the native language to enable me to go through the Congo. I have a small grammar containing a 300-word vocabulary, but it is pure memory work. There is no way of tying the words to anything, since it is unlike any language I have tried to study before.

However all tense and declension is ignored, which makes it more simple." Holdredge is optimistic about liking the country. He will not return to the United States before three years.

CHARLES RAY AT CASTLE TODAY

Setting a thief to catch a thief, becomes, with slightly reversed English, the lot that overtakes Charles Ray in his latest film triumph, "Alias Julius Caesar," at the Castle, last day today. Cast as Billy Barnes, one of society's leading aspirants at the exclusive country club he finds himself, through a run of unfortunate circumstances, regarded as the confederate of the sneak thief who has been preying upon society functions in the neighborhood. Charles' antics, when he learns of his plight, are the height of satirical comedy.

TO A CERTAIN MR. LANE

It is in black humility that I pen to you this humble apology. I am wrong, sir, I have committed the unpardonable crime of standing on the side of the ignorant majority; of believing in such fol-de-rol as the fabled "Spirit of Oregon"; of writing an editorial for poor old mangled Lemmy concerning a student union building for the perpetuation of the mystical bunk and the preservation of the spirit of friendship that has ever been a part of this misguided institution.

Forgive me. Only permit me to play the part of a second Aeschines, praising to the ethereal heights the oration of the great Demosthenes who defeated me.

I was much amused by your subtle caption: "All Lemon. No Punch." It was quite splendid, Mr. Lane. Do you know, I thought up a silly little one myself; viz: "A Punch at Some Lemons"—meaning of course, those people who have soured of life in all its copious forms and idiosyncracies. It was utterly absurd, of course, and somewhat nasty; so I shall refrain from using it.

"A pickling place for Oregon Spirit!" Really, who don't you write for Lemon Punch? That was clever. With your assistance, and the aid of the first column in the Sunday Emerald, perhaps the Limped Lemon Punch can sneak out of its rut.

You speak of the remarkable similarity of my editorial to the late Liberty Loan propaganda. Surely it was like it. How can I help it? Don't you know, that I am the man who used to write that stuff for old Uncle Samuel during "the late bellie delirium?" Meekly I suggest that the poor Liberty loan stuff did at least get the money. Of course that wasn't its purpose, now was it, Mr. Lane?

It is a shame to be as ignorant as I; but still I remain unconvinced. Perhaps I'll have to go on forever believing in such ghosts—you see how nicely I am learning to use your style of pun—Where was I? Oh, yes—believe that friendship for the mass of one's associates is a boon to one's own happiness. Perhaps I shall forever long for a place to make and perpetuate these worthless friendships we find here at Oregon.

I am sorry I am so ignorant. Yet I do not stand alone. There are two thousand or more of us here in this little college who believe in such silly things. Won't you pity us, Sir? My mind is wandering, Mr. Lane. That is a way it has. This crazy idea just slipped into it. Really I can't conceive what possible connection it might have, yet anyhow, here it is. Do you remember that childish game we used to play?—That one about the "Wife choose the child"? I think it ended like this: "The cheese stands alone!" R. GENE WHITTEN.

WOMEN WIN GOLF MATCH

Dr. Stuart and Miss Perkins Victors in Second of Series;

After playing 21 holes, Dr. Bertha Stuart and Miss Mary Perkins won the women's match in the tri-city golf tournament in Eugene, that is being held between Salem, Corvallis, and Eugene. The two faculty members were tied on 18 holes by Mrs. Harry Olinger and Mrs. Oliver Locke so that an extra hole was played, the score again being tied two more holes were played, Dr. Stuart and Miss Perkins scoring on the twenty-first.

The lowest medal score for 18 holes was made by Dr. Stuart at 100. The third and final match of the series will be held next week-end at Salem.

SUMMER SESSION PLANS TOLD IN NEW PAMPHLET

Faculty Will Consist Mostly of Regular Instructors

The official pamphlet of the nineteenth annual summer session of the University of Oregon is now out, and plans for courses to be offered both in Eugene and at the Portland Extension division are complete.

Registration for the campus summer session will be on Wednesday, June 27, beginning at eight o'clock in the morning. Classes to begin the following Thursday. The session is to extend through six weeks, final examinations to be held on August fourth. However, after this time the library and laboratories will be open for students wishing to remain for research work, or special study. Throughout the summer session emphasis is to be placed on courses of specialized, graduate, and advanced character, although all students wishing to take courses will find a complete elementary curricula.

The summer faculty will consist largely of regular instructors, including also a number of professors from other states. The acting dean of the graduate school, Dr. Edmund S. Conklin, will be on the campus during the first two weeks of the summer session, and subsequently throughout the session. Among those from other colleges are William J. Cooper, superintendent of schools in Fresno, California, who will instruct in the school of education, O. J. Johnson, assistant director of the Bureau of Research, St. Paul, Minnesota, also of the education department, Ethel Sawyer, director of training courses, Portland public library, and Charles Huntington Whitman, professor of English, Rutgers college.

The social life of the University is continued throughout the hot summer months, and recreation such as tennis, golf, hiking and week-end outings are planned by the summer students. The summer version of "Lemmy," the "Summer Breeze," will again be in print, also the "Summer Sun," put out by the journalism students, will again appear.

The regular courses of the Extension division will be offered this summer, and many University students residing in Portland will take advantage of the opportunity to continue their year's campus work. Nine term hours of University credits may be earned during the summer, and graduate credits may be earned in some departments by special arrangement.

The Magnolia Petroleum Building, Dallas, Texas. ALFRED C. BOSSOM, Architect. Drawn by Hugh Ferriss

"Sheer Height"

THE American business building represents a distinct and national architectural style when its design frankly emphasizes its sheer height and outwardly expresses the inner facts of its construction. The tall buildings which stand as monuments throughout the country to the vision of our architects and the skill of our engineers have, in the gigantic profiles which they rear against the sky, the true American spirit of aspiration and progress toward even greater achievements.

Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.
