Dean F. G. Young Sees Long Service on Campus

F. S. DUNN NEXT IN LINE

Number of Oregon Faculty Are Well Known

There are on the campus 11 faculty members who have been in the service of the University 20 years or longer. The one with the longest record of service is, of course, Dean John Straub, professor of Greek language and literature, who came to the campus as an instructor in 1879 and who has held his position continuously for 45 years.

Next to Dean Straub in length of service is Frederic G. Young, dean of the school of sociology, who came here to take up his work in 1895. He was head of the department of economics and sociology from that time until 1920 when the school of sociology was created, and he became its dean. He has been on the faculty for 29 years.

Dunn is Veteran
Frederick S. Dunn, professor of Latin, has been with the University for 26 years. He became head of the department of Latin in 1898, and still holds that position. During 1918 and 1919 he was granted a leave of absence to travel in Italy.

The librarian in the school of architecture and allied arts, Camilla Leach, became University librarian in 1899 and held that position until 1908. She was reference librarian from 1908 until 1912, and instructor in art from 1912 to 1916, when she took her present position which she has held since that year.

Famous Names Included
Five faculty members who have been in the service of the University 22 years. They are: P. L. Campbell, president; Percy P. Adams, professor of graphics; Edgar E. DeCout, professor of mathematics; O. F. Stafford, professor of chemistry; and Albert R. Sweetser, professor of botany. These men are all considered authorities on their subjects by the people of Oregon, and several have rendered conspicuous service. Professor Stafford is the inventor of a process for utilizing waste wood, and Dr. Sweetser has done much to preserve the wild flowers of the state.

Professor W. P. Boynton, head of the department of physics, has spent 21 years on the faculty. He came to Oregon from California college in 1903, and has been connected with the physics department since that time. He was made a department head in 1906.

Just 20 years ago, in 1904, W. L. Hayward, Oregon's veteran trainer, arrived on the campus and assumed the title of professor of physical education. He has been working with the Lemon-Yellow athletes since that time.

EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY TO GIVE SERIES OF TEAS

Miss Gouy Talks at Meeting of Pi Lambda Theta

The plans which Pi Lambda Theta, women's national educational fraternity, have made for the remainder of the school year include a series of monthly teas to be given the third Friday of every month in Alumni hall of the Woman's building. Thursday was originally set as the day, but owing to the fact that the faculty women had spoken for the hall on that day, it was necessary for Pi Lambda Theta to choose Friday.

The first of the series was held last Friday. The chief speaker at that time was Miss Henriette Gouy of the romance language department. Miss Gouy talked on the contrast between the school life of French and American girls.

"Her discussion was both unique and humanizing," said Crystal West, president of the organization. "It gave us a most delightful whiff of the French atmosphere and spirit, depicted in an extremely clever manner. We were all very much amused to learn that the French girl student is never permitted to attend the theater alone, even in the afternoon, and that when she registers in the university, she must put on file a sample of the handwriting of everyone from whom she expects to receive letters. These correspondents are then thoroughly investigated. If at any time there is mail from anyone else, the letter must be displayed to the woman in charge, and then sent to the girl's parents. There were other incidents as interesting as these," concluded Miss West.

After the talks, there was an open discussion of the subject, and Miss Gouy was plied with questions by the members and guests.

Mrs. Raymond H. Wheeler, wife of Dr. Wheeler of the psychology department, poured. Special guests were about 15 girls who are doing practice teaching at the present time.

For the next tea, which will be February 16, Miss Anne Hardy of the faculty of the school of education will be in charge. Anyone interested is cordially invited to attend.

between two excellent swordsmen, one armed with a club, the other with a delicate steel rapier carried in a cane.

The screen fight is between Theodore Von Eitz, in real life the son of a baron, who received his instruction in the art of duelling from a great European fencing master, and Ben Deely, his opponent, who has made fencing a hobby for years.

"Lights Out" is full of good comedy, resulting from the confusion of identity of two characters, one a bank robber and the other an actor who impersonates him in a screen play. The villain's unfamiliarity with moving picture deceptions, and the actor's astonishment at being treated like a scoundrel, form a substantial basis for many amusing mix-ups.

The cast includes Walter McGrail, Ben Hewlett, Hank Mann, Marie Astaire and others.

CASTLE

"Black Oxen," a Frank Lloyd production, released through First National pictures, and featuring Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle, is to be the photoplay offering at the Castle theater starting today.

The best selling novel of 1923, in book form "Black Oxen" is said to have been greatly enhanced by the elaborate filming. Dealing with the romance that develops when the rejuvenated Madame Zatianny returns to America on a business trip and finds the first true love she has known, "Black Oxen" presents more than usual interest to picture-goers, it is said.

Corinne Griffith, regarded as one of filmdom's most beautiful and smartest dressed stars, essays the difficult dual character of Madame Zatianny, and Conway Tearle has

STUDENTS OF ENGLISH TAKE GRADUATE WORK

Four Studying for Masters Degrees; Largest Part of Time is Spent in Research

The English department of the University is very fortunate in having a large graduate school this year. There is a greater number of students taking graduate work in this department than ever before, according to Mildred L. Howes.

Those students who expect to take their masters examination this year are Lois Laughlin, Eleanor Coleman, Luceil Morrow and Kenneth Schumacker. Others who are majoring in the department and will finish their graduate work next year are Irene Whitfield, Betty Belle Wise, Katherine Kaye and Helen Snyder. Kenneth Schumacker took his undergraduate work at Iowa, but the remaining three who are to come up for their examination this year are graduates of Oregon.

These second year graduate students are assistants in the English department at the present time. Kenneth Schumacker has charge of English A, and Lois Laughlin teaches classes in this course which is required of freshmen deficient in English. Luceil Morrow, who took her first year of graduate work at Bryn Mawr on a scholarship which she received here, is now finishing up at her alma mater. She is teaching a class in English outlines, while Eleanor Coleman is reading papers in the department.

The largest part of the work in the graduate department is in the nature of research. Practically all of the graduate students are enrolled in the course entitled English critics, which is held in the form of a seminar under Professor Howe.
