

GOLF COMPETITION ON COAST GROWS IN FAVOR

Tournament May be Held at Waverly Club in May

The short spell of warm, sunshiny days has brought the golfers of the school out in hordes. Nearly every afternoon finds a large number of them knocking the small rubber ball around the University three-hole course on the drill ground. Oregon has been among the very last schools to adopt this pastime as a sport, and as a result golfing hasn't been much in vogue among the students. Only last year did the University enter a team in the collegiate tournament held by the Waverly club in Portland. The other schools which participated in the tournament last year were the University of Washington and Reed college.

This tournament is assuming more and more the semblance of a Pacific coast conference meet, and practically all of the leading conference schools are indicating their intentions of entering teams this year. The colleges interested in this initial move to bring golf to the front among the large coast universities are Oregon, University of Washington, Washington State, Reed college, California, Stanford, and possible Southern California and O. A. C.

All of these school have announced themselves in favor of coast competition, and it is highly probable that the tournament will be held again this year in Portland under the auspices of the Waverly club, sometime in May. Golf has already attained a foremost position as a minor sport in some of the coast colleges, and especially at Washington, California and Stanford is much interest shown. It is only a question of time until this sport, which has rapidly become America's foremost pastime, will take its position on the Pacific coast as it has in the east, where at Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Columbia, and other of the leading universities of the country, golf is a recognized sport. Some very important tournaments are held among these schools and Yale has captured the national championship for the past four or five years.

An elimination tournament will probably be held at the beginning of next term, and steps be taken toward the development of a dependable team to enter in the tournament in May. There are a number of very promising golfers on the campus, and a two man team will be chosen from these. Jack Marshall and Don Goodrich are the outstanding candidates for the team, and both play a consistent game; however some likely competition is expected before the team is finally chosen in the spring. Marshall is a veteran and has competed in the leading state tournaments for the past three or four years. He was runner-up in the Gearhart tournament last year and has participated in the state tournaments.

WASHINGTON PRAISED BY JUDGE McCAMANT

volently. One time, when he was away from home, he wrote a letter saying, "Let the hospitality of the house with respect to the poor continue. Let no one go away poor. Feed the hungry, if it does not encourage them to be idle."

Especially did Mr. McCamant stress the comradeship of Washington. "Nothing is more beautiful than his companionship with his men in arms," he declared. "To the end of his life, he was a loyal friend to them all."

"He is the only man I ever knew who does not lose part of his respectability upon private contact," was the statement of Washington's private secretary. "Sometimes, he led me to regard him as more than a man."

Roy Bryson Sings

Washington died as he had lived, a gentleman. On his deathbed he was the same considerate man he had been throughout life. In conclusion, Judge McCamant declared that when Washington passed away, the world lost its first gentleman.

In addition to the address of the principal speaker, Roy Bryson sang two solos.

CASTLE

Prettier than ever, more hoydenish, yet more sincere, Viola Dana romps with evident glee through her newest Metro picture, "The Heart Bandit," at the Castle today only. The tiny star is always to be depended upon for an entertaining film, and "The Heart Bandit," we can safely say, not only holds up to the very high average she has set in her Metro series, but goes the rest of her releases one better.

Carol the Co-ed Comments on Eugene Shops
Anne, my dear—
I'm all "prettied up" for our dance tonight. I went down to Bob's Beauty Shop and had my hair trimmed, shampooed, and marcelled, and even was so extravagant as to have a manicure.
I'm going to wear my new dress I got at Large's yesterday. It is the new Mexican shade in crepe with a woven design of self color. The collar and cuffs have five rows of fluted lace and the dress itself is a long blouse effect, clear to the knees. Quite the latest thing you know.
The Art Shop has the most wonderful imported crepe de chine sets of combinations, night gowns and two-piece "step ins," trimmed with lovely Venetian lace. I invested in a set and all of the girls are hopped up about buying some.
I thought I was going to have such a hard time deciding on a hat this year for it seems that every spring brings a flock of prettier ones than the year before. I am so pleased with my choice that I found at the Style Shop. It is a "Gage" toque of terrapin colored visca braid, the trimming of which is worked on a band of three tone glace silk. Hand made flowers of silk, velvet and brush wool make it very chic.
My latest triumph in dress-making lessons at the White Sewing Machine Company is a frilly spring dress that I am hoping to get to wear soon. You would be so surprised to see how skillful I am becoming using the attachments. They save so much time, and really are very simple to learn to use.
We just couldn't resist buying Maxfield Parrish's "Daybreak" down at Ludford & Caswell's. It is such a lovely picture and adds so much to the drawing room. We also bought a new bowl that is just made to hold nice yellow daffodils.
I hope the dinner dance goes off well tonight. At least the decorations will insure a great deal of the success. Our favors and placecards are so adorable—nice Washington birthday ones. I wasn't worried about finding something we would be keen about as long as we have a place to shop like Coc's Stationery.
Sorry you can't be here for the gala occasion, for it's going to be supermelogorgeous I know. I'll think of you in the midst of the most heavenliest pieces.
With love,
CAROL.
