The Co-Op Issue—Deceased

Except that a financial statement is still to come from M. F. McClain, manager of the University Co-Operative store, the flurry over the Co-Op is a thing of the past as far as the Emerald is concerned.

The only complete statement based on fact has come from the Co-Op. It was fair and frank, and in the paragraph where Mr. McClain promised that the housing relations will be maintained no matter who manages the enterprise, it was actually magnanimous. He generously shouldered the entire burden for the rooters' caps controversy when part of the blame might have been placed elsewhere. The technicalities of the "student owned" complex were also explained. The placing of these facts before the student body should silence a great deal of criticism which has arisen through lack of knowledge. Statements on the other side have been frankly based on hearsay.

After reading that statement, if there is still dissatisfaction, let the dissatisfied ones propose a remedy. Nothing will be gained by a mere stirring up, so let the criticism be constructive. Remember, Co-Op membership ticket-holders have the right to elect a board to pick any manager they choose.

One fault has been that the manager has failed to keep new generations of students informed of his status in regard to the store. He is paying for this neglect now. Let the wave of criticism which has just broken be a lesson to him.

Some day the Co-op store should be made a student body affair. A. S. U. O. officials admit that the deal is too big to swing until the new student union is completed. Until then Co-op membership ticket holders owe it to themselves to take an active enough interest in the affairs of the store to investigate rumors by going directly to the books of the manager and then acting accordingly.

The Emerald will be glad to print suggestions for the betterment of the present situation. Unless such constructive articles appear the incident is closed.

Last night we watched a handful of soccer players working out on the field below the Woman's building. A week before a great many more had turned out. There was only one goal post. Soon the rain will set in and a few more players will drop out. There will never be a sign of outside encouragement and in a few weeks the rough, sloping ground to which the soccer squad has been relegated will be deserted. Then soccer will be dead for another year.

SOME HIGH POINTS IN OREGON EMERALD OF OCTOBER 18, 1922.

Huntington informs football fans that a weakened team must be taken to Pendleton to meet Whitman in Friday's game.

Senior-leap week dates which infringe on campus rulings are being fixed up by Dean Fox. The Dean said: "Don't get down hearted girls or be disappointed. You won't have to break those precious dates as everything will be arranged for by next week."

The Co-op announces the installation of a root beer keg and a barmaid.

"Alice - Sit - By - Fire" will be staged in Guild hall tonight by the University players.

Scholastic standards at the University are rising according to Carlton Spencer, registrar.

MEN TURN OUT WELL FOR TENNIS MATCHES

Coach Fahl Hopes to Get Lineup From Tournament on Varsity Team Material

From the sixteen men who are turning out for the varsity tennis tournament this fall, Coach Rudolph Fahl hopes to get a lineup on the possible varsity material for next year. The tournament has been going on for the last week, and over half the men who signed up have played games. The tournament is so arranged that a loser is not necessarily eliminated in his first game and can be matched again. In all probability the winners of the tournament this fall will stand the biggest chance of making the team next spring. Several of the matches have not been played. Coach Fahl urges that these be played off as soon as possible.

The two letter men in tennis who will be on the team this year are Frank Rice and Harry Meyers. They are supervising the tournament, and are the only members of last year's team who are in school. Because of this three places are open on the team.

Matches played so far are:
Slattery won from Gamboa—6-0 and 6-4.
Mead won from Brooks—6-4; 5-7 and 6-4.
McPhillips won from Husted—4-6; 6-4 and 6-2.
Okerberg won from Wilson 6-0 and 6-0.
Lynch won from Brille—6-2 and 7-5.
The men turning out should watch the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium for the men whom they are to play.

RARE OLD BOOKS ADDED TO LIBRARY COLLECTION

Copies from Famous English Originals Purchased

Several rare old books, copies of original works of famous authors, have recently been added to the University library.

"The fact that a good many old English families were exterminated or poverty stricken during the world war has made it possible to buy these rare copies," explained H. C. Howe, professor of English, who is especially interested in the books.

"The Works of Ben Jonson," published in 1611, is one of the most interesting of the collection. Copies of the first folio of the great dramatist are said rarely to be found in such fine shape. The prologue, "To Every Man in His Humor," contains allusions to several of Shakespeare's plays.

"Miscellanies in Verse and Prose" by Henry Fielding, was printed for the author in 1743. There are three volumes containing his early poems, essays and the plays, "Eurydice" and "A Journey from This World to the Next," in which Shakespeare is represented. The works of Samuel Daniel, printed in 1602, is said to be the second collected edition in which the "Six Booke of the Civill Warres" was published. The arms of Queen Elizabeth are designed on the cover of the book. His poems, "The Complaint of Rosamond" and "Delia" both appear in the volume.

There are two plays by Nat Lee. "The Massacre of Paris," a tragedy, was printed in 1690 and acted at the Theater Royal. "Mithridates, King of Pontus," was published in 1693. In the prologue of this tragedy the author says, "I have endeavour'd in this tragedy to mix Shakespeare with Fletcher."

Some Shakespeare's comedies, histories and tragedies, published at the same time of the original copies, are also in the collection. In these there are seven plays that were never printed in folio before. They are very large, being 14 1-2 by 9 inches.

These seven Shakespearean plays are "Pericles," "Prince of Tyre," "The London Prodigal," "The London Prodigal," "The Tragedy of Loerine," "A Yorkshire Tragedy," "The Puritan Widow," "Sir John Oldcastle," and "Lord Cromwell."

Poems by Michael Drayton, published in 1630, completed the collection. These books will be kept in the library vault, and although they are too valuable to be given general circulation, they may be obtained by special permission.

"The New Architecture"

A DISTINCTLY new tendency is apparent in architectural thought and design today. Architects are designing in masses—the great silhouette, the profile of the building has become of far greater importance than its detail. There is a new vigor and ruggedness even in buildings which are conventionally classic in their detail. Masses mount upward, supporting the tower, accentuating its height. The new architecture is tending toward great structures rather than multiplicity of detail. Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.
