

MEN TURN OUT FOR BASKETBALL

Reinhart's Squad Practices Thrice a Week

MATERIAL PROMISING

Many Old Players Return at Other Schools

As basketball season draws nearer more men are turning out every practice. Coach Reinhart has a fairly large squad out three times a week.

Along with the last year's varsity men and substitutes, some good men are out from last year's frosh team. Among them are: Childs, Dallas, Kiminiki, Westergren, Flynn, Okerberger, and Reinhart. They are all good men but lack the experience a varsity man should have. However, with Hobson, Gowans, and Gillenwaters back, and a number of subs in line for positions, Reinhart thinks he has fairly good prospects.

Other Schools Practice

Practically all of the leading schools on the coast have started practice already. When the roll call was read at O. A. C. eight letter men answered. Their only loss is last year's captain, Gill. This is offset by the return of his brother and another letterman of the 1922 varsity. Washington has five lettermen back. Her two guards were graduated in the spring. Idaho lost only two men, Nelson, and Fiske. W. S. C. reports only one loss.

Fundamentals Stressed

Reinhart is still giving his men fundamentals. A man must be thoroughly trained in every department of the game before he can be of any real use to the team, he says. A good player cannot be exceptionally good in just one line, he must be exceptionally good in every line.

EXTENSION DIVISION SERVES WHOLE STATE

By sending on an average of two or three speakers a week as answers to calls from all parts of the state for lecturers, the University extension division is serving almost every type of community work through its lecture service, says Dr. Dan Clark of the extension division. This service does not necessarily call on faculty members.

On November 12, Dr. E. S. Conklin, head of the psychology department, will speak to the Women's Research club at Portland.

Professor A. L. Lomax recently made a trip down to Ashland; while Dean Edwin C. Robbins, of the school of business administration spoke to the Salem Lions club. Professor O. F. Stafford, of the chemistry department, spoke at Seaside on an economic phase of chemistry.

Mozelle Hair of the correspondence study department gives regular talks about the state on education by correspondence. Dr. Dan Clark is another one on the staff of lecturers.

Lecturing by means of radio broadcasting is another important function carried on by the lecture service of the extension division. Weekly lectures are broadcasted Friday evenings at 8 o'clock from station KGW of the Morning Oregonian.

HOMECOMING VISITOR SPEAKS TO STUDENTS

After leaving school, Abbott accepted a position on the Oregonian, then worked for the Community Chest. Finally entering his present work.

Abbott came back to the campus for Homecoming, and while here spoke to Prof. Ralph D. Casey's class in the specialized press, and Prof. W. F. G. Thacher's advertising class, telling the students of his work along publicity lines for the city of Longview.

While on the campus Abbott was on the varsity track team, editor of the Emerald in 1919-1920, member of Sigma Delta Chi, Friars, and the Order of the "O". He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

GUILT OF THE WORLD WAR IS NOW PLACED RELATIVELY

Donald Barnes Tells Cosmopolitan Club of the Nations' Part in the Struggle for Democracy

Guilt for the World War lies first upon Austria, secondly, Russia, thirdly, France and lastly Germany, declared Dr. Donald Barnes of the history department, speaking before a group of 30 members of the Cosmopolitan club at the Y. W. C. A. last evening. Dr. Barnes used as his topic, "Guilt of the War," stressing his talk chiefly on the happenings during June and July of 1914, and remarking that we must discriminate between the period from 1871 to 1914 and the immediate causes which brought about the bursting of the great war bubble and the beginning of the great struggle.

"Information given by all warring parties was made up and falsified," declared Dr. Barnes. "In 1917 the Bolsheviks published the documents of the Russian foreign office while in 1919 the German socialists published important documents of Germany. Having these documents from both sides we can extract the guilt question as follows: After the murder at Serajewo, the Austrian war party decided to make war at any cost. The court in Vienna succeeded in securing a blank promise from the Germans to help them in case of trouble.

"The guilt of Germany consisted in this criminal negligence of letting Austria do what she pleased. England tried to bring about an international settlement on the Austro-Serbian trouble but Russia and France were opposed to such a settlement. Russia mobilized, knowing such action would cause Germany to fall in line following the declaration of war.

"The rank of guilt then is Austria, Russia, France, and Germany. England can hardly be blamed while Belgium acted quite correctly." The topic for discussion at the next meeting, November 18, will be the "Japanese Immigration Law." S. Fukuda, a Japanese student on the campus, will state the Japanese side of the question.

ARTICLE BY DR. SMAIL APPEARS IN JOURNAL

Japanese Mathematician Lauds Doctor's Work

Dr. Lloyd L. Smail, assistant in the mathematics department, has recently had an article on "Theorems on Uniform Convergence of Infinite Products" published in the Tahoku Mathematical Journal, a Japanese magazine, the editor in chief of which is Professor T. Hayashi, one of Japan's leading mathematicians.

An interesting feature in regard to Dr. Smail's article is the fact that it was accepted at the same time as another article—"Triple Limits," which appeared in the August, 1923 issue of the journal. Due to the Japanese earthquake, the article did not appear until August, 1924, and it was received on the campus only last week. Dr. Smail thought it possible that it might have been destroyed at the time of the quake.

Dr. Smail has been working along these lines for about ten years, ever since the writing of his doctor's thesis at Columbia university on the subject of "Generalizations in the Theory of Summable Divergent Theories." During this time, he has published considerable material. Professor Hayashi spoke very highly of his book on "Elements of the Theory of Infinite Processes," stating that he meant to review it in the near future. Dr. Smail is now having a book published by the University.

Many American mathematicians have their works published in journals of other countries, according to Professor Edgar E. DeCou, of the mathematics department, because the output of research papers in the United States is so great that American journals are unable to publish all on account of lack of space.
