Joe Maddock—A Big Man

"We'll give a long cheer for Joe's men," sang the student body as they marched out of the assembly hall yesterday morning. Joe Maddock, the latest adopted son of Mighty Oregon, "came, saw, and conquered" Oregon by his very bigness.

Oregon likes people who are willing to work. The willingness which Maddock has shown to "fall in" here is probably the greatest point in his favor. Wherever he has gone the new mentor has been greeted as the man who will lead Oregon athletics to bigger things.

When the executive council voted Coach Maddock a three-year contract, they gave him a vote of confidence that cannot be misunderstood. The council believes it has found the man this institution has been looking for; the alumni who have seen the new man are strong for him; former acquaintances, even the ones who are numbered among the alumni of rival institutions, say that he looks like a winner.

Oregon sport fans realize that great victories may not come to the new coach next season. It takes more than one year to produce a "wonder team." The stability which a three-year contract gives to the entire Oregon sport situation should be a factor in producing results.

From now on the name "Maddock" and the name "Oregon" will be united in the thoughts of students and alumni alike.

We are all for "Joe," and he's all for us. On, Oregon!

Hail to the Scribes

Scores of Oregon newspaper men are on the campus today attending the sixth annual Oregon newspaper conference, held under the auspices of the University school of journalism.

Leaders of thought, these men represent thousands of citizens of the state. Many of them have come to the campus each year to attend the conference, and their faces are familiar to the older students.

The student body is glad to welcome the editors. Every organization on the campus will cooperate in their entertainment.

In the name of the A. S. U. O., the Emerald extends to the visitors a cordial Oregon "hello."

The varsity basketball team is in the north; the freshman basketball men are touring the southern part of the state; the Oregon bonecrushers are on their way to Moscow and Pullman; a girls' debate team from the campus defended the Lemon-Yellow colors at Salem, last night; Oregon is well represented in foreign territory this week.

SPEECHES BY FACULTY ARE HELD SUCCESSFUL

Interest on Vital Subjects Runs High; Many Meetings Last Over Allotted Time

The discussion groups held in 14 of the men's living organizations every Tuesday evening for the last three weeks have proved very successful, both in respect to the number of students attending the meetings and the amount of real thought and discussion engendered through the able leadership of professors who are leaders of local campus knowledge, according to Secretary Davis and members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, who arranged the series.

The series will run for three more weeks. Although each group is supposed to finish its discussion by 7:30, interest has run so high, and the subjects have been so vitally absorbing that questions and comments have kept the leaders so busy that in some cases discussions have lasted as much as an hour overtime. Last year only a few houses signified their intention to hold discussion groups when the question was brought before them, while this year practically all the men's fraternities are holding the meetings. The organizers of the discussion group plan are highly pleased with this spirit, which they say shows definitely that campus thought is turning to more serious questions and world problems.

IRVING VINING TO GIVE SERIES OF LECTURES

Personal Efficiency Is Subject of Talks by President of State Chamber

Irving E. Vining, president of the Oregon state chamber of commerce, is to give a series of lectures on personal efficiency beginning Sunday evening in connection with the Oregon retail merchants' convention, which is to be held on the campus under the auspices of the school of business administration. Mr. Vining spoke before assembly the early part of the term and was said to be one of the most enjoyable lecturers that has been on the campus for some time. Previously, he has had varied experiences as a speaker, being at one time special lecturer for the United States government. He has also done some chautauqua work.

The schedule of Mr. Vining's lectures, to which all students are invited, is as follows: "Vitalizing Your Abilities," Sunday evening at 7:45 in the Y. M. hut; "Types and Tendencies of Men," Monday, 11:00 a. m., in Villard; "Adjustments to Service," Monday, 7:30, in Villard; "Knowing and Influencing Men," Tuesday at 11:00 in Villard; and "Leadership and Executive Ability," Tuesday at 7:30. No fee will be charged for the lectures.

CHEMICAL TANK ADDED FOR FIRE EMERGENCY

Forty Gallon Container Installed in Woman's Building; Depot Equipment Increased

A new 40-gallon chemical tank, mounted on wheels and with 100 feet of hose, has been installed in the Woman's building. The new tank is declared by H. M. Fisher, superintendent of the University buildings and grounds, to be especially efficient in case of fire. "I'd rather have that tank with the 40 gallons of chemical than a thousand gallons of water," he said. A new truck, which is used to carry the campus mail to and from the depot, has been added to the equipment of that department. The men find it very convenient, since they are able to place all the mail upon it at once, where they formerly had to carry it in several trips. A first aid cabinet containing iodine, bandages, adhesive tape and a book on first aid, has been installed in the depot, where they have already been found useful by the employees, who in the process of their work often receive minor injuries.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE RECEIVES PUBLICITY

Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News Publishes Photograph of Rachel Husband

In a recent issue of the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News appeared the picture of Rachel Husband, graduate of the University of Oregon geology department in June, '21. Her present work in connection with the Exposition Park museum is to sort and catalogue bird bones and reconstruct fossil remains of birds long extinct.

Miss Husband did post-graduate work in the year '21 and '22, assisting Dr. E. L. Packard in the geology department. While in the University, Miss Husband and Dorothy E. Dixon, another geology major, were sent by the department to Southern Oregon to dig fossil remains. The results of their investigations were published in booklet form last year. Later she worked in the tar pools of southern California. Miss Husband is the sister of Victor Husband, a graduate student in the school of business administration here.

THE ART OF GIVING

Life is in reality composed largely of giving and taking, for in nearly every action we are deriving benefits from some that have gone before or we are donating something to the world and to the people around us. Of course, it is nearly always easy—often too easy—to take, but the same does not apply to giving. Sacrifice may be entailed and this is not necessarily done with the greatest facility and sense of pleasure. But the problem of giving is one which we must all face and one which we should all solve for ourselves. "Giving implies more than financial help," states the Toronto Varsity. "It is related to the individual's interest and only where that interest is the basis of any gift of money is there likely to be a steady growth in the work which such financial assistance should make possible."

The Varsity also continues: "The university student does not escape from this problem of learning to give. Indeed the university is the training ground in this matter. Prior to entering its portals the student usually solved the problem of how much and where he should give by passing it on to his parents. Now all that is changed. He meets on every side throughout his college year the request that he give to this or that worthwhile work. What is he going to do? From time to time some one comes to him in the interest of some good cause and assures him that it is the one organization in the university worthy of his support. Should he give this organization his support? We believe that he should if he is really interested in the work that it is doing. Any appeal on the basis that it is a sacred duty to support any organization just because it is a university body seems to us to defeat both the art of giving and the true value of the organization. "Let a man give, therefore, where his interest lies, provided he recognizes that to take an interest in the needs of others is the duty of every man."—The McGill Daily.
