Several Plays and Poems Also in Collection

SUBJECTS ARE VARIED

Book by Ervine Is Sequel to "Merchant of Venice"

Among the newest books to arrive at the library are a number of special interest. Several plays and poems are among this latest collection as well as fiction. "The Lady of Belmont," by John G. Ervine, a play in five acts, deals with the characters of "The Merchant of Venice," after the closing of the play, and takes up the married life of the characters. Portia, not getting along nicely with her husband; Jessica, pictured with many lovers; and Shylock getting into all kinds of complications, makes the play a most amusing one.

Several Plays Listed "Second Plays," by A. A. Milne, with illustrations by Rose O'Neill; "A Book of Plays," by Witter Byner; "Plays of Martinez Sierra," one of the youngest and best established Spanish writers. The collection contains five plays and an appreciation by Granville Barker; and "Restoration Comedies," by Montague Summers, and others of the group. "Negro Poets and Other Poems," by Robert T. Kerlin; "The Poetic Edda," which consists of ancient lays of northern Gods and heroes; and "The House of Dust," by Conrad Aiken, are among the volumes of poetry.

Many Subjects Treated Other new books are "Aunt Polly's Story of Mankind," by Donald O. Stewart; "Bunk," by W. C. Woodward; "Story of the Development of Youth," by Ernst Haecckel; "Max Reinhardt and His Theater," edited by Oliver M. Saylor; "My Windows on the Street of the World," James Mavor; "Changes and Chances," by H. W. Nevinson; "Man and Mystery in Asia," by Ferdinand Ossendowski; "The Black Panther," by John Hall Wheelock. "Hampshire Days," by W. H.

CHANG GIVES VIEWS OF UNIVERSITY SOCIAL LIFE

Korean Believes Student Union Necessary for the Cementing of Friendships

By D. S. Chang "How many students have you got acquainted with since you entered this University?" some one asks me. Well, I know two Korean boys, because they are my fellow countrymen. One Indian, two Chinese, and some Filipinos. They all come from the Orient. I know Dean Allen, because he is the dean, and Professors Turnbull, Casey, Thacher, because I am taking the classes they conduct. But they are not students. As for the American boys and girls, I do not know whether I have got acquainted with more than 20 or 25. I have had no opportunity to make friends with them. How could a strange boy on the campus get acquainted with the American boys without some special organ of social life, such as Student Union or Union building?

Rather strange, it seems to me, that so frank and open-minded American boys and girls do not understand what the value of social life is—I mean a social life on the campus. Some one says that there are more than two thousand students in this University. I believe it may be true. But who does know it except the registrar? Perhaps he knows it well on the records! Yet the mere numbers on the records can not make, or does not mean "social life" among the students. The "hello!", a peculiar thing to this University, is surely sweet to call and to hear. It makes me, a stranger in this American soil, feel quite at home, and I like to put it on my lips every morning when I meet the students on

A new cement sidewalk, eight feet wide, will be built within a few days between Thirteenth avenue east and the Sociology building, according to H. M. The task of filling in the ground west of the Oregon building will be resumed within a few days, Mr. Fisher said, but at present the University team is

KAPPA ALPHA THETA TO BUILD NEW HOME

Lot Facing Golf Links Is Chosen for Location

The contract has been let and work will begin immediately on the new Kappa Alpha Theta house to be located at Eighteenth and University streets. Originally the sorority had planned to build on its lot at Fourteenth and Alder, but inasmuch as the tract was desired for the Student Union building, it was decided to give up the lot and dispose of it to the University.

A slight change was necessitated in the plans of the house in order that the architecture might be adjusted to the new lot. W. R. B. Wilcox, architect, has completed the new plans. The house will face north overlooking the present three-hole golf course. It will be of seven, three stories in height, contain seven studios, and room for thirty-four girls. There will be two sleeping porches, a tiled sun porch on the outwest, off the living room, a spacious chapter room in the basement and shutters on the windows. Dan Fisher of Eugene is the contractor.

The Sigma Nus will be able to move into their new residence on the mill race by the middle of May, it was stated by a member of the fraternity. It is rumored that a number of organizations will begin building in the near future, and many are contemplating the purchasing of lots.

GRACE EDGINGTON RESIGNS POSITION

University both by letter and through Old Oregon frequently," Miss Edgington commented yesterday. "To keep such contact means a terrific amount of detail labor. In the still hazardous job of financing the alumni office, the work of the Old Oregon business manager has been exceedingly important. Jeanette Calkins was the mainstay of the office for several years. This year, in her absence abroad, John Dye, a junior in advertising, has been invaluable. It is not an exaggeration, I think, to say that two-thirds of the campus interest in Old Oregon is due to his efforts. He has never been content to stop with the problem of advertising, itself a difficult question to solve. "Other persons to whom we have the street, hurrying to their class rooms. But is it a social life to call hello to each other? No, it does not mean anything more than a "hello." "Why," some one would say, "there are so many fraternities, clubs, class-meetings, and student bodies, and often such things as dancing and many other social meetings are held at several places. Don't these mean that there is enough social life among the students?" Yes, it might do, perhaps. But I have never knocked at the door of any fraternity, because it is not opened for all. Much less I have not been invited to any dances, as it is rather happy for me not to have been in do not know how to dance with a girl. I belong to the Cosmopolitan club, and I enjoy it, but it is a rather small group of students.

Where is such a thing as the Union of all the students of the University? And the Union building? We have our class rooms, lecture halls, but not a single room for the purpose of our own social life. As the University has its Ad building on the center of the campus, so I hope that we may have our own Union building built among the grand trees and green lawns, so beautiful and refreshing, where we may get acquainted with each other, and where even a foreign boy, as I, may make friends with a hundred per cent of all the students, playing chess or talking by the fireplace with American boys and girls.
