Student minds must be disabused of the notion that the drive for Student Union funds is the product of any one person's schematizing. It is not a publicity feat promoted by the president of the student body. It is not a snare to entrap any unsuspecting student. It is an effort of the entire campus to express its interest in the development of the University of Oregon, and the attainment of the Greater University.

Of necessity any extensive undertaking must have leaders. Those who assume the responsibility for the Student Union are representatives of the student body. Their task is to express the sentiment of their constituents; their interest is the welfare of the student body; their determination is to carry out the tasks assigned and fulfill the responsibilities assumed.

Alone, theirs would be an impossible undertaking. Aided, these leaders can carry through their highly organized plans to a crowning termination. There is not a student who can afford to show only a passing interest in what is about to happen. He who says, "Let the other fellow do it," is a shirker. The success of the Student Union drive depends upon two things—the flawless organization carrying on the work, and the happy reception by the student body of the opportunity to do some good.

Hence, the man whose assistance is sought in this movement should seize the chance to help boost. And he who is approached, when the time comes to make his contribution, should do so, knowing he is acting in good faith with himself, and in a charitable spirit toward his University.

Go to Church on Easter

Tomorrow is Easter, the day campus tradition has always set as the main "go to church Sunday" of the year. Yesterday's Emerald told of the special services in the downtown churches, and it is expected that every place of worship in Eugene will be filled.

The history of the day is interesting, especially in the light of the way we moderns regard it. From the time of Constantine, continuing through many centuries, Easter was also New Year.

It is the most ancient and has always been counted the most important of the Christian festivals. The name, like the days of the week, is a survival of Teutonic mythology. The Easter-month corresponded to our April, and after our ancestors became Christian, says Bede, "the old festival was observed with the gladness of a new solemnity."

It is time there were a more general observance on our campus of this great "festival of flowers and the immortal hope." Most of us profess attachment of some sort to the Christian faith. That faith is supremely a faith in immortality. Such a faith built the Pyramids, caused Socrates to despise the poison as something that could not touch his soul, and Plato to utter arguments that thrill to this day.

Let's go to church, Easter.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TO HOLD EASTER BREAKFAST

The Christian Endeavor of the Presbyterian church and the Rev. Bruce J. Giffen's Sunday morning Bible class, which meets at the "Y" but every Sunday morning, will hold an Easter breakfast at the Central Presbyterian church Sunday morning. Communion services will be held at the same time, with the Rev. Giffen officiating.

Communications

Letters to the EMERALD from students and faculty members are welcomed, but must be signed and worded concisely. If it is desired, the writer's name will be kept out of print. It must be understood that the editor reserves the right to reject communications.

AGAINST PEDDLERS

To the editor: Lately, an out-of-town clothing firm, a shoe firm, and other merchandise firms have been invading Eugene to reap a harvest from the students of the University. Granted that their wares may be worth the money, reliable in every way, and of excellent quality, should the students patronize them?

These firms are not even Oregon firms, they pay no taxes in Oregon. All the money they receive goes clear out of the state. Not a bit of it comes back in taxes, the state does not even benefit from the re-investment of the money.

So, is it fair for students to patronize these itinerants? An investigation has revealed that goods of equal quality can be obtained in Eugene, and that dollar value for dollar value the wares can be matched in any of the leading downtown stores.

The Eugene merchants are staunch and loyal supporters of the University. Already they have aided materially in the gift campaign, and they are going to help some more.

At least, the students should go down town and compare prices and quality and styles before purchasing from the travelling firms. Perhaps some students might be surprised to know that an investigation revealed that the same brand of goods recently sold by a "national" clothier can be obtained down town at lesser prices.

Patronize local firms—anyway when local firms are superior in every way! A STUDENT.

ANSWERING "RAB"

To the editor: Why is it that someone, generally once or twice a year, comes through with a story of what so-and-so institution is doing? I am making reference to the article that appeared recently signed by "Rab" Reavis.

If "Rab," as he terms himself, likes O. A. C.'s way of conducting student body dances, why, then, does he not transfer to the Corvallis institution. I am sure the registrar will gladly grant him a transfer and then he will be fully able to enjoy himself and also pick his dates to suit his fancy. I wonder, "Rab," if the reason that you like the O. A. C. custom is that the "wall-flowers" are the only ones that will give you any attention.

Here is something to think about, "Rab." You must take into consideration that each institution the country over has its own customs and ideals. If it is your desire to be better pleased with one custom as that at O. A. C. than the one enjoyed here, the stages still run regularly to O. A. C. Remember that variety is the spice of life. If O. A. C. life appeals to you, then adios. JACK BLISS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING DRAWS 1074

University Campus Pleases Visitors from State

A total of 1,074 delegates from all parts of Oregon, registered in the State Christian Endeavor convention, held in Eugene last weekend, according to reports compiled by the housing committee. This is the largest convention ever held in Oregon, said E. P. Gates, national secretary of the Christian Endeavor societies.

The visitors expressed themselves as being very well pleased with Eugene in general, and particularly the campus of the University, which they toured. Most of the delegates were here for the first time, and consequently were much interested in the college, which many of them will attend at some future date.

The officers for the coming year were elected at a session of the convention, several of them being former or present students of the University of Oregon. They are: President, Mary Guiley of the University extension division; vice-presidents, Ed Geiger of Portland, and Mrs. Effie Ritchie of Freewater; secretary, Viola Ogden of Portland; treasurer, Hiram Cole, Coquille; superintendent of intermediate work, Dallas Rice, University of Oregon senior; educational superintendent, Walter L. Myers of E. B. U. Leo Deffenbecker, of the campus barber shop, was elected president of the Lane county district. Elaine Cooper, past president of the Christian Endeavor association of the state and former student of the University, automatically took the position of executive advisor.

OREGON'S INTERPRETATION

The action taken by the students of the University of Oregon in making the junior week-end an all campus affair bears interest to Reed students as well. The decision to make the event a college affair alone was arrived at in preference to total abolition, or continuance in its present form.

The Oregon students felt that the advertising gained was not of the right sort, being only of a social nature; that only a small percentage of the guests were influenced to attend the University; that the pleasant break in the scholastic work only caused physical and financial overwork on the part of the entire college; that it should not be kept up only because of the tradition; that such features as the canoe fete and athletic carnival were desirable.

Many persons in the junior class at Reed have raised the same substantial objections in regard to Reed day. Reed day has never been a mere social event, and the canoe fete, to be continued at Oregon, is considered unessential by many at Reed.

REPAIRING OF NEVADA 'N' PREVENTED BY WEATHER

University of Nevada—(P. I. N. S.)—For the first time in years, the university "N" will not have its semi-annual coat of whitewash for Mackay Day. Heretofore it has been an established rule that the freshman class shall have the letter painted by Mackay Day, but this year, owing to the inclement weather, Block N. set aside the rule and has given the class permission to delay the work one week.

I stood before the cashier's window. The first of the month had arrived.

In all my years of experience, I have learned at least one thing. That it pays to be observing. I always take advantage of the most opportune psychological moments.

Here was my chance. The cashier was a lean little fellow with big feet and green eyes. His long hair hung to his shoulders and very neatly covered his large bald head.

My observation completed, I drew my $50,000.50.

This is the 18th of the month and I have only 50 cents left. But don't be alarmed. I've put it into a good investment.

Two boys came around today and told me they were raising fun for somebody that sounded like Cliff Champagne. Anyway the name had a very beautiful liquid sound and they wanted to get some money to play some joke on Cliff or something.

Yesterday Peter and I strolled up to Spencer's butte to hook holly and pick holly hocks. But as we found none we decided to search for some contour lines.

It proved to be a most unusual afternoon, for we made two astounding discoveries. In the first place, as we rounded a point, we happened onto two contours that cross each other. Immediately we made the fact known to the state bureau of geological survey and are now awaiting our reward. Secondly,

As we climbed up higher on the hill The grass was growing 'round. Did you ever see a thing like that? Round grass upon the ground

We have finally solved the mystery of the numerous campus signs on which are written, "C. K. B." C. K. B. is a women's organization and we are told that it stands for "Cotqueans of the Khaki Breeches." Long live dis order.

Here's record of a man named Wedge, Who found he was not able To keep his Student Union pledge, And still eat at the table.

They brought him into court today, His trial he did dispute. This case, the honorable judges say, Was a Student Union suit.

Obak's Kollege Krier OBAK Wallace, Publisher L.L.L. Office boy and editor Volume 3 SATURDAY, A. M. Number 21

Furnishing Campaign Must Start Say Students

Student Union Will Be a Fine Building, But Where Do We Sit?

Ever since the Krier published the first picture of the new student union last week the entire campus has been in a turmoil of excitement and everybody is all hopped up about getting moved in. The most recent complication of matters has come with the question of furniture.

Many of the women are all in favor of installing pool and billiard tables so that the new student union will be just like the old original Kollege Klub. There is some opposition to this on the grounds that the new union should not compete with the Klub in this field.

There is one thing, though, that is unanimous—everybody wants a snow white lunch counter and food just like that at Obak's. Perhaps with this point so definitely settled the rest will gradually work out. One thing is sure, that is that with the Obak's Klub to use as a model the committee will have very little difficulty in designing a union that will satisfy the students.

Now what will we have for the art gallery, ask some of the students? That too is easy—Obak has an art gallery that has pleased generations past and will be a delight to the future worshippers of true art and sport.

So student union it is, a union with the same sort of fellowship and camaraderie that has made Obak's Kollege Klub the delight and salvation of Oregon men for years.

Political Editorial

The Krier is beginning to get excited. In fact the Krier is very much worried. Try, as we may, we don't seem to be able to get anybody to run for office around this place. Every now and then some fellow does come around and tap us on the back, but so far nobody has been so forward as to offer us a cigar, and we are still forced to roll our own out under the proverbial bush.

What is wrong around here? Have all of the politicians flunked out of school? Isn't somebody going to promote somebody soon? There has not even been anybody come around to apply for the editorship of the Krier, and this is the first time in history that there hasn't been at least three or four candidates by the middle of April!

The Krier offers one political suggestion: It is certain that there will eventually be some candidates; and it is also certain that there will emerge out of this group a gang of "also rans," or "lame ducks." To these let us say that hundreds before you have found comfort and relief from disappointment by coming to the Klub for food, smoke and relaxation. It's early in the game, but you can always be sure that somebody loves you. Remember OBAK'S.
