Architects' Clubs All Give Stunts at Regular Meeting

The Jury Day for the term in the school of architecture and allied arts, which began with criticisms of the student work on display, and ended with a gathering of the big art and architecture family, was honored by distinguished visitors from the state-C. D. James, Portland architect, president of the Oregon chapter of the American Institute of Architects; Morris H. Whitehouse, Portland architect; Prof. Leo Fairbanks, director of art at Oregon Agricultural college, and Miss Posters Mailed to Middle Esther Wuest, director of art in the Portland public schools.

Second Prize Offeled

A valuable book on "Brick Architecture in Italy" was presented by Mr. Whitehouse to the Camilla Leach memorial art library. Mr. Whitehouse also supplemented the prize of $25 offered annually by the institute to the senior making the most progress during the four years, by offering a second prize of Pugin's "Gothic Details" to the man rating next in development.

Both Mr. Whitehouse and Mr. James were very encouraging in their view of the new method of teaching architecture—that of eliminating competition. The University of Oregon school of architecture and allied arts was declared by Mr. Whitehouse to have the

The freshman president was urged Normal Art, Sculpture, and to liven things up so that the regular assembly "show" could go on for the entertainment of the rest of the campus.

That underclass women should be rebuked for sitting on the senior bench, was also an opinion expressed at the meeting. "Several seem to be taking advantage of a privilege which is not extended to them" is the grievance voiced by the members and it was thought advisable for the women's order to take some action.

A reminder that wives of members of the Order of the "O" are the only women eligible to wear the "O" sweaters, was also voiced at the meeting.

Guild Hall Actors Are to Try Out For Scholastic Honors

Two students, both well known to the campus through their participation in various Guild hall plays, are candidates for honors in the department of drama and speech arts this year. Darrell Larson and Kate Pinneo will be examined in June. Both are seniors.

Darrell Larson is best known through his work in the recent play, "The Two Virtues," in which he played the lead. Kate Pinneo also interpreted a difficult part with great skill, taking the role of Lady Milligan. Larson also took leading parts in "La Malquerida" and in "The Green Goddess."

Kate Pinneo came into prominence with her work last year in "The Raggedy Man," in which she was Addeliney Bowersox, and in "The Great Broxopp," in which she played Nancy Broxopp, the wife of Broxopp. She has participated in the most of the plays presented this
