

PENNSYLVANIA AND CALIFORNIA MEET JAN. 1

Andy Smith Will Play Team Against Former Coach

(Continued from page one) strength which is capable of winning games, but he also admits that the Bears have won a few games themselves. Horrell comes out with a statement to this effect: "The Quakers can be beaten." And that is all he says.

Of course neither Smith or Horrell are over-confident. They fully realize that either team can win; that the odds are apparently equal. But still they have a more optimistic word than has Glenn Warner of Stanford.

Warner Is Pessimistic
Warner and his warriors are to play what is conceded the most powerful grid machine in the world this year. He absolutely admits that his chances of victory are slim. However, he still has the optimism to see light through one hole, which is that the underdog at the start often finishes with a victory which very few had expected.

Warner's backfield has been crippled by the loss of his backfield ace, Norman Cleavland, through ineligibility. Cleavland was fast and shifty, starting in every game he played in. It is possible that Neverson will be able to get in the game. His foot is slowly getting better and there is a chance it will be well enough for him to use it by New Years. If he does play, Stanford's chances of a victory rise a couple of notches, for the big blonde plays a defensive game which is unequalled on the coast and he uses his 205 pounds to good advantage on line smashes. Unlike most big men he is fast and gets around with unusual alertness.

FOOTBALL ENDS WITH OREGON RATING HIGH

Besides these lettermen, Joe Maddock has a rather impressive array of additional grid talent that will prove valuable in building up a powerful 1925 machine.

Schedule Is Hard
With an exceptionally hard schedule outlined for the varsity next season, and with the California game coming within a week of the opening of the 1925 schedule, it will be necessary to hold a strenuous spring practice coupled with a heavy and effective fall workout in order to cope with the powerful eleven on the program.

Should Oregon go through the coming stiff grid schedule in a creditable manner, it is highly probable that an eastern tilt will be sought by the coaches to end off the season.

Operatic Sports

By J. L. D.

It has been stated by a New York football enthusiast that the sport is getting tough opposition as the opera season gets underway. The following is a translation of the enthusiast's explanation in plain English, retaining, of course, his unique terminology:

One of the largest crowds of the season turned out last night to see Catti-Cassa's opera singers battle with "Faust" at the Metropolitan Opera House. The singers not only witnessed a good stiff scrap, but saw the Catti-Gassa system triumph over the slow-moving German opus. The score was in 2-4 time.

The golden horseshoe was slow in filling up. The cheering section in the upper tier was all seated before the footlights came on. But there was many vacant places among the $5.50 seats due to the fact that scalpers were asking $60 for a pair of ducats on the 40-yard line.

But now the stands were starting to liven up. Mrs. Van Gelt had just entered her box with a bandage of diamonds around her neck. Mrs. Lot-to Jack arrived at her sideline seat in moleskins and a lariat of pearls.

Conductor Serafin of the orchestra and Capt. Martinelli of the opera stars met in the wings and tossed a coin for the choice of acoustics. Martinelli won the toss and elected to perform behind the footlights.

As the opera progressed it was seen that the Metropolitan was weak at mezzo-soprano. The left side of the orchestra kept banging away at this weakness for telling gains. As the first act ended, Madame Rethberg was penalized 15 yard for holding a high note too long.

BETWEEN HALVES OF THE OPERA THE SONGBIRDS GAINED SEVEN BOWS. THEY COULD HAVE GOT MORE.

In the second half of the opera the voices seemed much stronger. Conductor Serafin kept his players under perfect control by giving them the straight-arm.

At this point in the opera the ballet started kicking. It was a fine exhibition of well-directed toe work, but it failed to make up for the lack of practice shown by the super-numeraries. The supers were continually missing their signals and getting in the way. They didn't even wear their helmets right.

THE METROPOLITAN'S NEXT OPERA WILL BE PLAYED TOMORROW NIGHT. "FALSTAFF" IS ON THE SCHEDULE AND CATTI-GASSA WILL USE HIS FIRST STRING LINEUP IN THE LEADING ROLES.

NEW TALENT EXPOSED BY DOUGHNUT SEASON

ing the outstanding men of the games played it would be impossible to leave out such names as "Bat" Nelson, forward; Tom Powers, guard; Eberhardt, center; McCormack, forward; Hallaway, forward; M. Woods, center; "Swede" Nelson, guard; Turner, forward; Watson, guard; Smith, forward; Benson, forward, and Johnson, guard. These men were picked by their scoring ability and general floorwork and not that they are the only men showing up well in the league. There is a possibility that some of them will shine on the several varsity teams. There were other men showing good form and a general knowledge of basketball but they were held to only one game played and were not given a very good chance to show their real worth.

Material Is Promising
According to the men in charge of the physical education department it is hoped that the majority of the men in the doughnut league will at least try for places on the different squads. This statement does not mean, however, that other men in college should refrain from trying out just because they weren't entered on some doughnut team.

CROSSWORD PUZZLES STUDENTS' WATERLOO

McGILL UNIVERSITY — McGill University has been smitten with the cross-word puzzle craze, and has suffered accordingly in the academic line. It has been found that most of those that have failed lately in their examinations were devotees of this pastime. A group of young men has found this fad so dangerous that a club has been organized to stamp out its practice on the campus there.

LITTLE MINUTES MAKE AN HOUR

Little minutes spent at odd jobs here and there during the day often mean a whole hour gone. You are always looking for a means of dispensing with some of these little odd jobs in just a little less time.

Wouldn't your ordering take much less time if you could do it all with one phone call? The fact that meat, bakery goods and groceries can all be ordered at one time at the Table Supply Company makes it most convenient for the customer.

Take, for instance, your morning ordering. Do you have to call a grocery store, a butcher and then a baker? If so, just how much time do you spend in your actual ordering and
