Should the Oregon basketball team win their remaining game this week; that is to defeat the Washington five at Seattle, it will be necessary for Oregon to play off the tie with the Aggies. The Pacific Coast conference rules specify that in the case of a tie, that a series of three games be played on a neutral floor.

Floors available for a championship series, include the Multnomah club floor at Portland and the Willamette university floor at Salem. The Multnomah floor is really better than the Aggie or Oregon floors. Another point in favor of this place is the fact that a fair sized crowd could witness these tilts, inasmuch as an estimated capacity of the Salem gym is about 2000 fans.

However, should Billy Reinhart and the team consent to the idea that the games be played at Corvallis, the series could be held there. (Nevertheless it should be stipulated in the agreement that Oregon rooters be given a better place to sit than the customary "50" seat space in the back of the balcony).

This week-end, the University athletic teams participate in an unusual number of events. On Friday, the frosh basketball team play Washington high school from Portland, here. On Saturday the varsity swimming team competes at home. The Lemon Yellow quintet meets Washington at Seattle on Saturday. Oregon's frosh and varsity wrestling teams will meet O. A. C.'s team at Corvallis Monday afternoon and evening.

Followers of sport will soon turn their thoughts to baseball again. The various college teams will start practicing within the next three weeks. Work has already begun at Oregon. The varsity hurlers and receivers have been holding nightly practice in the outdoor annex of the men's gym. The call for all prospects will probably be issued immediately after the conference basketball title is issued.

William Reinhart will be the head coach and with his corps of assistants will whip a creditable aggregation in shape for the opening tilt with Pacific university, to be held here April 24.

Jack Dempsey, king of the world heavyweight pugilists, and a recent bridegroom, sometime ago announced that he was through with the ring. Whether he will defend his title against the winner of the Harry Wills-Tommy Gibbons battle is a question. However it is known that Dempsey broke his ring retirement which he announced before his marriage to Estella Taylor, the actress.

Asserting a desire to rid himself of fat that had started to take the place of muscle, the champ went through a workout Wednesday, for the first time in several months, shadow-boxing, wrestling a bit, sparring in broken stretches a total of 12 rounds. The title holder stated that other than a desire to return to physical fitness, there was no significance in his resumption of training. He weighed 205 pounds after the workout. It may be true that Jack is looking forward to a championship bout that will net him another fortune. The outcome remains to be seen.

Joe Benjamin, who won the Pacific Coast lightweight championship from Jack Silver in San Francisco last Monday, surprised the followers of the fistic game by coming out of his shell and really putting up a wonderful exhibition of boxing. Many sport critics say that Benjamin, who by the way is a protegee of Jack Dempsey, could be lightweight champion if he would take boxing more seriously and not think of his beautiful face.

Another doughnut athletic event will terminate with the final handball game this afternoon between Sigma Nu and the winner of the Oregon club and Sigma Pi Tau contest. The winning team of this final contest will be acclaimed champion in this division.

Doughnut athletics are delegated for the purpose of exciting interest in athletics of the majority of students on the campus besides, giving them necessary competitive experience and fulfilling their desire for combat.

Under this heading practically all phases of athletic events are covered, such as basketball, wrestling, handball, track, baseball, and swimming. Announcements are sent to the various organizations in regard to the rules covering the entrance of teams and covering all details necessary for participation, by the office of the physical education department.

So far between twelve and twenty organizations have placed full teams in each sport. This shows the intense interest taken in athletics at the University.

These sports tend to serve a secondary purpose also which gives the students an idea of the intricate details of the various athletic events indulged in by the varsity and freshman teams.

The youth of the country again came to the fore last Saturday in Santa Barbara, California, when Davy Martin, aged 14 and a few months, won the club championship of the Montecito Golf club, defeating C. W. Hauge of the LaSumbre club by 3 up and 2 to play. By this feat young Davy can now lay claim to being the youngest Country club champion in the United States and probably the world. Davy is said to have started playing golf a couple of years ago, learning as a caddy and after mastering the principles, joining a club.

hair tail at the other, which was used for quietly "knocking 'em out."

Bayonets, snowshoes, cutlasses, a Turkish coffee pot, and an opium pipe can only be cited as examples of the articles which have been gathered from opposite ends of the earth and now hang together, their days of service over but breathing to one who looks at them, memories of activity and association with far away lands and strange, weird people.

A Holland gin jug, a brandy decanter, wicker-covered demi-johns, an English beer jug, are also objects that have outlived their usefulness and yet, could they speak, they might tell of convivial feasts or jovial gatherings, at which they played no small part.

A collection of old china is also a feature of the place. A willow-ware plate lies in juxtaposition to a cheap imitation, gathered as a souvenir.

Of course the place would not be complete without a fireplace. Mr. Shumaker says he sometimes uses the fireplace for cooking, although there is a gas stove in the kitchen. The iron tea-kettle which hangs on the crane was brought across the plains, many years ago.

A pet snake lives in back of the fireplace, Mr. Shumaker says, and occasionally comes out to catch a field mouse for dinner. There is also a bull pup around the cabin, so there is no lack of company.

The cabin is sometimes used as a meeting place for Ye Tabard Inn, writers' fraternity, and is often made an informal meeting place for some of the boys who find an attraction and a companionship about the place and its owner that makes for a feeling of ease and good fellowship. They sit around and talk in front of the fireplace, read, study, pop corn, or play the phonograph. Incidentally the records for the phonograph compose probably one of the finest sets on the campus. "The boys know they don't have to be on their dignity here," said Mr. Shumaker. "I'm glad to have them and they know it, but there's no formal politeness. When I want them to go, I kick them out."

The story of the cabin would not be complete unless the ghost was mentioned. It is not surprising that such a place, with its old traditions and the ancient objects making up the various collections, should have a ghost. Mr. Shumaker has never seen or heard the ghost, but he is confident there is one. We are rather inclined to think, however, that it is not a malicious ghost or one seeking revenge, but rather a watchful and beneficent spirit, overlooking the welfare of the queer old place and seeing that its atmosphere of comradeship and good-feeling, with a certain respect for the historical associations of the cabin, is not violated.

Oregon Defeats Idaho In Speedy Game, 26 to 24; Tight Defense Is Shown

second period when Greene, Idaho guard, scored on another foul by Jost, bringing the count to 14 all. Nedros stepped in again with a free throw on Gillenwaters foul to tie the score at 22, with three minutes to play. Another field goal was scored by Okerberg, who was fouled in the attempt to throw for the basket by Nedros. Okerberg converted the free throw. Okerberg scored the Webfoot's final tally, when he converted Nedro's personal.

Fight Is Bitter

Jost was replaced in the second half by Gillenwater when the former was taken out on personals. The fight was one of the bitterest either team has played during the season. This leaves Oregon with a chance to tie Oregon Aggies for first place in the conference, the only obstacle being Washington, whom the Webfoot met at Seattle, Saturday night. Idaho was thrown out of the running for second place with this defeat.

FOUR NEW ARTICLES SOLD BY STUDENTS

Four more articles have been sold by members of Professor Ralph D. Casey's specialized press class, bringing the total sales for this year to eighteen.

Margaret Vincent sold a story to the Ford Owner and Dealer about the disposal of used cars to students who desire them at a low cost for summer trips and to drive to athletic events held away from the campus. Cylbert McClellan marketed a story on the opening of Laraway's new music shop on Willamette street to a music magazine.

M. J. Carr sold a story on the Eugene Farmers' Creamery to the Dairy Farmer of Des Moines, Iowa. A fourth story was sold by Sybil McKnight to the American Garage and Auto Dealer describing the automatic air and water service at the Bend Garage, Bend, Oregon.

Fishing and Life Insurance are opposites. The man who takes out a Life Insurance policy has done something while fishing is the most artistic way of doing nothing there is.

CHARACTER READING RADIO LECTURE TOPIC

"Character Reading, True and False" is the title of the address to be given over KGW at 8 tonight by Dr. Kimball Young, professor of psychology in the University of Oregon.

Stars and conduct or astrology; handwriting and character, or chiromancy; what lines of the palm reveal, or palmistry; character reading by the lines in the soles of the feet or pedomanicy; phrenology and physiognomy are some popular favorites which Dr. Young will review and appraise in the light of science.

He will show the advisability "of a healthy skepticism concerning these easy methods of character reading" and refers these honestly seeking knowledge in these subjects to public libraries, school principals and psychologists.

TRADITIONS COMMITTEE TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

The traditions committee, recently appointed by Randall Jones, student body president, will hold a preliminary meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the alumni office, to discuss traditions of the University. "There has been a discussion lately of some of our traditions," Jeanette Calkins, alumni secretary, said yesterday, "and we will do research on them in an effort to determine which traditions shall be retained on the campus." The committee is composed of three alumni and three students—Miss Calkins, Imogene Lewis, Delbert Oberbauer, John MacGregor, Jean DuPaul and Louie Anderson.
