A Test

THE FACULTY of the University has consented to proclaiming Wednesday a holiday. Considering the more than usual number of special days and favors given the students this term, the faculty was truly, as stated by the chairman of the special student committee yesterday, "more than white."

In consideration of this, there will be a great jubilee tonight held as a celebration, fitting and joyous, to a most successful football season.

This event is to be given in honor of our Varsity and our coaches. Every student should be present, should wish to be present, in his capacity as host. It is one way in which the student body can express itself as pleased with the Oregon warriors and the men who trained them.

A most inadequate method of proving a good and courteous host will be shown by the student who leaves the campus today for his home. There will be those who will do that thing. We may only be grateful there are not more like them.

The true Oregon man and woman—the type which has made Oregon's reputation and will maintain that reputation—will be present at the big jollification tonight, helping give the football men a splendid, glowing evening, which they will remember with a happy feeling and knowing the hard, uphill fight this fall was worth-while, was worth doing, and will be worth doing again. We are grateful we have true Oregon men and women like that. We will know how many there are and who they are tonight.—D. L. W.

"Thank You, O. A. C."

Shortly after the pop of the final gun in the Saturday game a saddened rooster in vivid orange and black head-gear came slowly past the bleachers filled with a sea of victory-mad lemons yellow and green. He turned a smiling face up to meet that of a thousand or more loyal sons of Oregon.—Business of grasping his own hand and shaking it heartily.

Thus was the great-hearted spirit in which O. A. C. went down to defeat at the hands of her ancient rivals. A spirit which we of Oregon may well carry down through the years as a new tradition—a tradition of good fellowship and sportsmanlike attitude with our nearest of neighbors.

O. A. C., we thank you for your hospitality.—M. L. M.

Cause For Pride

THE GRANTING of Wednesday's holiday by the faculty, after the student committee had petitioned for such action, speaks well for relations between faculty and students. The action of the faculty committee was based solely on the request of the executive council. In granting the request, the administration showed its confidence in the judgment of the student officials.

A student body should feel no small amount of pride when it learns that its chosen representatives are held in such high esteem by the University administration that the administrative officials are willing to abide by the students' decision on matters that affect the University as a whole.—L. K. B.

Holding the Sophomore Informal on Saturday instead of Friday did not lessen the success of the event. It was as successful as it was unique. "And it was that!"

Everyone's eyes light with pleasurable anticipation at the mention of Thanksgiving, except the turkeys.

What became of that annoying field gun after Oregon's touchdown?

INLAND PRINTER TAKES ARTICLE BY C. S. PIL

An article entitled "Early Korean Moveable Type," by C. S. Pil, senior in the journalism department, has been accepted by the Inland Printer. The article will be used at the earliest opportunity, states the editor of the Inland Printer. The writer considered in his article the history of Korean type, and its relation to the Japanese type, and compared the two types as to style and utility.

CHEERING CO-EDS CAUSE CORNELL FOOTBALL JINX

Cornell University.—That Cornell evidently entertains the idea that its football "jinx" is caused by the presence of co-eds in the cheering section is made evident by an editorial in the Cornell Sun: "Mixed duets of 'Cornell, I yell, yell, yell Cornell,' do not particularly enhance the effect of cheering. Feminine squeals of glee and screams are charming in their place, but that place is not the cheering section of the Cornell Crescent."

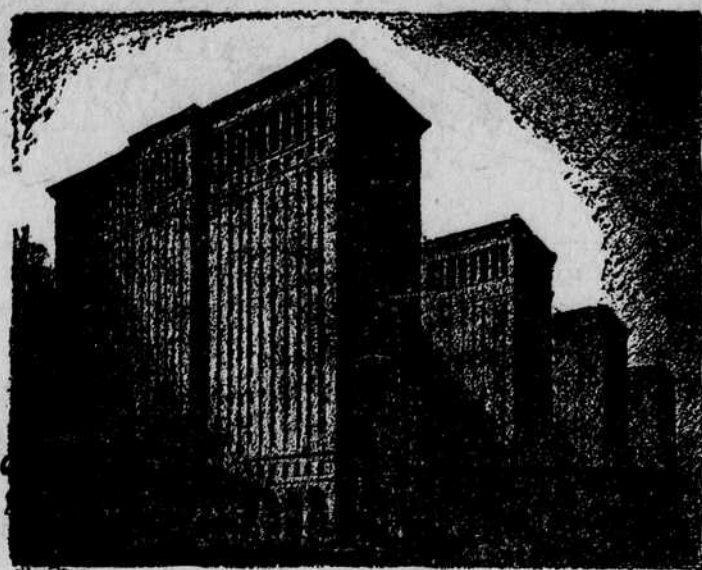

At the Theatres

THE REX—Second day, Richard Barthelmess in "Classmates," a drama of West Point and the jungles of South America; Comedy, Walter Hiers in "A Fat Chance," a ton of fun; International News events; Rosner, featured organist in atmospheric accompaniment to the picture on the mighty Wurlitzer.

THE CASTLE—Last day, "The Story Without a Name," the Photoplay Magazine Prize Title story by Arthur Slinger, featuring Antonio Moreno and Agnes Ayers in the screen's first RADIO romance; Sunshine Comedy, "Her Ball and Chain;" Kinogram News Weekly; Castle musical settings.

Coming: Colleen Moore in "The Perfect Flapper," with Sydney Chaplin and Frank Mayo.

General Motors Building Detroit, Michigan

"In Terms of the Colossal"

THE co-ordination of commercial strength, architectural vision and engineering skill which created this titanic quadruple office building represents the motive and creative force which has turned the eyes of the world toward this type of American architecture.

This, the largest office building in the world, possesses fundamentally magnificent largeness in its conception, and a clean-cut directness in its execution which place it among the most significant of American buildings.

With such existing structural achievements no architectural future is impossible, no project too vast or too complex to come readily to our imagination.

Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.

DO YOU LIKE MACARONI?

Macaroni is a common food—but still it has something about it,—something foreign that makes it different from the other staples. Served with a chili sauce it makes a real Italian lunch. We think perhaps of some little back alley in Italy where great strings of macaroni are sold to brilliantly dressed peasants,—the favorite dish of a country.

But we get tired of just one way of serving. Have you ever tried to see how many ways there are to vary it? There is macaroni and tomato sauce, made just a little different with green peppers and topped with bread crumbs; macaroni cut into small pieces with melted butter poured over it; macaroni baked with cheese that bursts in boiling bubbles on the table. You can't help liking macaroni that tastes like that.
