Athletic Prospects Are Bright

Athletics at Oregon are closed for another year. From the standpoint of victories won the year has not been successful. Save in football, where the Webfoot eleven tied for the Northwest conference championship, and basketball, in which sport the Webfoot five made a game fight for the pennant, Oregon had rather tough going. The track team lost all its engagements; in baseball Oregon was able to win but three games in 18 starts; in wrestling all matches were lost and in tennis Oregon finished at the bottom, yet in spite of the disasters of the current season and of other seasons in the near background, the immediate athletic future looks very rosy.

In football, despite the fact that many tried and true wearers of the most prized of all Oregon athletic emblems—the football letter—have played their last on the grid for the Lemon-Yellow, prospects for a winning team were never better. In line and backfield alike there is an abundance of excellent material to fill in,—material of proven ability. An ideal schedule has been arranged by the graduate manager and Oregon looms next fall as a contender for the championship in football.

In basketball and baseball prospects were never better. Men are enrolled in the University at the present time skilled in both these sports and men of such marked ability that championships are decided possibilities. These men are in school now and if they remain eligible Oregon's performance on court and diamond next year will threaten the supremacy of all comers. But that part of the proposition has ever been the "nigger" in Oregon's woodpile. Keeping men eligible—that is the problem of Oregon's successful competition in all sports. Men have been here and then are gone; men who might have rounded out championship teams or won points in track, but many of those men have never materialized, they have never competed for Oregon because of poor scholarship.

The situation in track this year was a typical one. In January Hayward had a team together that might have given any aggregation real competition. In May, with the coming of the meets, an ill balanced team minus several stars took the field.

Oregon lost where she might have won because a few men did not realize that after all scholarships, even though it be but a fashion, must take precedence over everything else while one is at college.

Another thing that keeps men who are entitled to represent their alma mater off court or gridiron in that inane and irresponsible ruling of the Pacific Coast conference, which is said to be noticed or obeyed only by Oregon. This rule, which has kept Oregon men on the sidelines when they might well have been in the game, requires that a man to be eligible for conference competition must have five earned hours for every failure. A few errors in judgment in picking courses in the freshman year for a good athlete who is perhaps but an average student might keep him on the sidelines for two long years even though he secured nothing, we'll say below a III, after his freshman year. If, for example, he lost 25 hours during his first year, which many people not athletes have done, he would have to make 125 hours before participation. The four-fifths rule is an old bit of legislation and a poor one. Why it was brought back to life passeth all understanding.

College Clippings

Cheaters Names Will Be Printed—Names of all students who are found guilty of cheating in college work at O. A. C., will have their names printed. The penalty will be part of the punishment imposed in all cases where recommendation is made by the committee to promote honesty in academic work.

Students Charged with Kidnapping Negro—Three students at the University of Indiana are charged with kidnapping a negro member of the university band to prevent him from playing with the organization at a Purdue-Indiana football game.

Frosh "Romeo" Woos 397 Co-eds—A frosh "Romeo" at the University of Southern California admits that he has proposed to 397 co-eds. His system, he states, is to note carefully every girl who smiles at him, get her name and address at the registrar's office and then call at her home and put the question. He has proposed to at least one girl in every house and declares that sorority houses are mere matrimonial bureaus in that institution. Women enter the university for the main purpose of getting a husband, he declared.

DOROTHY DALTON AT REX TODAY "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" is an adage that is especially applicable to a motion picture production unit on location. And the Irvin Willat company, making the Paramount picture, "Fog Bound," which is playing at the Rex today, was no exception to the rule. Between scenes, the fishing fever caught hold of Miss Dalton, and her spare moments found her with David Powell, her leading man and the other players seated on the banks of some nearby stream trying her luck at angling. But everyone knows how nice and slippery are the shores of these jungle lakes, and one day, before anyone could act, the star found herself paddling about merrily in four feet of water.

THREE SENIORS SIGNIFY INTENT TO GIVE ORATION

Kelsey Guilfoil, Leith Abbott and Paul Patterson Will Appear in Contest for Beekman Prize

The Failing-Beekman orations are scheduled to be given on the night of June 22. In past years these have formed one of the biggest events of Commencement week at the University, but so far this year but three seniors have definitely signified that they intend to compete in the contest, but it is expected that more will compete. These three are Kelsey Guilfoil, Leith Abbott and Paul Patterson.

There are two prizes offered. The first prize is known as the Failing prize and amounts to $150. It is derived from the annual income from a $25,000 investment made for the University about 1890 by the Hon. Henry Failing of Portland. The second prize is $100 and is known as the Beekman prize. It is derived in a similar manner from an investment of about $16,000 made for the University by the Hon. C. C. Beekman of Jacksonville, Oregon.

Last year Elaine Cooper, at present assisting in the public speaking department, won the Failing prize, and Wilbur Hoyt the Beekman prize.

The contest is open to members only of the graduating class.

The president, president-elect, vice-president, and his successor, and the rest of the throng on down the list, including the yell king and his successor, were present. About 35 students together with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Benefiel enjoyed the hospitality of the Alpha Chi Omegas.

FLORENCE WALSH WINS BENNETT ESSAY PRIZE

Clarence Eagy and Leonard Lerwill Get Mention

The Bennett prize of $20 for the best essay on the subject of the principles of free government was awarded to Florence Walsh, of Helena, Montana. Miss Walsh is a sophomore in journalism in the University.

The title of Miss Walsh's essay was "The Importance of Uniform Marriage and Divorce Laws."

Leonard Lerwill, a junior in journalism in the University and Clarence Eagy, a junior in education were the other two contestants. Lerwill chose as the subject for his essay "Limiting the Supreme Court's Power," and Eagy used as the title of his theme "Dangers to the First Institution—the Home." The subject matter of Eagy's and Miss Walsh's essays was the same.

Miss Walsh's essay won the unanimous vote of the judges who were: Justice Lawrence T. Harris of the State Supreme Court, Richard W. Montague, a Portland attorney and Alfred Powers of the University extension division. Lerwill and Eagy tied for honorable mention. George King won the prize last year.

The money for the Bennett prizes is derived from the interest of a gift of $400 by Philo Sherman Bennett of New Haven, Connecticut. Several colleges and universities throughout the country have the Bennett prizes.

COST DATA IS GATHERED

Questionnaires Are Mailed to 8,042 Retail Merchants of State

Questionnaires are being mailed to 8,042 retailers in Oregon by the bureau of business research of the graduate department school of business administration, for the purpose of obtaining data on the cost of doing retail business. The blanks are being sent to retailers in every possible line of merchandise from agricultural implements and garage supplies to women's wear. Every retailer is being sent a questionnaire, regardless of whether he is a member of the Retail Merchants association or not.

An office has been fitted up in room 10 of the Commerce building from where the work of the bureau of business research is being carried on.

The mailing of the requests for confidential data is the result of a request made at the convention of the Oregon Retail Merchant's association on the campus last winter. It is the first activity of the newly organized bureau of business research, although it is the plan of the school to extend the service of the bureau later on to wholesale business and manufacturing plants. For the present, however, the retail costs will occupy the attention of the research bureau.

DINNER DANCE AT OSBURN BY U. H. S. SENIORS

Class of 25 Graduate; Miss Wakefield Acting as Advisor

The palm room of the Osburn hotel was the scene of the dinner dance given by the senior class of the University high school Saturday night. Covers were laid for 24, which included the 22 seniors and two guests, Miss Ethel Wakefield, the class adviser, and Ben Maxwell.

The table was decorated in the class colors, pink and lavender with favors of corsages and boutonniers. Places were marked with clever cards, with pictures of boys and girls in quaint costumes.

To show their appreciation of her work for them, the class presented Miss Wakefield with a pair of lusterware candlesticks in rich orange shades, with matching candles of black and orange.

Those who will graduate with the class of '23 are: Robin Jones, Alice Armantrout, Maybrey Strong, Bertha Ashby, Bertha Hanks, Charlotte Platt, Florence Potampa, Virginia Gray, Edna English, Gertrude Gum, Louie Maxwell, Ora Olson, Helen Shinn, May Tolle, Florence Arnsworthy, Hugh Lynch, Emmett Jones, Robert Giffen, Alfons Korn, Hubert Yearian, Donald McCormick, Ted Rueh, Clarence Bradley, Sylvester Wingard and J. SORORITY NAMED IN SUIT

$3000 Indemnity Asked by Woman for Injuries Received from Accident

Alpha Delta Pi sorority was yesterday made defendant in a damage suit, filed by Mrs. Anna Bohlman. The amount which Mrs. Bohlman asks is $3000 for injuries received when she "fell into an unguarded roadway, sustaining broken bones and other injuries."

According to one of the girls, the accident occurred when Mrs. Bohlman was acting as a substitute cook for the sorority. At that time the girls did all they could in the way of helping her and thought the incident closed until their attention was called to the impending suit.

Mrs. Bohlman alleges "carelessness and negligence on the part of members for failure to place guards or other protective devices where the accident occurred," were the causes for the mishap.

BARTHELMESS STARS AT CASTLE

Richard Barthelmess has given to the screen another classic of the silent drama. Greater even than his former masterpiece, "Tol'able David," is his new contribution, "The Bright Shawl," at the Castle Theatre today last day. Barthelmess has the role of a young American, Charles Abbott, who, on a visit to Havana, becomes so tremendously interested in the cause of the downtrodden Cubans that he decides to espouse it. Dorothy Gish contributes perhaps the finest screen performance of her career as La Clavel.
