

W.A.A. MEMBERSHIP DRIVE STARTS TODAY

Drive to End Saturday; Closed Membership

The Woman's Athletic association will begin their membership drive tonight at 6 o'clock, which will continue until Saturday. The purpose of the drive is to stimulate interest of the college women along athletic lines.

The membership chairman, Melba Byrom, has appointed the following girls to give talks in the women's organizations, between the hours of 6 and 7 tonight: Janet Wood, Mildred Crane, Golda Boone, Lee Luders, Grace Sullivan, Genevieve Speare, and Neva Service. They will appoint a girl in every organization to act as head of membership there.

The membership will be closed this year, which will add a distinctive element. Before, anyone interested, and willing to come three consecutive meetings could belong. Now, in order to be a member, you must have 100 points, received in any form of activities offered by the physical education department, and must make 100 points during the year to continue your membership. Any girl has a chance to make at least 100 points a year, even though she is not a major in the department.

Remember—those who are working for a letter or a sweater, only a W. A. A. member can win one.

Varsity Team Holds Stanford to 28-13

(Continued from page one) trate. Reed kicked goal and the score stood 7-0 in favor of the team that was doped by southern critics to be beaten by at least 40 points. The powerful and hefty Cardinal backfield together with an experienced and veteran team, proved to be stronger than the light northern team and therefore, it was only a question of time before Warner's machine scored.

Team Greatly Improved
Judging by results of some of the contests, Coach Maddock will have a tough battle against the Vandals in three weeks. Idaho will no doubt be the runner-up in the Northwest conference. The Vandals proved that they have much the stronger team by their outstanding victory over the W. S. C. team.

Explanation of the overwhelming victory of Washington over Whitman is really unnecessary. The Huskies are running true to their expected form and it will be only by a miracle that Washington will be prevented from going through the season without a clean slate. Whitman has played against two strong teams, O. A. C. and Washington, so the power of Borleske's eleven cannot be accurately estimated.

Whitman plays Oregon next Saturday and is hoping to break into the winning column by defeating the Varsity. The Missionaries have a strong aggregation and after playing two coast conference games should be in fair shape to cause some worry for Maddock.

O. A. C. Prospects Drop
The Aggies started the season with a rush that won them their first game by a 41 point margin. However, against stronger opposition, they barely defeated Multnomah club. Then on Saturday, against a team of proven strength, they failed and brought out the fact that they are far from being of championship caliber. But for the educated toe of Schulmerick, the Beavers would have been blanked by U. S. C. who beat them 17-3. The southern team outplayed them at every angle of the game. The Aggie offense proved to be weak, while the California team made gains at will.

Y.W.C.A. Campaign for Membership Started

The service and employment department has charge of infirmary service such as supplying reading matter, and campus employment work. So far this year, about 100 calls for work have been filled, most of which are permanent.

Bungalow Social Center
The social department is at the head of all Y. W. social events, such as the Sunday musicales and teas which are now being given every other Sunday at the bungalow. This department is trying to increase the popularity of the bungalow as a social center. In this connection the bungalow department also helps, for its purpose is to keep the building in good shape and make it as homely and comfortable as possible. Many organizations and social groups use the

DESCRIPTION IS GIVEN OF ENGLISH COLLEGES

Oxford and Cambridge Schools for the Rich, Says Former Rhodes Scholar

"There are two kinds of colleges in England," said Kirby Miller, former Rhodes scholar from the University of Oregon, and present instructor in philosophy, when speaking of the English universities. "First, is the provincial university, which is modelled after the American college, with its course system, and second is the type of university represented only by Oxford and Cambridge.

"Both Oxford and Cambridge grew up, connected with monasteries on the one side, and with private teachers on the other. In the beginning, some master would have a group of students, who would decide to live and study together in one hall. When one master died, another was elected to take his place. In the interests of standardizing scholarships, they finally organized themselves into a university. As an organization they had influence in the town politically, and later in the nation.

"The heads of the various schools, according to the size of the school, were elected to the position of vice-chancellor, in rotation. The universities were weak compared with the colleges, but politically they were very strong. In practically all cases, the vice-chancellor had more influence than the mayor of the town, and had the power of life and death over the students.

"The jealousy between the colleges and the university at last became so great," continued Mr. Miller, "that the professorship was practically destroyed, by withdrawal of salaries. The students, when they wished to attend a lecture, had to pay for it by voluntary contributions. This practically destroyed the university lecture system. It is only within the last fifty years that it has been rebuilt.

"Each college is equipped with tutors, who prepared the student for the university examination. At the end of the term, they have what is known as a 'handshaking.' At this, the tutor reports to the master the work of the student, and the master either congratulates or admonishes the latter, and wishes him a unprofitable vacation. None of this counts toward graduation, but is only preparatory to the final examination in the university.

"The chief functions of the university," said Mr. Miller, "are the policing of the streets, the granting of degrees, and the giving of examinations. The colleges are practically owned by the tutors and the fellows, who elect themselves. This makes them practically apart from political or any outside influence. They are sufficient unto themselves, except for one advisor, usually appointed by the King.

"Oxford and Cambridge are both universities for aristocrats and scholars. A goodly number of their students are there on scholarships of one sort or another. The rest are the sons of the wealthy. Only the provincial colleges are for the middle classes.

"The president of Magdalene college is said to have feared the influence of the large number of Rhodes scholars upon Oxford," Mr. Miller concluded. "However, after seeing these students, he said that he felt their influence was not to be feared. His judgment has since been confirmed."

bungalow; six or seven holding regular meetings there last year. The girl reserve department does practical club work in four different schools in Eugene, and keeps an interest before the younger girls.

More discussion groups, similar to the ones held last year will be given under the world fellowship department this year, probably in the winter term.

"The fellowship that comes from interesting girls in the work is worth a great deal, and is an important part of a student's education," said Miss Florence Magowan, secretary of the association. The halls and houses will probably be canvassed by the end of this week, but the students living in town will be harder to reach, and as it is desired to see each personally, the drive will probably take the greater part of the next two weeks.

Vitus Proves "Find"; Burton Speedy Back

(Continued from page one) so he did not have an opportunity to show what he had. He will undoubtedly get in many of the big games ahead.

Ken Burton was quarterback on the frosh squad of 1920 and one of the most promising players ever coached by Baz Williams. He turned out for varsity under Shy Huntington but ran into a bunch of hard luck in the way of injuries. Last year he was groomed for end, when Oregon needed experienced ends in the worst way possible, but more difficulties arose which prevented him from playing.

This year hard luck camped on his trail again for he had the misfortune to break three ribs in the Willamette game and received a bad cut in the mouth just before the Stanford game. However, he got into the last quarter of the first conference contest. He was unable to show his speed because the team was playing on the defensive all the time.

Joe has been playing him at half, where he will have an opportunity to show his speed to its best advantage. This, coupled with his "football sense," ought to place him in many of the varsity games. He is about the most dependable half which Maddock has in reserve. From the list of hard games ahead of Oregon on the conference schedule it looks like all of Oregon's reserves will be used.

Rooting Webfooters Visit San Francisco

We found one interesting place. It was a Bohemian grille with a number of snappy pictures on the wall. One of them showed two white men being cooked by a number of cannibals. I paid four-bits for a glass of lemonade to watch some rather lively numbers dance around a bit. The party wasn't rough although the dean of women might not have approved exactly.

Saturday at Palo Alto we saw the Stanford campus. Everyone liked it. The school is about the same size as Oregon, but hasn't nearly as many women. Stanford men say they like it fine.

The game was a humdinger to watch. When Anderson raced down that field for the first score and touchdown, we almost went mad. All the Oregon alums of that section were there, and we succeeded in making quite a bit of noise. The Oregon team played a good game. There was very little ragged playing. The day was extremely hot—so much so that most of the men in the bleachers were in shirt sleeves. The Oregon team, unused to the heat, tired easily. A game in the north might have shown a different score.

We left Palo Alto Saturday night at 7 o'clock, arriving at Eugene Monday morning at 2 a. m. I spent about $20 all told. The trip was worth it.

Three Men Chosen Rhodes Candidates

Application Date Set
The documentation of the candidates should be in by Saturday, October 25, at the latest. This should include the candidate's birth certificate, two photographs, various letters of recommendation, a written statement from the president and the registrar of the University, and a statement of his aims, activities, intellectual interests and what he intends to study at Oxford.

Any applications turned in after the date set will not be considered. Rhodes scholarship candidates should see Mrs. George Fitch, in the administration building, sometime today.

Spicy Programs Will Be Given at "Y" Mix

(Continued from page one) be similar to the "Yellow Fang," which was published last year with the exception that the name will be changed. It will contain all the dope on the game with Whitman. Campus traditions will be upset and the dark deeds of students and faculty members will be exposed. Several campus personalities will probably go into seclusion after the publication of this sheet.

The rally will start soon after dinner and the mix promises to take up the festivities where the rally leaves off, and carry them to a successful finish.

The way you like your hair best—you can keep it so!

PERHAPS you part your hair on the side. Perhaps in the middle. Perhaps you comb it straight back.

How long does it stay the way you like it best? Before Stacomb was introduced, men tried countless methods to make their hair lie smoothly and stay that way—from old-fashioned pomades, which only matted the hair and made it greasy, to plain water, which kept it in place an hour at the most and then left it

MEN TO HEAR SEERLEY LECTURE ON HYGIENE

Dr. Frank Newell Seerley, professor of psychology and social hygiene at the Y. M. C. A. college at Springfield, Massachusetts, and a nationally noted lecturer on social hygiene, will be on the campus Thursday and Friday as the guest of Dr. E. S. Conklin.

Three groups will hear Dr. Seerley under the auspices of the department of physical education, and Thursday night the lecturer will address University men at the Y. M. C. A. hut on sex hygiene. He is one of the few men who know how to treat this subject interestingly, said Mr. Davis, campus Y secretary, and all men should hear him.

During the war, Dr. Seerley had charge of the social hygiene work of the Y. M. C. A. in France and has since been on the faculty of the Y. M. C. A. college as professor of hygiene and psychology.

University High Holds Flag Pole Dedication

Formal dedication of the new flag pole presented to the University high school was held by the class of '24. The presentation address was made by Leslie Swarthout who was president of last year's graduating class. DeVerl Hempy, student body president of the high school this year, made the acceptance address. Following the talks, the flag salute and pledge were given by the student body.

Telephone Service Installed at Stadium

University of California.—(By P. I. N. S.)—A special telephone service is to be installed in the University of California Memorial Stadium to handle the congestion at football games. The telephone switchboard will be in the press box, overlooking the whole stadium, so that the operator will be able to oversee all the gates. By use of this service, men will be able to be shifted at a minute's time to any part of the Stadium.
