

COAST ELEEVENS RATED STRONG

Stanford and Huskies are Slated to Finish Well Up In Coast Conference

ALL TEAMS PROMISING

When the leading eight colleges on the coast start their grid teams on the pennant chase, the Pacific coast football fans are going to see the best season that the west has experienced for some time. Not only will the teams be fairly well matched but they will play a brand of football that is rarely seen.

An added impetus for the higher grade of football is the addition of four new coaches in the western colleges. They are Joe Maddock at the University of Oregon; Pop Warner at Stanford University; Clek Clark at Montana and Paul Schissler at O. A. C.

Outside of Oregon and California, the majority of the grid squads on the coast have lost only a handful of lettermen. When considering all the pre-season dope and after weighing the strength of the conference teams, it looks very much as if the reign of California will end this year, but as to the successor it is merely a toss-up between three or more schools as to who will annex the title as western football champions. The squads appearing as formidable pennant material are Washington, Stanford and U. S. C. with Idaho and California losing in the background. At this stage of the season, the strength of Oregon, and the Aggies

Steaks and Toast Feature on Menu Of Training Table

Toast eating championships were broken almost every day week before last at the football training table in the banquet room of the College Side Inn. Twenty big pullman loaves of bread about two feet long were cut up and toasted every day for the nourishment of Joe Maddock's lustrous gridiron warriors. The boys piled into the toast and butter like it was cake and pink tea.

Only the evening meal was served at the training table which was discontinued for last week. The first week started September 15 and lasted until September 21. It will be resumed again next week.

The menu consists of a hard boiled inflexibly routine of steak—a big piping hot serloin, buttered toast, a pint of milk, and baked potato with Boston baked beans and some kind of pudding—bread or rice, without any extra frills. They also have some kind of vegetable salad—most often tomato. If one takes a look at the weight chart up in the dressing room it appears like this food helped some of them to gain weight. They all like the food for the table looks as bare as the great Sahara desert when the forty-five huskies get through with the meal.

The meal is served in a cross between the plate and a family style. Each man has a big steak on his plate before him with a baked potato; his pint of milk and salad beside his plate. Big heaping plates of buttered toast and baked beans complete the outfit.

One time in the past week the waiters let the men in before their steaks were put on the table. When they came in again everything else was eaten up. The early season practices engendered an appetite among the men that was well nigh unsatisfiable.

PRACTICE STARTS SOON

Year by year basketball has been assuming more importance among the list of major intercollegiate sports. Especially in the East and Middle West have the college games been patronized by thousands in their immense basketball pavilions, constructed for that sport. The race for the conference title on the coast here was very close last year, with the teams very evenly matched. This coming season promises to be even more hotly contested, as nearly all of the conference members look to be even stronger than last year. It should be a big year in the annals of Coast basketball.

Oregon was in the running in last year's hoop race until the middle of the season when injuries broke up the team throwing it out of it's winning stride. Coach Reinhart in looking forward to the lineup of this year's quintet will have to replace the lengthy, phenomenal.

Coach Maddock Drills Varsity On Basic Points

Disciple of 'Hurry-up' Yost Works Fast

Joe Maddock is football coach at the University of Oregon. This every one knows. But there are a great many students that do not know Joe Maddock himself, just how he works, and just what he turns out.

In the first place Maddock is a product of the famous "Hurry-Up Yost," of Michigan. This is noticeable at once. His men are on the move all the time, all during practice, and he makes them move fast. In the second place, Maddock knows football, his men should play football every minute of every game.

So the new coach set about at once to build his football team from the ground up. Fundamentals, fundamentals, tackling, blocking, passing, kicking, these things his men were put to work at last spring, and the drill continued with the first practice this fall. Nor is it now over, nor will it ever be, for

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE
Sept. 27.—Willamette University at Salem, Ore.
Oct. 11.—Pacific University at Eugene, Ore.
Oct. 18.—Stanford University at Palo Alto, Calif.
Oct. 25.—Whitman College at Eugene, Ore.
Nov. 1.—University of Washington at Eugene, Ore.
Nov. 8.—University of Idaho at Moscow, Idaho.
Nov. 22.—Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis, Ore.
Nov. 27.—M. A. A. C. at Portland, Ore.

This year, with only a short time to train and practice, Oregon faces one of the hardest football schedules in history. Two pre-season games will be out of the way a week from Saturday, Willamette and Pacific, then on October 18, the long hard season begins in earnest. The Lem-on-Yellow grid men journey south to Palo Alto where they meet the Cardinals.

The next Saturday, October 25, Whitman comes here for what is expected to be one of the most interesting and spectacular games of the season. The light Whitman crowd is fast this year and real football work is expected from them.

November 1, Homecoming, will see one of the classic contests of the conference here—the annual battle between Washington and Oregon. The Huskies are as strong as ever—but Maddock's men will have several games' experience by that time. This guarantees real football.

The rest of the games are away
