Dick Smith and 1900 Team

Row next to back—Stubling, Jakeway, Zeigler, Thurston, Wagner, Bush.
Front row—Gorrell, Payne, Scott and Watts. Bradley, as mascot.

The team in the above picture in which Dick Smith played halfback, accomplished a feat that stamped it as a leading Pacific Coast eleven when it defeated California 2-0. In the days of 1900, there was no modern facilities for the aid and comfort of football men. A football locker room was unknown, and a hot shower was only available to one or two men, as a tiny little water heater heated only a few gallons of water. Each day, the players would be forced to put on wet and muddy suits, as during the season a player generally never had the opportunity to dry out his one football suit.

Following are the standings of the six highest individual scorers in the Pacific Coast basketball conference:

F.G.	F.T.	Total
Ridings, O. A. C.	58	5 63
Hesketh, Wash.	42	4 46
Illman, Mont.	38	8 46
Okerberg, Ore.	30	10 40
Hale, Wash.	36	4 40
Anderson, Wash.	28	8 36

The reason that Red Ridings is now temporarily leading the scoring list is the fact that the Aggies have played eight coast conference games, while Oregon and Washington have participated in but five conference contests. Okerberg heads the list for the greatest number of free throws, with 10 points to his credit.

Washington leads the conference for the number of points scored with 182. The Aggies are second with 178, while Oregon is third with 162 points.

With the freshman coaching position left open by the appointment of "Baz" Williams as varsity line mentor, University athletic directors are now faced with the problem of finding a suitable leader for the Yearlings.

The importance of this position is evidenced by the fact that two recent Frosh coaches are now occupying varsity coaching positions. Billy Reinhart, versatile athletic mentor, is now coaching in three major sports. Reinhart is basketball, baseball and assistant football coach. Besides these three positions, any one of which is normally filled by one man, Billy is teaching several physical education classes. "Baz" Williams will be line coach both in the spring and fall. Both these men have risen from the ranks of frosh football coaches.

Therefore if high positions in the athletic department are to be filled by recruits from the freshman coaching job, it is highly important that the University authorities exercise considerable care and judgment in whom they select as Williams' successor.

If an Oregon graduate is selected as Frosh coach, and it is highly probable that this will be the case, then it is interesting to note the success of one recent Oregon graduate. This man is Moe Sax, quarterback on the varsity eleven last year. It is really unnecessary to cite the brilliant record that Sax made as Lincoln high school coach last year. His record in developing a national championship football team in one season is outstanding. Yesterday, Moe Sax left for Stanford, where he will attempt to learn some more points on the grid game from Glenn Warner, during the Cardinals' spring practice. This is a factor that has aided Sax to succeed—he is always willing to learn. Sax is one of several Oregon alumni that could ably handle the frosh job, and if necessary fill the vacancy that might be created in the future by a resignation of some man on the varsity coaching staff.

However, it is generally known that the athletic directors of the University are looking for a man that can coach three sports; Frosh football, baseball and basketball. This would undoubtedly eliminate Moe Sax as an aspirant. The remaining candidates that could fill the job, would be "Spike" Leslie. Leslie is now coaching out at Eugene high school and making a creditable record. It is rumored about that "Prink" Callison is also being considered as a candidate. But if the University authorities want an all-around frosh coach, Spike Leslie is probably the outstanding applicant from the authorities' viewpoint.

Since the world's heavyweight wrestling championship title passed from "Strangler" Lewis to "Big" Munn the interest in wrestling has been revived. Sport followers up to this time had little interest in the game as the title was kept by three men, "Strangler" Lewis, Lewis Stecker, and Stanislaus Zbyszko. When Nunn, the former college athlete, defeated the "Strangler" and the monopoly of the title was broken.

To prove that the fans are taking more interest either in the sport or in the new champion was shown during the recent title bout between Munn and Zbyszko, held in Kansas City. Over 12,000 people packed the arena. If Lewis and the Pole had been matched not more than 4,000 fans would have attended. This shows that "Big" Munn the bonecrusher, has pleased the fans when he copped the title from the "Strangler."

Since Oregon's victory over Idaho and the defeat by O. A. C. the fans on the campus have also taken more interest in wrestling. Although the varsity did lose to the Aggies the meet was contested and on a more even basis than in previous years. A wrestling team is not built in a year and through the efforts of Coach Widmer the varsity should have a team next year that will put in a strong bid for the coast title.

Carroll Ford, Oregon's 125-pounder, has shown in the two meets, that he will give some of the amateur title holders a real tussle, if he enters the Pacific Coast championships, which will be held in Portland soon. Nixon, of O. A. C., one of the best grapplers, bowed to Ford in the meet last Saturday.

EXTENSION MONITOR IN THIRTEENTH YEAR

Issue Contains Articles By Mrs. Mable E. McClain

"Among the New Books by Mable E. McClain, is the important article in the new issue of the extension division Monitor. "With this issue the Monitor enters upon its thirteenth year of service to the students of the extension division," said Mozelle Hair, editor.

Mrs. McClain's article, written by one who has made a study of books her life work, is a discussion on some of the modern masterpieces in literature which are now available in book stores and libraries. Since Mrs. McClain has been a desk librarian in the University library for years she has been in a position to select and criticize the cream of the books that come from the publisher.

In urging books in the home for the children, Mrs. McClain advances the argument that books lay the basis for life. They present human nature in its essence. She pointed out that Teddy Roosevelt attributed his success to a page in one of Henry M. Stanley's volumes. "It kindled his faith and fixed his will to be the man he finally became," writes Mrs. McClain in the Monitor.

Several new classics are discussed by the University reference librarian in her article. "Beasts, Men and Gods," by Dr. Ossendowski, a chronicle of his escapes from the reds in Siberia, is among the books discussed by Mrs. McClain. In science for the layman she tells about a book by Ludwig Lewisohn, "The Creative Life." "Meneken will call forth many a feminine scream of rage or masculine grunt of disapproval by his book, "In Defense of Women," in the opinion of the author of the article.

"The Peasant" by Reymont, which won the nobel prize, is among the books in fiction recommended by Mrs. McClain. "Children of the Age," by Knut Hansson, is a book having Scandinavia as its background. In Germany, Wasserman's "The World's Illusion" is attracting considerable attention. In England, Galsworthy's "The White Monkey" has been attracting considerable attention. Walpole's "The Old Ladies" and Miss Sinclair's "Arnold Waterlow" and "The Green Hat," by Michael Arlen, are among the outstanding books in the British Isles. In this country there is "The Avalanche," by Earnest Poole, "The Little French Girl," by Anne Sedgwick, and "So Big," by Edna Ferber, are among the most popular. Mrs. McClain also discussed books on art and artists, as well as biographies.

The Monitor for this issue contains "Dialogue Studies" by students in feature writing. These dialogues are by the members of the feature writing class, being the result of an assignment given by the instructor.

"A Lull in the Storm" is the title of an English assignment written by one of the correspondence students. The editor of the Monitor thought it was so good, according to her statement, that she thought it worth running in the Monitor. It appeals to practically every one of the senses.

There is a short article on the two summer sessions to be held this summer from June 22 to July 31, in Eugene and Portland. "The Friendly Spirit," and "The Key to Progress" are the captions on the two editorials. There is an article on "Study Periods."

tute of great problem without the addition of those allowed entrance by the quota basis," said Miss Clower. "The quota plan is unsound, illogical and out of keeping with the public opinion of the United States."
"The negative says that racial homogeneity must be maintained," said Beatrice Mason in rebuttal for the affirmative, "but how can only 146 Japanese greatly affect this?"
The duty of the United States does not end, said Miss Clower in rebuttal, when Japanese arrive here because they settle in colonies and create a grave economic problem. Because other nations have set the precedent of exclusion, it is not a logical reason for the United States to take similar action, stated Miss Bateman in her rebuttal.

"Assimilation is the foremost problem," said Miss Fairchild in return rebuttal. "Economics demand that immigration laws be tested by assimilation possibilities." In her final rebuttal Miss Bateman stated that sociologists do not consider assimilation a pertinent question in regard to non-assimilative race, and as for monopolizing land, only 1-6 of 1 per cent of land in California is owned by Japanese.

CATHOLIC RELIGION SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

Rev. E. V. O'Hara Explains Popular Prejudices

The fundamentals of the Catholic church and religion were discussed by Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, priest of the Eugene Catholic church, in his talk on "Catholic Christianity" in Alumni hall Wednesday evening.

The name "Roman Catholic," he explained, has a double significance; it was called Roman in virtue of having its center at Rome, and Catholic because of its universality. The traditional authority of the church as being based on the charge of Christ to Peter, who became the first bishop of Rome, was reviewed.

Some of the popular prejudices and misconceptions of the uninformed were mentioned by the speaker. Among these he included the misinterpretation of the belief in the infallibility of the Pope. The infallibility, he explained, extended merely to his position as interpreter of tradition and history; in such things, the Pope is the final authority and it is in that capacity that he is considered infallible. The place and purpose of the various types of prayer, the Catholic attitude toward the Bible and its use, and the value and purpose of the confessional were some of the subjects explained.
