

STUDENTS MAY VOTE IN ELECTIONS TODAY

Freeholders Will Swear in Those Not Registered

University students, regardless of whether they have registered, may vote in the primary elections which are being held today.

The requirements to vote follow: Six months in the state of Oregon, 30 days in the precinct, a citizen of the United States who is at least 21 years of age. Any student who meets the above regulations may claim Eugene as his home, if he so desires. A person who has not registered may be sworn in by two freeholders, or property owners, at the polls. The polls will be open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. There are 21 precincts in all.

There will be five election ballots in Lane county, but six in Eugene. Republican ballots will be issued only to Republicans, and the Democratic ballots will be issued only to members of that party. A registered voter can not change his political registration on election day. Other information given out by county officials was to the effect that no name of a Republican candidate written on a Democratic ballot will be counted toward a Democratic nomination, or vice versa. Special care should be taken, it was requested, to place the "x" in the correct place, which is just after the number on the left-hand side of each column. The vote will be counted if it is placed after the name, but there are chances of its being overlooked if it is not put in the correct place. All day tomorrow there will be citizens in the Campa Shoppe to swear in students.

Bob Coffey will handle the funds of the class. He was elected treasurer with a vote of 151. Pete Ermler was his nearest runner up with a vote of 108, and Bill James received 98.

The one office in the senior class, that of permanent secretary, will be filled by Frank Carter, who won over Douglas Farrel, with a count of 74 to 38.

Following the idea of the class parties which were all held on one night, the class elections were also held together, thus minimizing the

Mr. Wilson will speak this noon at a luncheon in the "Y" hut before the combined cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. and any others who make arrangements with Rev. H. W. Davis, campus Y. He will deliver addresses this evening and tomorrow evening in Villard hall, and tomorrow morning he will speak for the faculty members and their wives at the Anchorage. EMERSON IS DESCRIBED BY FORMER SECRETARY

Charm of Philosopher's Personality Told

"Greater than a writer was Emerson as a man," said Charles J. Woodbury, secretary to Ralph Waldo Emerson, and last surviving member of the Concord group, in his talk to the students yesterday morning in assembly, on "Emerson and His Friends."

"Emerson was 62 years old when I first met him," said Mr. Woodbury. "I have never forgotten the humiliation that came over me, when I entered the home of one of the greatest minds in America. He was a cold, quiet, modest gentleman, and the first thing he did was to inquire about my college life, which put me somewhat at ease. His voice was agreeable and kindly, and always to be heard when one was listening. He talked as one, not seeing his listener, but seeing his subject. His voice never fell at a period, and he always read his speeches, which is an unpardonable offense.

"As our California streams carried gold, so his voice carried spirit," said the speaker.

"He presented an awkward figure, like Lincoln's, tall, with long arms and legs, large hands and feet, ill-fitting frock coat, and stand-up collar.

"Emerson believed," declared Mr. Woodbury, "that self-reliance is the basis of behavior. He very seldom laughed, however, his companionship in conversation was interesting, because of his vocabulary, originality, and Yankee common sense."

Emerson had a great respect for men as men, which was shown on the occasion of the visit of one of the many "reformers" to his home. The man was in Emerson's library and had refused to remove his hat, when requested to do so by his host.

"Very well," said Emerson, "we will finish our conversation in the yard."

Henry Thoreau was a very good friend of Emerson's, and it was he who went out in the woods to live Emerson's ideals, as Emerson had too much Yankee prudence to do so. Emerson described his friend as an animal, with the eye of a bird, the scent of a dog, and the lack of a human soul.

"Emerson wrote freely and fully thoughts as they came to him. He never mentioned his unfortunate experiences, as events were nothing to him. It was all his thoughts, which, when read now, stir the sluggish mind to activity," concluded Mr. Woodbury.

BRATTAIN ASKED TO BE ASSISTANT IN PHYSICS

Walter H. Brattain, who receives his bachelor's degree as a major in physics this June from Whitman college at Walla Walla, Washington, has been offered the graduate assistantship in physics to be vacant by Troy Phipps this June. "Brattain has been a student assistant in physics at Whitman for the past two years," said Dr. Boynton, head of the University physics department, who made Brattain the offer, "and he has a good record behind him. Besides being a physics major, he was a minor in mathematics. He seems to have had a good undergraduate foundation."

This gives Dr. Boynton three graduate assistants for his department next year. Brattain will be the junior assistant; while Ted McAlister and Leonard Neuman will become graduate assistants of the senior grade. The junior grade pays $500, and the senior $600.

FRESHMAN HOCKEY TEAM LEADS IN CLASS CONTESTS

The sophomore girls' hockey team defeated the senior team in a game played yesterday afternoon by a score of 2 to 0. The freshmen are at the top of the class teams, with the season nearly over. The championship game will be played on Field Day, June 7.
