

COMMERCIAL POSTERS ATTRACT ATTENTION

French Collection Hung in Villard Hall

The gayly-hued posters which adorn the walls of one of the rooms in Villard hall are being viewed with a great deal of interest by faculty members and students. The posters were obtained in Paris by Miss Julia Burgess of the English department while on her trip abroad this summer, and mailed direct to Villard hall, where they have been hung for the enjoyment of those in the English department.

The posters, although of a commercial nature, are the work of artists, according to Miss Burgess. The paintings have been mixed with care and thoughtfulness. Brilliant yellows, soft tans and deep blues have been blended skillfully. The loveliest and the one with the best perspective, Miss Burgess believes to be a charming Brittany scene done in rich green, with touches of black and yellow. Another delightful one is the picture of an Elizabethan house.

The posters have been arranged with those of southern France, placed on the back wall of the room, those of northern France on the front wall, the Normandy scenes on the right side, and the Brittany and Mont Blanc scenes on the left. There are several advertising the Rome express from Paris.

In Paris these posters are framed and hung in the railroad stations and sold at the department of publicity. There is a large demand for them.

How Parker Prevents Leaking

In Ways Other Pens Cannot Follow

Read this—then try the new Parker D.Q. made for Students only, $3

GEO. S. PARKER entered the fountain pen business 31 years ago because he was able to discover the two vital remedies for leaking. They are:

1. The Parker "Lucky Curve" feed, created and patented by Mr. Parker, which induces capillary attraction, thus making a steady flow while you're writing, and draining back the unused ink when you're through.
2. The Parker "Duo-Sleeve" Cap which forms an ink-tight seal with the barrel when kept tightly screwed on.

These two engineering achievements are built in all Parker pens regardless of price. The new Parker D. Q.—the special pen made for students only—has, in addition, an extra large ring to link to your note-book, or a pocket-clip—either one included free. Also a metal girdle that reinforces the cap.

It's produced by Parker Duofold craftsmen. Its point is 14k gold, tipped with Native Iridium, polished to jewel-like smoothness. Measured by all standards, it's far the finest pen value ever produced under $5. You'll miss the newest thing out if you fail to ask for it.

Thanksgiving

—The fulfillment of nature's summer should bring with it a degree of relaxation in the heart and mind, of Man, the recipient.

—Let us make our hours over the festive board today those replete with gratitude for the rewards.

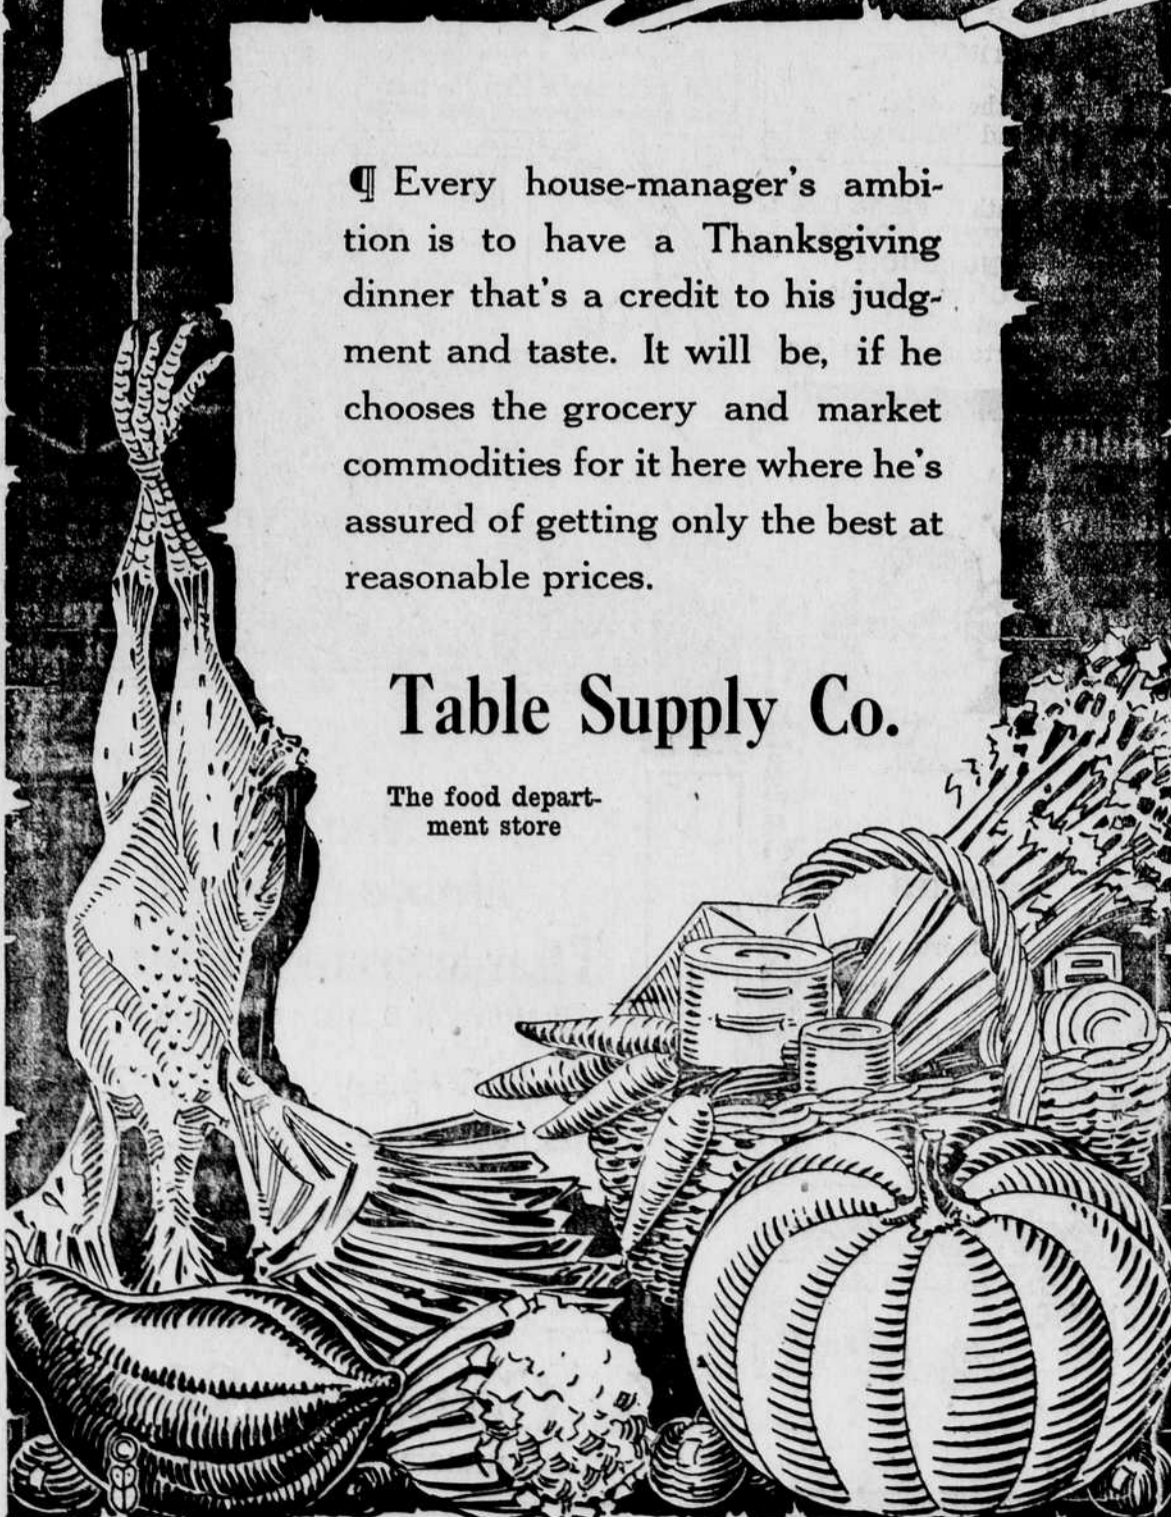

—This expression is best evoked on a full stomach and a relaxed mind.

—See that we each count over the blessings of the season now buried under the colored leaves and grasses.
