Lulled to Sleep

AT APPROXIMATELY this time last year much noise was heard on the local campus about the inroads being made upon the parochial school system by the foreign demon known as "Oxforditis." Certain western pilgrims had crusaded to the Holy Land of learning and had returned bearing the torch of intellectual freedom.

Touching the torch to these sacred halls of learning they stood back and said, "Behold, a conflagration shall ensue!" The conflagration consisted of several sputters, a crackle, and some smoke.

To be specific: in the opinion of the newly made cosmopolites, and other not so newly made, the University of Oregon was to become a real intellectual center. Pupils were to become students, and students scholars. All this to be brought about by the introduction of an unknown, foreign element into student life called independent thinking and research. Instead of being herded in droves or being led by the nose, students were, with the proper guidance, to educate themselves.

The system was started in some departments, and in certain it seems to maintain a foothold. In others it sickened and died. It has not swept over the institution, causing a revolution and a rebuilding. It has not even been carried to a consummation or given a fair trial by those of its adherents most eager for its adoption.

What might be the trouble? Was the soil to be tilled too sterile, or were the tillers unskilled? Are university students—Oregon students—incapable of receiving any other type of education than the present orthodox brand, admittedly inferior? Will someone please speak up?—L. K. B.

THE GREAT Shields game to be played Christmas is now an assured success in every way. Thousands of tickets have been sold, which means that Tiny will now have everything he needs to aid his recovery.

One of the outstanding features of the affair is the fact that it is intercollegiate in every sense of the word. The willing and eager cooperation that has been accorded by every institution in the Northwest means that football is a game that is now binding these colleges and universities together, not making them arch enemies, as in days of old.

Another pleasing feature is the ready response from former football players. Almost every man that wore moleskins at some time between 1900 and the present time has volunteered to at least make a start in the game. That shows that they are generous, that they love football, and that they are willing to be of service to a brother of the gridiron.

The game will make history in more ways than one. Let's go!

At 9 o'clock tomorrow morning seven students, all of whom aspire to become Oregon's next representative at Oxford, will assemble before the judges at the University club in Portland. Each has devoted months of study in preparation for the occasion, and since but one can receive the appointment, six must be satisfied with the reward which comes from work conscientiously done.

Someone was heard to remark today: "if blue jeans for the sophomore men—why not sunbonnets for the girls?"

CHAIRMAN APPOINTED FOR ORATION CONTEST

At a meeting of the State Oratorical association held in Salem last Saturday, it was decided to make the peace oration annual contest a permanent affair by appointing a chairman to have charge of the work. Professor Fred Bale, of Albany college, was chosen to take over the work of organization.

Other matters taken up by the college representatives at the meeting were a proposed extempore speaking contest to be held at the same time as the Old Line oratory contest, and a women's oratory contest. Both were put aside for future decision. Dates for contests to be held next spring were decided definitely by the delegates.

Communications

Letters to the EMERALD from students and faculty members are welcomed, but must be signed and worded concisely. If it is desired, the writer's name will be kept out of print. It must be understood that the editor reserves the right to reject communications.

To the Editor:

All students, and especially freshmen who may still be unfamiliar with the examination customs of the University, are cautioned against bringing to examination rooms, during the December term finals, any books, notes, or other material extraneous to the examination. Only material prescribed by the examiner for the course should be brought.

Frequently in the past students, although innocent of cheating, have come under suspicion, and have been reported to the Student Advisory committee for trial, because they carelessly allowed notebooks, or sheets with notes, or textbooks to lie around their chairs.

Cheating in examinations is strictly forbidden. Upon discovery and conviction of cheating in final examinations, the usual penalty is suspension or dismissal from the University. Several trials for improper conduct in term quizzes and term work have been held recently.

Fraternities are asked to impress the foregoing facts upon their freshmen members.

Karl W. Oathank, Secretary,
Student Advisory Committee.

Six Prize Contests Are Open to Students

Two Cups will be Awarded to Best Junior Man and Woman

Additional interest has been aroused in the contests for which prizes are offered by the announcement that the Murray Warner prize, for the best essay on some topic designed to increase interest in the general subject of improved relations between the Pacific Coast states and the Orient, has been raised to $200. The Murray Warner contest is open to all students and is susceptible to treatment from several points of view. The prize was won last year by Ted Kinashige.

There are six cash donations and two cups which can be won this year.

The Edison Marshall Short Story prize, awarded by Edison Marshall, noted American writer and former student at Oregon, for the best original short story written by a student of the University, carries a cash prize of $50. This was won last year by Elnora Keltner.

The Garment Center Building
New York City
WALTER M. MASON, Architect
Drawn by Hugh Ferriss

HERE the new architecture expresses itself in great vigorous masses which climb upward into the sky with a pyramidal profile—gigantic, irregular, arresting. An earlier, conventional building on the near corner is overshadowed, engulfed in towering masses of the newer building which are prophetic of an architecture of the future which is vividly stimulating to the imagination.

Certainly modern invention—modern engineering skill and organization, will prove more than equal to the demands of the architecture of the future.

award of $150. It was won last time by Claude Robinson. The Beckmann prize of $100 is awarded under the same conditions as the Falling prize and is won by the second best oration. Lawrence Cook won in 1924.

MRS. C. C. STONE, Manager

EVERLYN DEAR:—

A touch of red lends a holiday air to the atmosphere; so we got a lovely cyclamen in a cream colored jardiniere, beautifully decorated with floral designs, at Raup's Floral Shop.

Exams and Christmas shopping don't go well together. I've made out my list and Saturday morning I'm going a-shopping. For Mrs. Grey I'm going to get a box of Lowney's Chocolates. The Red Cross Drug Store has a fine selection of boxes of this famous Boston candy, and sweets are always appreciated.

At Phares' Shop, the girls got some ready-stamped vanity and buffet sets, and pillow slips, which will make up into adorable gifts in just a short time. The designs are all easily worked.

Don't you think that a pen and pencil set would be a fine gift for Peg? Skeies have quite a variety in them. They carry Shearer and Eversharp sets in both gold and silver.

As dad sent me money to get whatever I wanted for Christmas, I purchased an electric waffle iron at White's Electric Shop. What fun we will have next term making waffles in the room!

We are marking part of the decorations for our Christmas trees. At Underwood and Elliott's, we got some corn that pops into snow-like flakes, which strung with large cranberries, will be quite attractive trimmings.

At Hasting Sisters, Hazel got an ideal shampoo. Her hair is so glossy and soft like silk now, that several of us have made appointments for shampoos, too.

As the porch boxes had become so scraggly, we got four birch-bark covered boxes, filled with Christmas plants that have flowers of appropriate colors, at the University Florist. The pepper plants, especially, are appropriate at this season of the year.

You remember Allison Clark, don't you? She just succumbed to the idea of bobbing her long golden locks. Peg and I took her down to Schwering and Spicers and held her hands while the barber cut her heavy hair. I was afraid she would regret it, but so far she is very well satisfied with the sense of freedom it gives her. It is most becoming. Little tendrils curl delightfully at the nape of her neck.

Now, don't forget your promise to meet me next week. I know mother and the rest will be at the train, but then I'd love to have you there, too.

CAROL.
