To P. L. C.

His cheery voice and smile, his ready jest
That heartened all so brief a time ago,
Withdrawing, leave our lives but half the zest
They had e'er fortune laid our chieftain low.
What fools were we that scarcely ever guessed
How brave and stern a fight he fought below
The mein so gay and wise and undistressed
That to the world was all he chose to show!

Oh, chief, return and you shall find a host
Where but a few once fought at your right hand
And none will lag and none be too engrossed
In petty doubts to spring each to his post
On hearing once again the loved command
Whose months of waiting silence grieve us most.

—Anon.

All Is Not Said—

Receiving neither the plaudits of the multitudes from the grandstand, nor the physical elation of the crush and grind as body strikes body in the hot excitement of a fierce conflict on the gridiron, are the workers "up at the Shack."

The reporter spends hours running down a "news source" only to find on capture that the quarry is not informed on the "story" as was hoped; the night editor works past midnight and far into the early morning to see that the paper is safely "put to bed," in consequence receiving merciless notoriety at his eight o'clock for failure to listen attentively to a droning lecture; the day editor sits up late puzzling out the assignments for the morrow, and then puts in a day of feverish activity of directing, organizing, planning, outlining, and in between times answering an insistent telephone;—it is on such as these, laboring quietly, receiving criticism more often than praise, that the Emerald depends for its strength.

This morning are announced the staff appointments. The members chosen were selected on the basis of ability, dependability, and length of service. No freshmen were chosen on the regular writing staff.

However, within the next two or three weeks, further additions will be made, and it is probable that, of this number, several will be of the yearling class. And be it remembered that while the names printed on the editorial page are of those who form the backbone of the daily, there is a large number of aspirants, working faithfully and without present recognition, who must not be forgotten.

A realization three-times better than expectation is anything but discouraging. Just so, the one hundred-and-fifty per cent improvement adjudged by sports writer Gregory to the Oregon varsity since its first game exceeded Maddock's promise of fifty per cent.

It was reported that the annual struggle between the freshmen and the sophomores Saturday was really the "squarest" mix in years. However, it is observed that the second-year men had no difficulty in winning.

The several members of the faculty who did not remove their hats between halves at the Oregon-Pacific game during the playing of "Mighty Oregon" could have set a better example.

The R. O. T. C. cadet officers have again decided to lay siege to the national military fraternity, "Scabbard and Blade." May the battle be won.

Those who heard the University band the other day agree that it produces real music this year.

Fees are due and payable at the Administration building any day this week.

NEW ELIGIBILITY PLAN WORKED OUT BY W.A.A.

Hundred Point Requirement To Join Association

One hundred points won in competition will be a requirement for membership in the Women's Athletic association this year. In previous times, no requirement or restrictions were made concerning membership, and anyone interested could join by paying the fee, but this year, a different system has been worked out in order that the number of members will be restricted to those directly interested in athletics.

In order to make one hundred points, one must play on one class team or on two house teams, but once in the association, it is necessary to make one hundred points each year or become automatically dropped from membership. This plan encourages those already members to stay in the organization, and urges those who are freshmen to a greater interest in joining the association.

The purpose of the W. A. A. is to arouse interest in athletics among the women of the University and to further good sportsmanship. It sponsors do-nut and interclass sports, and offers awards to the winning organizations. Sweaters and letters are also awarded to individuals according to the point system.

Lists of those eligible for membership are being prepared by the Athletic Council, and general campaign for membership will be started the latter part of the week.

The "W. A. A. Handbook" will soon be distributed. It contains writeups and pictures of the various sports, and presents the constitution and by-laws, the point system, and a code of good sportsmanship. It is published for the purpose of familiarizing new students with the activities of the organization and stimulating interest in athletics.

Three of Eugene's prominent men have consented to act as members of the advisory board of the college Republican club. Mr. Darwin Bristow, one of the members, is vice-president of the First National bank and is chairman of the County Republican committee. The other two men, active in state republican circles, are Judge L. T. Harris, and Mr. Louis E. Bean.

Improvements Completed on University Grounds

Music Auditorium to be Ready For Use in Near Future

Several improvement projects on the University grounds have been recently completed or are now nearing completion, according to Mr. Fisher, superintendent of grounds and buildings.

Chief among these is the school of music's auditorium, which will be ready for use in about three weeks. The final painting and decorating work is now being done, and the seats only remain to be installed.

The new military drill shed, which is to be used in rainy weather, has been completed and was turned over to the military department Tuesday.

The grounds surrounding the barracks have been leveled off and seeded to lawn, and a new walk has been built in front of the barracks.

Horseshoe and croquet enthusiasts will be glad to learn that grounds for each of these games are being made adjacent to the tennis courts and will soon be ready for use.

The recent wet weather has made it necessary to postpone work on proposed walks at various places on the campus, probably until next spring, Mr. Fisher stated.

Washington State College.—Washington State for the first time is offering special aid to freshmen. Freshmen who were placed in class 3 are those who did not make high grades in high school, and who probably will not make high grades in college if permitted to go their
