PADDED FOR FRAY

Hayward Devises Peculiar and Efficient Apparatus for Protection of Men

EAGLE EYE COWS MEN

Bill as Trainer and Story
Teller of Squad Keeps
Fighting Blood at Top

The members of the football squad will report at the gymnasium today at 12:30 o'clock. Now, they won't go up there to hear pep talks or to brush up their clothes in preparation to appearing before the assembled crowd; but they go for one purpose only and that is, to get bandaged and padded for the fray.

Bill Hayward has long ago won his laurels as a conditioner and as a demon doctor for putting injured men in fighting shape; but very little has been told of his harness making ability. He has a dozen different protections for old Joe Charley Horse, ranging from little rubber doughnuts to tin-covered shields; and his hip pads—well, he makes some of the females of 1860 look youthful and slender compared to one or two of his padded linemen who are protecting bruised hips.

Has Variety of Tools
Bill has a laboratory for scientific experiment that contains an assortment of tools resembling the mixed kits of a burglar, doctor and a shoe-maker. When a new problem confronts him, be it a boil in a seemingly unprotectable place, or cracked ribs or cauliflower ears or a sprained toe, he begins engineering a means of protection.

Now Mr. Hayward doesn't resemble Mr. Edison in his ability to do with out sleep—unless he is hunting—but he has several times put in a good share of the evening devising and constructing creations to meet the next day's needs. There was one time in 1916 that the present line coach, Bart Spellman, unjointed a shoulder just before one of the critical games of the season. In those days Oregon didn't have so many subs that she could afford to let even one good man grace the bench, so Bill went to work.

The next day Bart appeared on the field sporting a creation of wood and iron that made one side appear as an exaggerated Fitzsimmons development. It served to protect his wounded shoulder and became an offensive weapon of such power that Bart continued to wear it until the Harvard coach protested against it and the officials asked him to use a more humane type of protection.

Makes New Shoes
Bill has devised special mud-plowing cleats for the linemen that have

AGGIES DECLARED
FIGHTING DEMONS

Rutherford's Men Prepare to Throw Vast Strength in Fray Against Oregon

HARD FIGHT EXPECTED

Although All Dope Favors
Varsity, Beavers Sure
They Will Down Old Foe

By Clifton Booth
Sports Editor, O. A. C. Barometer
The Beavers have found themselves! From a bunch of men, playing mechanically, seemingly not over-secure of themselves, the team has changed into a group of hard-hitting, raw meat eating, fast going demons. The team is composed of a number of good players. Every one of them is above the average in ability. But in the games they have played this year, games resulting in losses for the Aggies with the exception of the 3 to 3 tie game with the Cougars, Coach Rutherford's men have seemed to be listening for some hidden voice to bid them play better ball than they had before.

Just before the game with the Cougars, every man on the team heard that voice. It seemed to come to each individually and every one of the men on the squad has accepted the trust imposed upon him by that voice, the voice of his Alma Mater, to throw himself into the coming fray against the ancient enemy, Oregon, with an abandon never before exhibited.

No Boasts Made
Each player has made a compact with himself. Oregon must be defeated. Despite the record of former years, seasons in which the Lemon-Yellow has emerged victoriously, the present team is firm in the conviction that this is an O. A. C. year. No boasts are being made that the Orange and Black will snow the enemy under. Everybody realizes that if the local colors float above those of the opposition, it will be only after a terrific battle and by the closest of scores.

But the Aggie warriors found themselves in the game against Washington State. Going into the game with the Cougars doped to snow them under, the locals fought off every advance upon their goal line in one of the greatest exhibitions of fight in the history of football.

DOPE POINTS TO AGS
IN CROSS COUNTRYOregon Strength Unknown;
Vandals Strong

Oregon enters the cross-country race as an unknown quantity, perhaps the underdog. With no veterans of caliber, the varsity is going against two veteran teams from the Aggie and Vandal institutions. The Vandals have some fast men who have never been seen in action here and the Aggies have as a nucleus most of the men who romped to victory over the Lemon-Yellow last year, namely, Walker, Graves, and Daniels.

Idaho has a veteran outfit. The Vandals arrived Friday and had a chance to get used to the course.

Since the graduation of Walkley and Koeppe, the varsity hill and dale team has had no first place men. Walkley never lost a first place during his time at Oregon, but the var-
