

TRACK SEASON OF FALL CLOSES AT MEET TODAY

Sixty Aspirants Compete On Hayward Field at 2:15 This Afternoon

JAVELIN CHAMPION OF WORLD WILL BE HERE

Janni Myrra is Olympic Record Holder at Two Games in 1920 and 1924

The world's champion javelin thrower will be out on Hayward field this afternoon at the regular fall track meet to give an exhibition of javelin throwing which promises to be the best ever performed on Hayward field. Janni Myrra, businesswoman-athlete from Finland, and just returned from a tour of Japan, was invited down to the meet to give an exhibition of javelin throwing by Bill Hayward, who has seen him perform in three Olympic games. Twice has Myrra held the world's record for the javelin. Once in 1920 with a record heave of 213, 1 and 1/2 inches and in the last Olympic game with a throw of 207 feet. Both throws took first places.

Eleven Events Scheduled

The main track meet is scheduled to start at 2:15 with over 60 men in competition in the eleven events. This meet rings down the curtain for fall track. The group of men turning out have been training all fall and this is the culmination of the season. Bill is running off the meet in order to get a lineup on the men with whom he will have to work when the track season starts in earnest next term.

The track on Hayward field has been put in good shape and an extra inch of cinders has been put on the oval. However, it will not be slowed down very much. A full list of officials have been selected to run the meet off as efficiently as possible.

Men Mostly Inexperienced

The men turning out for the meet are mostly inexperienced men or men who are running their first time in college competition. No great times are expected but some good races are assured. Bill Hayward expressed himself as well pleased with the fall turnout but he still maintains that there are many men who are not turning out for track who are much better than those who are out there already.

That is the situation which he has to go up against every season. As a means of stirring up more interest in track and to get more men out for it he is planning an interfraternity track meet sometime next term.

Track is an all year around proposition. This does not end the track work but is merely a competition to live things up for the aspirants. Janni Myrra is scheduled to arrive at noon today from Portland and will show his javelin work (Continued on Page Four)

COAST COLLEGE MEETING SET

Conference Will Be Held on December 12 and 13; All Schools Are Represented

OREGON TO SEND MEN H. C. Howe and Benefiel To Help Solve Questions Of Eligibility, Schedules

The Pacific Coast Conference meeting will be held at the Multnomah hotel in Portland on Thursday and Friday, 11th and 12th of December. At this meeting representatives from each college that is a member of the conference will be present.

This meeting will be presided over by William R. La Porte, president, who is from the University of Southern California. H. V. Carpenter of Washington State College is secretary of the conference.

Representatives Named

The University of Oregon's representatives at this conference will be Professor H. C. Howe, the faculty representative and Jack Benefiel, graduate manager, who will arrange the University of Oregon's football schedule for 1925.

Problems Outlined

Although each representative of the conference will have problems of his own to present at the meeting a number of problems have already been outlined for the meeting. The problem of allowing college baseball players to play on semi-pro, American Legion, army or National Guard teams on Sundays before the college schedule is completed is to be brought up. The ruling does not allow this now.

Boardman High Has Opening on Faculty

Any person who is interested in teaching in the high school at Boardman, is urged to make an application immediately at the appointment bureau, education department, according to an announcement made Friday.

DATES WILL BE PERMITTED DURING THIS WEEK-END

Heads of houses have decided to allow girls to have dates on two nights of this week-end on account of the high school conference. Whether dates are to be allowed on Sunday night or not is decided by each organization individually. Most houses are keeping it closed. Saturday night only of next week will be open for dates.

STATE HIGH SCHOOL CONFERENCE OPENS

STUDENTS HEAR NEWSPAPERMEN

N. J. Levinson, Hal E. Hoss, Fred Lockley, Give Talks Before School Editors

Association Members Hear Advice on Preparation Of Material for Annual

The experience of older newspaper men should enable the delegates to better their own journalism, according to the opinion expressed by Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism, who was the first speaker on the program of the Oregon High School Press association. Dean Allen spoke of the first convention of this kind held on the campus five years ago. Representatives from eight schools met in a little wooden building no longer standing. "Some of the people you are meeting here will compose the same group you will be meeting repeatedly in future circumstances and work in the next fifty years," he said. "You are citizens of the American republic, the state will be good or otherwise, just as you make it."

Hal Hoss Gives Talk

Hal E. Hoss, president of the Oregon State Editorial association and managing editor of the Oregon City Enterprise, delivered an illustrated lecture of a practical nature on the preparation of school annuals for the printer and some of the problems confronting the editors of these publications.

Writer Speaks on Features

Fred Lockley, feature writer on the staff of the Oregon Journal, spoke on the feature story and its source. "It is the little things that lead to feature articles," said Mr. Lockley, "and it is possible to get them almost any place." He related some curious experiences and humorous incidents which had befallen him in his work. The last point the speaker brought out was the joy that comes with feature writing. In this work one comes in contact with every type of human being all of whom have interesting stories.

Round Table Held

The substance and makeup of the editorial page, of a high school paper was the subject discussed under the leadership of Dean Allen, at the round table conference. The relation of editorial space to news columns, the length of editorials, (Continued on Page Four)

BANQUET ENTERTAINS HIGH SCHOOL VISITORS

Preppers See Vaudeville by Campus Talent

An evening of diversion was inserted into the routine of the high school editorial and press conferences last night when all the delegates were entertained with a banquet and college night vaudeville at the Women's building.

At 6:15 all delegates and University guests filed into the auditorium from the alumni hall where covers for approximately 450 people were laid. At the close of the meal short talks were given by presidents of the associations and members of the faculty.

Dean Eric W. Allen of the University of journalism acted as toastmaster. John E. Black, press association president, Donald C. Beelar, student body officer's president, Virginia Judy Esterly, dean of women; John Straub, dean of men; and Edwin C. Tapfer, chairman of the University of Oregon Associated Students committee, responded to introductions by the toastmaster.

A resolution regretting the absence of P. L. Campbell, President of the University, was unanimously adopted by the association. The "Pi-d Pipers" furnished music throughout the meal. Following the banquet Oregon Knights cleared the hall, placed chairs, and the College night vaudeville was staged.

The program consisted of ten well balanced acts. The program consisted of ten well program with a curtain raiser consisting of several popular selections. Virgil Mulkey, popular campus magician followed with a series of mysterious performances. Elmer Clark entertained with xylophone solos. "The Wrong Number," a humor (Continued on Page Three)

STUDENT BODY OFFICERS MEET

H.D. Sheldon, A. C. Strange, And Randall Jones Speak At Morning Meeting

Athletics and Activities Discussed by Educators And School Delegates

The fifth annual conference of the association of High School student body officers and the Oregon High School Press Association opened on the campus yesterday morning with an initial joint meeting at 9:00 o'clock in the music auditorium. A message of welcome was given by Dr. H. D. Sheldon, dean of the school of education, and A. C. Strange, superintendent of public schools in Astoria, spoke on "Better Relationship among Oregon High Schools."

After a speech by Randall Jones, president of the University student body, on the aims of the conference, the session divided, the student body officers remaining in the music auditorium, the editors and managers meeting in Villard hall, and the officers of Girls' Leagues adjourning to Guild hall, where sessions lasting until noon were held.

Student Sports Discussed

Donald C. Beelar, president of the association of student body officers, presided over the meeting of officers, and after the reading of the minutes and the opening remarks of the president, Randall Jones spoke on "Sports in Student Life."

"Competitive Sports," was the subject discussed by Harry A. Scott, professor of physical education, followed by an address on "Oregon High School Athletics," by C. W. Boettcher, superintendent of schools at The Dalles. He outlined the various stages through which high school athletics have passed, from the unscrupulous play to win, regardless of methods, to the present sportsmanlike period ruled over by the state leagues.

Principal Speaks on Finance

"State Survey of High School Activities," was the topic which F. L. Stetson, professor of education, spoke upon. "The importance of every member of the school, whether faculty or student, in belonging to the student body, was emphasized by Professor Stetson. He condemned the practice of preventing students from belonging to the student body because of the failure to meet certain grade requirements. Reports from seventy-nine high schools of the state on the subject of student activities show that student body organization is (Continued on Page Three)

READ SHAKSPEARE AND BIBLE, SAYS JOE LEVINSON, EDITORIAL WRITER

(By M. L. M.)
"There are those," to express an old proverb in a new way, "who are born with the god of luck near at hand, and those who find him upon their travels through life, and those who have him dog their trails until they finally lend an ear to his enchantment." And there are those, we might add, who answer to "wrong number," and stumble inadvertently upon the god of luck when his back is turned.
Joe Levinson, of the Portland Telegram, might be named among the last. An Indianapolis paper wrote a letter to a "Joseph Levinson" offering him a job as its correspondent. Somehow or other it went astray and landed in the mail box of Joe, the hero of this story, who was but fourteen years old at the time. He took the job and held it and has since held many another position, at present acting as chief editorial writer of the Portland Evening Telegram.

Mr. Levinson, who might be called "The Grand Old Man of Portland Journalism" as well as one of the most delightful humorists of his time, is the kind of a person one would expect to find behind a page of worth while editorials, for he has all those qualities which go to make up an all around man.

In stature, Joe is not very tall. He has iron gray hair and slate colored eyes from which gleam kindly humor, coupled with an unbounding sympathy for human nature, in all its degrees of goodness and badness. So much for a picture of the man by a casual observer, and coming closer we see that his colors are true, for he is (Continued on Page Four)

Sidelights on the Convention

A significant thing about the conference is the large number of girls who are student body officers.

Some woman was very much surprised to learn that Addis Welch, secretary of the committee in charge of the conference, could not tell her offhand, the names of the delegates from Bay City.

Consternation prevailed on both sides of the case, when girls who had names sounding like boys, were sent to the men's houses.

To say that all who were expected, came, would be putting it mildly.

"The frosh have it," is the general opinion in regard to the Canyonville high school, where twenty out of the thirty students, are freshmen, with only two seniors. (Continued on Page Three)

Finding lodging places for some girls who arrived on the 1:00 a. m. train, was the "illuminating" experience of one of the masculine members of the committee.

Long hair is again discernible, among our younger sisters.

Ed Tapfer has been a very popular young man, with his long distance telephone calls, special delivery letters, and questions in classrooms for enlightenment concerning his whereabouts.

The feature writer must have "a seeing eye, hearing ear, and an understanding heart," said Mr. Fred Lockley, feature writer on the staff of the Oregon Journal in his address before the press conference yesterday.
