Wanted—Capable Candidates

During Oregon's change from a small college to a great University, many student-body offices have become extremely important, and the standards to which a successful office-holder must attain have become increasingly high.

The student-body president is, for instance, the head of an Association which does nearly a hundred thousand dollars worth of business a year and which includes over two thousand students, compared to less than a thousand a few years ago. The Emerald editor has the problem of issuing a paper six days a week instead of three, as was the case only a short time ago, and has a staff of sixty, compared to the dozen who wrote the paper in the old days.

This means that choosing officers is serious business. Students who are elected should have cool heads and the courage to stand up for student rights in circumstances where older heads on committees are likely to dominate.

It is regrettable that fraternity politics enter into student-body elections. This is especially regrettable because it sometimes happens that one house has a number of capable students it might run, but because of fear of criticism it must hold someone back. It is hoped that the campus will be able to overlook the petty jealousies that often attend elections and name the men or women who will best carry on the work.

This is a queer year politically. Nominations for student body offices will take place at assembly, Thursday, and up to this time there has been practically no talk of campus politics. The greater problem of making the Student Union drive a success rightfully took the right-of-way. With the goal accomplished and the Student Union assured, the campus must think, and think quickly, concerning who is best fitted to handle the affairs of the A. S. U. O. next year.

Names of nominees must be handed into the editor before six p. m. if the candidate wishes his candidacy to be made known in the next morning's Emerald.

The extremely unfortunate reference which was made in the column of "Literary Gossip" to Colonel Hofer, editor of the Lariat, escaped the editorial blue pencil through the absence of the Sunday editor who has charge of editing various literary features of the Sunday sheet. The Emerald is sorry, for it realizes that the criticism, to be entirely unethical, should have been confined strictly to the magazine.

The campus experienced a grand and glorious feeling Saturday night when over two hundred thousand dollars was chalked up for the Student Union. Those who took part in the drive and cooperated in loyal Oregon style will have a certain richness added to their memory of campus days that will be worth all the effort it cost. We wonder how those who made themselves conspicuous by standing in the way of the movement felt when the rally crowd passed by Saturday night.

FORMER CAMPUS Y. M. HEAD VISITS EUGENE

Harold Donnelly Speaks at Seabeck Meeting

Harold Donnelly, national director of boys' work of the Presbyterian church and former general secretary of the University of Oregon Y. M. C. A., is a visitor in Eugene for a few days. Mr. Donnelly, together with his wife and young son, arrived Sunday afternoon from his headquarters in Philadelphia to visit his mother, Mrs. Charlotte R. (Mother) Donnelly, who is the present University Y. M. C. A. employment secretary.

Mr. Donnelly was secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in 1920 as well as student secretary of the states of Oregon and Idaho. In 1921, he married Beatrice Weatherbee, of the class of '21, whose parents live in Eugene and at present home, the Donnellys are at present visiting.

Mr. Donnelly will leave Eugene Thursday for California where he is to remain during the month of May visiting the various churches in the state in the interest of boys' work. He will be in the West until September.

At the Seabeck luncheon, which was held yesterday noon in the Y hut, Mr. Donnelly was one of the speakers, together with Gale Seaman, Pacific coast student Y. M. C. A. secretary, and Douglas Wright. A large attendance at this summer's conference, June 13 to 22, at Seabeck, Washington, of students from the University of Oregon was urged because of the opportunity which will enable them to come in closer contact with students from all the Northwest colleges and with several prominent educators and speakers of the United States who are scheduled to address the conference.

By Enigma

There is a young man lives next door to me who is a tailor here in town. Peter and I have never taken much to the fellow. He is quite a snobish, smug-faced cockalorum, and he suffers clear down to his feet when he is obliged to speak to us.

His brother, who he lives with, comes over to chew the rag with Peter quite often and the other night he was telling Peter that the young tailor was taking up boxing as a hobby and already had made out a list of men in town that he could lick and he mentioned that I was one of those on the list.

So I had him over that night.

"I hear that you have a list of the men in this town that you can lick," I said. "Yes, sir," he answered. "Is my name on it?" "Yes, sir," he answered again.

"So you think you can lick me, do you?" I cried, for by this time I was in a terrible rage. I always cry when I'm in anger. "Yes, sir," he answered once more.

"Why do you know," said I, "that I could loosen your whole structure from all its joints? I could disfigure your carcase hide and use it for mud depositions at our tradesmen's entrance."

THE HOUSE WAS SHAKING. PETER HAD HIDDEN IN THE STORM CELLAR.

"And that isn't all," I screamed. "To top off all that, with one finger I can untie that disjunct woly knot at the upper end of your spine and your whole constitution, amendments, preamble, and all, will abase the floors of my home."

"Can you really do that, Mr. Enigma?" gasped the shaking tailor. "It's the plain-spoken truth," I returned. "Are you absolutely positive that you can do exactly what you said, sir?" he queried again as he reached his pocket. "Positive," I assured him.

"Very well then, sir," and he bowed me a goodnight as he pulled a long paper from his pocket. "In such a case, you need not worry. I shall scratch your name from the list."

RIFLE SERVICE FIRING STARTS ON SATURDAY

Pedestrians Are Warned of Possible Danger

Firing with the regular service rifle on the target range, about two miles south of the campus, will commence next Saturday and will continue throughout the spring term on Saturdays, according to an announcement by Capt. F. L. Culin, Jr., of the local R. O. T. C. headquarters.

Firing will start at 7:30 Saturday morning and will continue until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The course of firing will be the regular army instruction and qualification course with slow fire at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards, and rapid fire at 200, 300 and 500 yards.

Captain Culin warns University students and townspeople that the range is so placed that in the event of a possible wild shot or ricochet, persons cutting across from Alder or Willamette streets toward Spencer's Butte might be endangered. The marksmen will be firing toward Spencer's Butte.

Those who will receive instruction in rifle marksmanship, preliminary to attending summer camp, and will be firing on the range, are as follows:

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

Some High Points in Oregon Emerald of April 29, 1923

A movement has been instituted by the students to keep Coach George Bohler, who has been practically dismissed by Dean Bovard of the school of physical education.

The eleventh annual home concert of the University Symphony orchestra was given last night under the direction of Rex Underwood.

Total registration for the spring term is 2,104.

The state board of higher curricula has consented to a five-year course in architecture, a course in pre-library work and a course in pre-nursing, to be given at the University.

The frosh nine defeated Columbia university by a 4 to 3 score yesterday afternoon. The game was a hard fought struggle.

The Oregon chapter of Mortar Board will be installed today.

One of the late developments in campus politics is the positive denial on the part of Claude Robinson that he will be a candidate for the presidency of the A. S. U. O.

GIFT CAMPAIGN ISSUES MEMORIAL BOOKLET

Pictures of Oregon's Dead Heroes Included

As a reminder of those who gave their lives in the World War, a white booklet has been issued by the Gift Campaign, containing pictures of 38 of the 48 dead Oregon alumni and alumni of the Oregon Medical and Willamette Medical schools. The cover is white with a gold star in the center and "In Memoriam" is printed below it in black. The booklet is about 4x6 inches.

This publication is the first attempt on the part of the University to print a complete list of the dead alumni and is put out by Glenn Quiet, a member of the Gift Campaign staff, in connection with the proposed Memorial Court. Ten thousand copies have been sent to alumni, parents of the soldiers, and others interested.

The dedication reads: "In Memoriam to the University of Oregon Men Who Died in the World War." The next page is a full page photograph of the service flag at the entrance of the Administration building, with four military men standing under it. An article is opposite—"The War Service of Old Oregon." Just preceding the pictures is an article—"The University's Honored War Dead."

After the pictures and names appears a picture of the Memorial Court and an article telling the alumni of the court and of what it will mean to future generations of students.

HERE the architects envisioned a picture, saw the modern office building in terms of the great art of the Middle Ages—and the result is a demonstration that the ultimate structure, the modern office building of commerce may be as picturesque as it is practical. Vision, imagination, courage and practical ingenuity in stylistic adaptation have enabled the architects of this country to astonish the world with their achievements of today and their promise of tomorrow. Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.
