STYLED FOR YOUNG MEN

Famous Gold Diggers of History
100 B. C. Cleopatra
The first of the big league shekel sirens.
100 A. D. Thais
Second of the well known human cash registers.
1492 Queen Elizabeth
Who swiped the key to the Royal Cellar when King Ferdie was pounding his ear and lifted the crown jewels and the King's favorite Ingersoll to help a sea-going friend out.
1600 Empress Catherine
Like her intriguing descendant, the Gold Digger of today, Catherine dug while her shovel was sharp and the digging was good.
1680 Nell Gwynn
Who used her wiles so successfully on Charles the Twice, that the national anthem soon became, "You Got to be Good to Our Little Nell".
Camille was the original gold digger with a nasty cough. She coughed her way to success and put the Smith Brothers into business. But there came a day when she got into a merry mix-up and tried to give the air to her little friend Armand. This made the atmosphere so cold that the dear lady coughed her way past St. Peter and got a solid gold harp next to Little Eva who was plunking away on a gold-plated one.
1923
These babies all had their in-nings, but following the seventh, we can all stretch and take a look at pretty little Jerry Lamar, who concentrated her major operations on Little Old New York. Jerry used a pick as well as a shovel and could dig up more hats and jewelry in a day than could an energetic '49er in a lifetime.
