

DANCE DRAMA IS NEXT MONTH

Orchestra Will Give First Half of Program

CLASSES TO TAKE PART

Miss Lillian Stupp Directs Portion of Affair

A dance drama under the supervision of the University orchestra and the women's physical education department will be given in the armory on the night of February 14. The program will be in two divisions, the first half being given by the orchestra, and the second half by the dancing classes of Miss Lillian Stupp.

The dancing classes' program will be divided into two groups, the orchestra playing for both parts.

In the first part of the program there will be an interpretation of wedgewood china. When the curtain rises there will be nine dancers dressed in white to represent the nine muses with a background of blue. The whole effect will be the nine muses in relief on a blue background as on a piece of porcelain or on a plaque.

Four Groups Planned

There will be four groups in this part of the program. In the first group three girls will come forward, while the other six remain in the background. In the next group six girls will come to the front while the others will change positions in the background to form a different setting.

Two girls will come forward in the third group, and in the last all nine girls will come to the front. All the art work on the stage will be done by the art students in Miss Maude Kerns' art department.

The cycle of the hours will be the subject for the second part of the dancing class program. In the prologue there will be three figures in a niche in the background, one of which will be holding the hour hand. The scene will be symbolical of the passing of the hours.

Various Lights Seen

The hours of dawn, noon and twilight will all be interpreted. Girls coming in with gray scarfs interpreting the dawn of light will come in first. From then on it will be a progression of morning light.

Following dawn there will be a sudden burst of light, in which girls will come in dressed in red costumes for the call to the chase. Following this there will be seen the toilers going to the fields for work. Apollo driving the little hours to work will then be interpreted.

The noon hours will be seen when carriers take wine as refreshment to the toilers. A side number will be a scene of coquetry between a shepherd and shepherdess. Later in the afternoon the toilers will be seen bending over their sickles.

Epilogue Last Part

Twilight will be brought out by a lighting effect, in which will be seen the toilers stopping for a moment of prayer as the angelus sounds. Then will come darkness in which the will-o-the-wisps will dart here and there. The chorus of dreams will then be interpreted.

The closing part of the program seen will be the epilogue which will be the same as the prologue.

DELEGATES HOPE FOR PERMANENT PEACE

for the ills of the world, unless it be the somewhat intangible kingdom of Christ in the hearts of men, a good enough remedy, but the question of how this reign is to be a reality is almost as difficult a problem as the original one. But possibly it is for us, the students of the present generation, the educated men and women of the next, to find the solution. If these men have incited us to action their contribution has not been in vain.

Students Realize Problem

Students all over the world are coming to realize the problem is theirs to solve. Naturally opinions should differ widely on international issue and war. At the convention a small group went so far as to pledge themselves to take no active part in any war.

In commenting on this attitude the commander of the American Legion of Indianapolis scored it as radicalism of a dangerous sort.

"It is worthy of note," he said, "that half of the students who participated in this disgraceful meeting owe their allegiance to a foreign flag. Some of them openly admit they are followers of Lenin and Trotsky. How much longer are we going to open the gates of our universities to these 'crack-brained' radicals and allow them to implant their un-American doctrines in the impressionable minds of our young American students."

The writer, himself a member of the American Legion, sees no cause for any alarm because of this action on the part of a few students, though he does not agree with them that absolute pacifism is the solution. Some delegations are going back to their campuses to take a united stand against the R. O. T. C. Whether this is the proper thing to do is open for question. But it does seem irrational to talk and preach peace and the teachings of Christ in the classroom and militarism the next hour in the barracks or on the drill field.

Opportunity is Now

America has made a wonderful contribution to material progress. The opportunity is now hers to contribute to a better international order. She cannot afford to pass up this opportunity.

What can the students at the University of Oregon do? They can initiate an aggressive educational program that will study the causes of war, and then seek some possible and practicable way of eliminating these causes. If race prejudice, hatred, unsatisfactory social and economic conditions, are causes of war, let us do away with them.

If love, based on the belief in the brotherhood of man, and a Christian life that is practiced every day in the year, is a possible solution to our international problems, then by all means let us see to it that we are informed as to what Christian principles are and learn to build our lives on them. We dare not remain in ignorance of world affairs, or dodge the issue.

STUDENT COUNCIL TO INVESTIGATE AFFAIRS

until the regular A. S. U. O. election in the spring.

Since the adoption of the resolution made public yesterday by the Co-operative store in which the program outlined by the finance committee was indorsed and a willingness to make any necessary change in the by-laws signified, the matter has become a more vital question than ever. It is the purpose of the student council to bring the question directly before the students in the shape of the amendment.

Oregon Songs Discussed

There has been persistent agitation regarding the adoption of more representative Oregon songs for several years, but so far very little has been done about it. While several new songs have been adopted recently, it is the opinion of many that more could be done toward getting desirable songs for the University. While it is not the intention to do away with any of the songs in use at present, it is entirely possible that certain changes may be introduced.

HEILIG

Those who admire the thrilling dramatic suspense in "White Tiger," the Universal-Jewel world screen story at the Heilig theater, may recall that the same combination of Priscilla Dean as the star and Tod Browning as author and director was responsible for one of the most thrilling under-world plays ever screened, "Outside the Law." The latter picture exploited San Francisco's Chinatown, while "White Tiger" is laid in London and New York.

CLUB WILL BE FORMED FOR CLASSICAL STUDY

About 50 Latin and Greek Scholars Members

The increasing interest in the classics, which is shown by the fact that beginning Latin and Greek classes have a larger enrollment on the campus this year than ever before, is the basis for the formation of a new group of students into a club for the purpose of fostering the study of the classics in the University.

About fifty members attended a meeting called by Professor F. S. Dunn, yesterday afternoon, in Oregon hall, and under his leadership appointed committees to draw up a constitution, nominate officers and select a name and a motto for the approval of the group at its next meeting.

Professor Dunn said yesterday that this gathering is merely a revival of a similar organization which existed on the campus when he first came to the University in 1898. This group was known as the Societas Quirinalis and was the first scholastic club of its kind in the University. Its members disbanded, however, about 1900, and although numerous other clubs in various departments of the University have been formed since then, this meeting yesterday was the first among classical students here for over 20 years.

Members of the committee to draw up a constitution are Alicia Agnew, Kathryn McAyeal, Hugh Biggs. Those who are to submit a name for the club are Mary Crombie, Matilde Liebelt and Lois Inman. Nominations of officers is in the hands of Elizabeth Honkanon, Edyth Driver and Kenneth Ruth and Miss Crombie and Mr. Ruth are also on a committee to select an appropriate name for the society.

Membership in this group is open to all students in Latin or Greek, who are interested in the classics and desire more research in this branch of learning than is possible within the limits of class periods.

OLD STUDENT WRITES BACK TO DEAN STRAUB

A. C. Shives, '01, Expresses His Appreciation for Help Received While Attending School

Every one knows that Dean Straub always has and always will help his "boys and girls" at the University, but not every one knows of all the kindness he does. Just the other day Dean Straub received a letter from a former student whom he had helped during the time of his stay here, thanking the dean for what he had done.

A. C. Shives, of Toledo, Washington, who entered with the class of 1901, wrote to the dean expressing his appreciation for the help that he received from him in making up back work.

In expressing his thanks, Shives wrote, "How very much I now appreciate what you did for me years ago when I came to the University of Oregon and entered late in the year. I had all my studies to make up and you had me at your house night after night and gave me your valuable time assisting me to catch up with my classes. I am only one of the many thousands you have assisted and who will carry a fond

OREGON LAW REVIEW TO BE OFF PRESS SOON

Judge Rossman and Department Heads Contribute Work to School Magazine

Filled with interesting material, the February issue of the Oregon Law Review, edited at the University law school, is soon to be off the press and will be ready for distribution by the first of the month. The issue is the second this year and will be number 2 of volume 3.

Among most outstanding articles in this issue is one written by Judge George Rossman, of the Multnomah county circuit court, on the subject of the effect on the testimony of the use of narcotics by those who are called as witnesses in trial courts. Judge Rossman was judge of the municipal court of Portland before going on the county circuit court and while there made personal study of narcotics and effects.

S. B. Warner, professor in the law school, has contributed an article dealing with the subject of the payroll law. The information for this article grows out of Professor Warner's research work this summer for the American Institute of Criminal Law.

Dean William D. Hale of the law school and James A. Miller, assistant professor of law, have reviewed notes in the editorial section of the magazine.

FEW CASES OF REAL GRIPPE ON CAMPUS

Isolation, Watching and Care Are Best Methods Used to Avoid Sickness

A few cases of real grippé are reported the last day or two according to Dr. W. K. Livingston, head of the health service. This is the time for a winter epidemic if we are to have one, he said. And it can only be avoided by constant care and watching and isolation if one gets the grippé or a bad cold.

The infirmary will take care of as many as its capacity will allow and it always takes the worst cases, but it will not hold many if there should be an epidemic, Dr. Livingston continued. Those students who have grippé and remain in their houses should take care to isolate themselves, to the best of their ability, from contacts with other students. Proper care in the early stages of grippé means a shortened illness, a less severe illness and an earlier and more complete recovery as well as protection to others, said the doctor.

DRAMATICS INSTRUCTOR TO RESUME FULL PROGRAM

Miss Charlotte Banfield, instructor in the dramatics department, who suffered from a nervous breakdown last fall, is gradually regaining her health. Miss Banfield was compelled to give up part of her heavy work, but is improving rapidly and will probably be able to take up her entire schedule again soon.

REPUBLICAN SOCIETY ORGANIZED ON CAMPUS

Club to be Part of National Party Organization

Final steps are being taken this week in the organization of a permanent Republican club on the University campus. This comes as the outgrowth of the plan of the Republican national committee to carry on a nation-wide organization of Republican college clubs.

John N. Hamlin, who has charge of the college bureau of the Republican National Committee, is on the campus and the work of organizing the Oregon club is being carried on under his direction. For the past few days he has been conferring with alumni and students regarding the organization, and he reports that the results have been highly gratifying and that the successful organization of the club is assured.

"The important feature of this society," said Mr. Hamlin, "is that it will be a permanent part of college life and will not disband as soon as the excitement of election is over. Alumni and former students will be admitted to membership as well as those who are now in the University, and thus the club will serve to tie up the students with the leaders in the state."

Nationally known speakers will be brought to the campus under the auspices of the club and will discuss the more pressing issues of the day for the benefit of the student body in general, Mr. Hamlin announced. The local organization will affiliate directly with the Republican national committee, but will also co-operate with the state committee.

According to an announcement recently given out by John T. Adams, chairman of the Republican national committee, the movement has been developed from the independent activities of some of the colleges during the past year. Among the institutions at which Republican clubs have been recently organized are: Williams College, Amherst, Yale, Harvard, Northwestern University, University of Chicago, and Butler college.
