The New Homecoming

Student and alumni Homecoming officials are doing a great piece of work in preparation for next week's home-again gathering. They are to be complimented upon the manner in which they threw overboard certain worthless parts of the usual program and changed things in such a way that the 1924 festivities will probably surpass those of past years in quality as well as in attendance.

No longer are the graduates and ex-students to be mere onlookers in a series of events planned by, and to a great extent for, students. They are to be given an active part in the actual program of the week-end as well as in the early preparations.

The alumni office reports more Homecoming inquiries than ever before and great interest in the novel adoption ceremonies which were put into effect last year. Literally hundreds of alumni of other institutions will assemble on the Oregon campus and take part in the event. The loyalty they will feel for Oregon will be second only to that for their respective alma maters and will be a factor which will create much real friendship toward this institution.

"Unite to fight for Oregon"—that's the idea.

Oregon's freshman men have not learned one important lesson and the evidence of their lack of knowledge was very evident at Thursday's assembly. Respect for our University songs has made it traditional that the student body remain standing during the singing of the first stanza of "Mighty Oregon." Departure from the hall is supposed to begin with the line, "And then we'll march, march on down the field—." The impressiveness of the singing was ruined by the noisy breakup of the boys in the gallery. Besides, the crowding ahead of freshmen before upperclassmen is not entirely fitting.

The annual sophomore informal will be held tonight with the usual rush of preparing for the event. Next week another group of students will sacrifice their time to prepare for the Homecoming dance. The scheduling of two major social events within so short a period of time was unwise to say the least.

FLASH VIEWS OF THE DOINGS OF COLLEGE FOLK ELSEWHERE

Five University of Washington boys are earning their way through college as taxi drivers for Seattle auto transportation companies. A number of students are also employed as chauffeurs in private families.

Owing to the numerous mistakes made in registration of previous years, the registrar of the University of Cincinnati requires a one-inch photograph of each student.

Due to the fact that the ballots cast in the election of junior class officers last week at Wisconsin far outnumbered the voters, a new election is to be held this week.

Announcement has recently been made of the establishment of a college under the auspices of the Ku Klux Klan within 15 miles of Princeton. The name of the college which has been founded at Zeraphat, New Jersey, is Alma.

Due to a heavy wind resulting in choppy waters, a Yale freshman crew was swamped in midstream during practice. While the shell was settling under the surface, the men swam to the coach's launch.

The Stanford University boxing team will tour Australia this summer. A definite program of meets with Australia teams will be completed later.

SEATS FOR HOMECOMING GAME AVAILABLE AT CO-OP

Students are urged to exchange their student body tickets for tickets to the Homecoming game at the Co-op, as soon as possible. There will be no charge for these seats.

hopes to keep it in shape for play the entire year. There is one man working full time on the course keeping it in some sort of condition for the many college students and faculty members who have enthusiastically taken up the sport. On one afternoon last week over 15 people were counted on the course by one of the faculty in the two hours that he was playing.

The course is free to everyone who wishes to use it. All that the department asks is that the users take some sort of care of it.

Up to date, 50 men have been taught the game and 18 women. The indoor driving net in the men's gymnasium is free to all those who have paid their locker fees, and free instruction will be given between 4 and 6 every afternoon.

This is one of the best all around sports that the department of physical education has to offer. The regular gymnasium men take it outside of class time, physical ability men elect the course, it is prescribed for the restricted exercise men and it is taken up by many of the faculty.

Faculty men can make use of the driving net at any time during the day. If enough interest is shown among the faculty the department intends to set aside an hour when they can get individual instruction. However, they may use the net at all times.

The department has as a golf instructor Meryl Shaver, formerly a professional of Roseburg, Oregon. He is now an undergraduate student in philosophy.

SOME HIGH POINTS IN OREGON EMERALD, NOVEMBER 17, 1922

As a send-off for the Oregon Aggie mix, to be staged on Bell field in Corvallis tomorrow, a big rally is to be held on the campus this evening.

At a meeting of the executive council last night, vendors of programs and confections were prohibited from exploiting the campus during football games.

Oregon rooters at the game Saturday will be inspired by the presence of the varsity band.

Doughnut handball contests will start immediately.

Word was received on the campus today that Helen McDonald, a graduate of the University with the class of 1919 and a major in the school of journalism, is doing feature work on the San Francisco Bulletin.

HERE the architects envisioned a picture, saw the modern office building in terms of the great art of the Middle Ages—and the result is a demonstration that the utilitarian structure, the modern office building of commerce may be as picturesque as it is practical. Vision, imagination, courage and practical ingenuity in stylistic adaptation have enabled the architects of this country to astonish the world with their achievements of today and their promise of tomorrow.

Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.

Unlimited Power

at the Bidding of the Driver

When you are on the open road, speeding through villages, and past countryside,—carried along by the powerful motor that responds splendidly to your slightest whim,—sweeping up hills, climbing to a faster speed or gliding along quietly—always without the slightest effort—then comes the realization that Nash leads the world in motor car value.

Such performance can be gained only by the overhead valve system and Nash engineers have perfected this to the last degree. In the overhead arrangement, the combustion chamber, being placed directly over the piston, can be made more compact and of smaller area than is possible in the L head or T head designs. In short, it means more power for less gasoline. Nash goes beyond this. The valve mechanism is automatically lubricated, eliminating any metal with metal contact. The entire motor is encased, keeping it free from dust and any foreign substance.

Performance Counts
