Home Again to Oregon

"Home again," the glad cry which wells up in the heart of every returned son or daughter of Old Oregon is duplicated in its intensity in the feelings of 2224 undergraduates who are now citizens of the Eugene campus.

A great many Oregon students of classes long since graduated from the institution were directly responsible for a great many of the improvements which have come about in recent years.

The spirit of appreciation of the advantages enjoyed by the present student body because of the work of those who have gone before us is a big factor in prompting the homecoming idea.

Although Oregon is nearing the status of a big University, the alums still find the same brand of fight that has made Oregon mighty and that has kept alive such traditions as that of the "Hello."

Outward changes are necessary to progress, but Oregon students are still taught the essentials of real Oregon spirit that came into being when the campus population was less than two hundred.

"Unite to Fight for Oregon"

When the whistle blows at 2:30 this afternoon on Hayward field, a field made famous by great battles and great players—two crowds of rooters will thrill as they have seldom thrilled before.

Despite the long string of Oregon victories there will be no over-confidence on the part of Lemon-Yellow supporters. The spirit of support which will back Shy's men in every play will be a spirit that realizes that a strong team must be downed before Oregon can nail another Beaver skin to the flagstaff.

This is a year when pride in Oregon spirit should be at its highest. The season has not been particularly successful for us, yet the men are fighting as never before.

Let that spirit of fight ever be linked with the name of Oregon, and today when the Beaver cries for victory let every man and woman "unite to fight for Oregon."

Closely associated with Oregon and its traditions is the character and personality of our grand old man—Dr. John Straub. Despite his recent illness the love for his boys and girls has brought him back to the campus for the Homecoming.

REMEMBER OREGON SPIRIT

To the Editor: The Oregon spirit, as the older men on the campus know it, requires every Oregon student to be a gentleman and a sportsman. It wins football games by clean playing and clean rooting. It treats opponents with courtesy, applauds when they play brilliantly, and all the while it inspires Oregon men to triumph through sheer merit.

"U" HIGH GIVES PLAY

Dramatic Club Gaining Proficiency For Big February Production

A short one act play, "My Lord in Livery," was given at the University high school yesterday afternoon. The members of the cast belong to a dramatic club which is divided into six groups, each group giving one short play.

Latest reports emanating from the office of the registrar show that 254 members of the senior class have applied for degrees.

Race suicide among the educated classes will ultimately cause the downfall of civilization, according to B. F. Irvine, editor of the Oregon Journal, who spoke at assembly yesterday.

At a dinner held at Dean Walker's home last night a cane was presented to Colonel Leader by former members of his officers' training camp.

Forty men under the direction of Captain James Meek are turning out for an additional drill hour each week.

COE COLLEGE MAN SETS RECORD FOR DROP KICK

Pence Kicks Ball 55 Yards for Field Goal in Drake-Coe Grid-Iron Contest

Coe College.—John Pence, Coe College back, made a 55-yard drop kick for a field goal in the Drake-Coe football game, establishing a record for drop kicks for the season.

Records show that the longest drop-kick in the history of football was made from placement by Maxwell of Princeton in the Yale game of 1882. He kicked the pigskin 65 yards. Mark Payne of Dakota Wesleyan University made the longest drop-kick last year when he booted the ball 63 yards.

Alex Andrieff has been elected an associate member of the Condon club.

HUNDREDS RETURN TO

OBAK'S ANNUAL RALLY

Old Timers Gather and Discuss Shady Past

The proverbial, traditional Homecoming spirit at Obak's Kollege last night.

Perhaps it was the slogan: "Away from the wife, Obak is the life," that brought so many back, but there were a good many among those present that had sneaked away from "the wife" just before the rally and joined the gang at Obak's regardless of later consequences.

It hasn't been a matter of "say hello first" at Obak's, for everybody is saying "hello" at the same time.

Conversations here are not being based upon higher standards of education, stocks and bonds, insurance rates, the cost of coal, Mellins food or any of the other things that one might expect from a group of died in the wool alumni.

It is Homecoming week at Obak's and the alumni know it. If you are trying to find a certain grad call 48 and ask Obak—headquarters are here—there's a rally going on 24 hours of the day at the Kollege that all alumni return to.

UNHAPPY GRAD

LOSES HEART BUT FINDS JOY

"Red O'Flanagan, '05 stood silent on the street in front of Obak's Kollege and looked things over; he was thoughtful and reflective. Slowly he turned his head and gazed up Willamette, gazed long and steadily; then, just as deliberately he looked down Willamette. His mood was plainly sorrowful, lonely and reminiscent.

"Fat" Brown, '06 approached him and a greeting followed. It was the usual sort of greeting that embodied all of the various exchanges of confidences that men who have not met for years will exchange. The wives, the kids, the price of hay, the dope on the game, the bonfire, Jimmy Gilbert, the income tax—all of these were included, but still O'Flanagan maintained a downcast attitude.

Brown, sensing the situation, inquired. "Red" failed to reply for a time, but finally, "Oh, I'm getting old I guess, but I cannot help but think how things have changed—there's nothing the same as it used to be, the buildings seem different, the kids are strangers, the town has grown, the profs are more reserved, the—"

"You old fossil", cried Brown, and he grabbed him by the arm and dragged him into Obak's Kollege. "Downhearted are you? Homesick and think your old? Well, put this cigar in your mouth, grab one of those cues and I will show you that college life has not changed one darned bit and that no matter how old a man may get that Obak's Kollege revives him."
