Sylvia Hurd Gives Informal
Talk on Indian People

NORWAY TODAY'S TOPIC

Italy, Korea and Turkey
Considered Yesterday

The intimate life of people of foreign nations, their customs and traditions as well as their living conditions and their family life are some of the minor topics brought up and discussed under the general headings of "Racial Characteristics and History" and the "Social and Industrial Aspects" of the various nations studied by the World Fellowship discussion groups.

At the meeting of the group studying India at the Bungalow at 5:00 yesterday, Sylvia Hurd, for four years a missionary in India and at present a student on the campus, gave an informal talk on the "Social and Industrial Aspects" of the country. She dwelt mainly on the customs and traditions of the Hindu people and members of the group were at liberty to interrupt with questions. Miss Hurd has been assisting Deloris Pearson in the leadership of this group and as signified by the attendance it has been taken up with a great deal of interest. The next meeting of the group has been set for February 11, and will be held at the Anchorage during the noon hour.

Korea Is Discussed

Gladys Calef met for the third time with her group, which is studying Korea, yesterday at the Anchorage during the dinner hour. Instead of holding the meetings every other week as was originally planned, Miss Calef states that the girls showed so much interest in the studying of Korea that they prefer to hold the meetings every week, thereby keeping the subject alive. The topic for discussion at this meeting was the "Social and Industrial Aspects of Korea." There was no speaker, the girls all taking part in the discussion. Miss Calef hopes to have a speaker who has visited Korea give a talk at the next meeting.

At noon yesterday Maxine Koen met at the Anchorage with her group, which has taken up Italy. This was the second meeting of the group and the discussion centered upon the "Racial Characteristics and the History of Italy." Several members of the group contributed information which they had looked up during the past two weeks. Discussion followed the presentation of this information.

Race Characteristics Studied

The fourth group which met yesterday was the group studying Turkey. Edna Spenker is the leader of the group and the meeting was held at the Bungalow during the dinner hour. The topic was the "Racial Characteristics and History of Turkey." Miss Spenker gave a talk, followed by discussion among the members of the group.

Today noon the group studying Norway meets at the Anchorage. The subject for discussion will be the "Racial Characteristics and History of Norway." Members of the group have been assigned sub-topics which they will present at this time. Frances Dodds is the leader of the group.

ETIQUET, AN ART

Decorum is fast becoming an art. Vast funds of material, setting forth in intricate detail, the essentials of behaviour in the drawing room, the dining room, the ballroom, and in almost every other room from the cellar to the attic, Decorum of the streets, of the church, of the theatre, of the opera is regulated by laws numerous enough to astound a state legislator. Editors appear to be vying with one another in describing that which is "du fait" and that which is not. "Don'ts" by the hundred confront students of the subject. They must be mastered if the modern man or woman is to be perfectly behaved.

One of the many books of etiquette, now raining heavily on the public, avers that a man commits an awful "boner" when, dining in a restaurant, he picks a fallen fork from the floor. That function, we are told, belongs to the waiter. Likewise it is set forth that dipping both hands into a finger bowl simultaneously, instead of one hand at a time, is a crime warranting any penalty from capital punishment to excommunication.

Volumes have been printed on the subject. More are in the process

OREGON KNIGHTS FOUNDED HERE IN AUTUMN OF 1920

Underclass Pep and Traditions Organization Originally Functioned as Freshman Committee

(By P. B.)

The present underclass organization of Oregon Knights was formed in the fall of 1920 by a group of resolute freshmen who felt that freshmen violators of traditions could better be handled within the class than outside. With two representatives from each living organization present the group met in the "Y" hut and formed a group known as Frotraco, meaning Frosh tradition committee. The group received support from Carlton Savage, president of the student body, and a large paddle was chained to the large fir tree behind the senior bench. Feeling that the punishment would be more effective from outside the first year class the group called on the "Order of the O" to administer punishment to tradition breakers.

On the campus at the University of Washington another underclass organization was formed to cooperate with the yell king for better pep rallies and to help at football games. This group rapidly became the leading underclass organization at Washington under the name of Knights of the Hook. This group early looked with favor on expansion into a national organization, and in the spring of 1920 installed of publication, and they all treat of a subject supposed to be complete in itself. A thing is done in this manner or that because, authorities tell us, time has wrought unconscious agreement thereon. But, if we are to believe the books themselves, this "unconscious agreement" does not apply in all cases. Opinion differs on a number of the intricacies of good form.

There is, however, universal concurrence on the one fundamental of behavior. Decorum, the exponents tell us, is not a confusing array of laws to be mastered simply for the satisfaction of knowing them. Like all other laws, they tell us, rules of conduct exist to maintain decency and order in the relations of man to man. Consideration for others is the one fundamental upon which all etiquets rests.

Then why must the subject be made so difficult? "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," the Bible says. That is etiquet which, if carried out, will prevent all "boners."—Daily Californian.

TRUE PHILANTHROPY

Making money work for the needs of mankind—that is what George Eastman, head of the kodak company, and James B. Duke, tobacco manufacturer, are doing with their millions. The two men, neither of them college graduates, have recently contributed $52,500,000 to education, the bulk of which goes to the colleges. These gifts bring their total contributions to more than $100,000,000.

Both men have worked since boyhood. They are what we usually call self-made business men. They have had very little schoolroom education. George Eastman left school to work for $3 a week. He later invented the kodak, but his success came only after a long and hard fight for exclusive rights to the inventions he controlled. James B. Duke, as a boy, began his work in a log cabin preparing tobacco leaves for the market. He is now the tobacco king, but it took a great deal of work and business ability to amass his fortune.

Men of education often look askance at the self-made business man because he has at times attempted to discredit higher education. He has been described as hard hearted. He is said to care only for the almighty dollar. Yet this is how George Eastman, a typical example of the American business man, explained his gift: "If a man has wealth he has to make a choice. He can keep it together leaving it for others to administer after he is dead, or he can get it into action and have fun while he is still alive. I prefer getting it into action and adapting it to human needs." James Duke says that he endeavored to make provision for the needs of mankind along physical, mental, and spiritual lines.

Judging from their actions these men, who have worked among men all their lives, consider that higher education offers the greatest service to mankind. Certainly they should know.—Daily Californian.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY HAS 'AIR COLLEGE' FOR HISTORY

New York University.—The University's air college will open its spring term this week. The "appliance" represented by thousands of letters from radio students has given the faculty of the "air college" the idea. The first of the lectures, which are to be broadcasted nightly, will be on American history.

Frotraco, as Oregon Knights of Intercollegiate Knights, and also granted chapters at the same time to Washington State college and the University of Idaho. Lester Foran, of the University of Washington, was the first national president.

The Intercollegiate Knights now have seven chapters with many locals petitioning for chapters. The purpose under the national laws is to promote and foster college spirit, to establish and maintain friendship between schools, and to cherish and conserve their respective traditions.

The former members of Frotraco were taken in, and the organization was composed of a sophomore and freshman from each living organization, except the Duke, who serves until the middle of his junior year. The yell king is an ex-officio member of the organizations. The dukes of the Oregon Knights have been as follows: James Meek, Edward Tappan, Charles Norton and Parker Branin. The last named is the present duke. Thomas Mahoney and Harry Hennings are the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Royal Scribe, respectively.

The present national president is Robert Fields of the University of Idaho.

debate, the University team won the debate. The University of California will not participate in a radio debate this year.

The Oregon team assembled in the broadcasting studio of station KGW of the Morning Oregonian, while the California team's speeches were broadcasted from radio KLX at Oakland.

"When a date is set it will be submitted to Richard V. Haller, director of radio KGW. He must approve and agree upon this date," said Alfred Powers. "He will take the matter up with the California station for the Stanford debate team. The extension division is now working on these plans."

Professor Hugh E. Rosson, debate coach, with the members of the Oregon debate team has been enthusiastic for a second radio debate," said Powers. "He and the team are working out even a better program than the one which was so well received last year."

"In Professor Rosson's statement to the extension division recently he suggested that 'The Japanese exclusion Act' be chosen as the topic," said Powers. "As far as is known this will be the subject." Neither Oregon nor Stanford have agreed yet which shall take the affirmative and which the negative."

OXFORD STUDENTS FINED FOR ATTENDING DANCES

Oxford University.—Collection of fines for dancing is an important source of revenue. While mixed dances are not absolutely barred, the university authorities are so opposed to them that every Oxford student caught in such an act must pay $5 penalty. Dance rooms are raided every night by university proctors, and the students who cannot escape by back alleys are regu-

Lettermen to Be Back

Every man that won a letter on last fall's varsity, with the exception of Captain Reed, is expected to be out for the 1925 team. Sinclair, powerful 195 pound center of the 1923 team, will very likely be out next fall but his schedule does not permit his working out this spring.

Bart Spellman, line coach, is expected back from Seattle by the middle of next week and will take over the coaching of the first line defense on his arrival.

Press representatives present at the luncheon were: Sam Wilderman, Portland Oregonian and Eugene Guard; George Godfrey, Christian Science Monitor; Parker Branin, Portland Telegram; Ken Cooper, Portland Journal; Ward Cook and Dick Eekman, Seattle Post-Intelligencer; Wilbur Wester, Eugene Register; and Dick Godfrey, Seattle Times. George Godfrey presided at the meeting.
