Edgar Lee Masters

ANOTHER poet. Edgar Lee Masters will be heard on the campus in the Woman's building on the evening of March 9, brought here by the lecture committee of the Associated Students. He is the fourth poet to appear under the same auspices.

The campus treasures delightful memories of Vachel Lindsay reading "The Congo," "The Chinese Nightingale," and doing the potato dance in the most charming fashion. The campus remembers Carl Sandburg of the melancholy eyes and poems of steel and blood, who turned troubadour for an evening and sang and chanted to music from his guitar. Last year there was John Neihardt shaking his heavy mane of hair over his "Poet's Town," and dining and talking with the students.

Mr. Masters is running true to poetic form by coming with the spring. He does not, however, write pink poems for pale people, as anyone who has read his "Spoon River Anthology" well knows. Let us welcome him as a poet and a personality.

The Shadow Before

COMING events, it is said, cast their shadow before. This certainly is true of Junior week-end, which, though it comes late in the spring, is even now being planned by the committee in charge. The student body sees the shadow with certain feelings of anticipation, for Junior week-end is one of the distinctly Oregon traditions.

Traditions just as traditions have no savory flavor, but Junior week-end is one of the most cherished. Homecoming is another which contains genuine spice. A half century is a comparatively youthful age for a university to develop time-honored traditions. Compared to really ancient universities—the venerable names of Bologna, Oxford, the University of Paris—we have not even progressed to an easily designated adolescence. Our traditions, the habits of the infant University, must therefore receive careful attention.

Much of the beauty and dignity of customs which grow up about universities and colleges has its beginning in the elimination of things which do not count, and the establishing of those which do count on a firmer basis. Last year the decision to eliminate wholesale invitations to high school students throughout the state added much to the general good by eliminating confusion. This did not mean that the University took an inhospitable attitude toward these visitors, but that it disapproved of the hit and miss system of entertainment, and the continued presence of the "professional Junior week-end." And so the festivities were safeguarded, as they should continue to be as occasions arise.

When the Well Runs Dry

"GEORGE H. C. Smythe, the Canadian canoeist who recently jumped into the Seine with his canoe from the Invalides bridge, today started on a voyage to Rome in his diminutive craft. Smythe will paddle up the Seine as far as the river Yonne and by that stream will reach the Burgundy canal."

—News Item.

All of which reminds the young students that the dire disease of spring fever has been reached, without hopes of an anti-toxin. The weather improves, and the mill race, which, for a long time continued in a dry and unfortunate state, is itself again.

Now that the water has been turned back into the historic place for it according to all good Oregon songs, it will be the more appreciated and enjoyed. And as for founts of learning—!

BIRCH HALL AT U. OF IOWA IS DORMITORY DE LUXE

Iowa State University.—The very latest in women's dormitories is Birch hall at the Iowa State University. The distinctive features are: the men's cloak room adjoining the parlors, three large parlors with a balcony from one of them extending out over the dining room, hair shampooing, drying room, rooms reserved for the physical education department, an incinerator, and two spacious, well equipped kitchenettes. There are three large dining rooms, one with the bay windows, a well arranged kitchen, storage rooms and laundry. Birch hall will hold approximately 108 girls. The new addition will take care of about 70 women.

CALIFORNIA TROJAN STAFF TO EDIT LOS ANGELES PAPER

University of Southern California.—Nine members of the staff of the University of Southern California Trojan are to have practical experience in journalism. For a short time they will edit the Fullerton Tribune, the newspaper of a Los Angeles suburb. Not only will the editorial work be taken over, but members of the advertising class will write, sell, and arrange display advertising, giving the university students complete charge of everything but the actual printing and delivering. Other papers are to be edited during the next few weeks.

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB USES INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

University of Minnesota.—Espanto, the new international language, was used exclusively at a recent meeting of the Cosmopolitan club of the University of Minnesota. Songs were sung in Esperanto, a play was read and plans for its presentation, partly in English and partly in Esperanto in connection with a series of tableaux to be given by the Cosmopolitan club.

ONE YEAR RULE NOW USED AT WEST POINT ACADEMY

West Point.—For the first time in its existence the one year rule will be established at West Point. This means that there will be a freshman team there in the future for all sports, thus barring all men for varsity competition unless they have been at the Point for one year.

GERMAN UNIVERSITIES OFFER FELLOWSHIPS

Six Requirements Listed For Contestants

Fellowships, open to both men and women, will be granted by German universities for the year of 1925 and will be awarded by April 1. This announcement was made by the American German Student Exchange which states that they are offered in the following fields: political science, economics, social economy, sociology, history, literature, psychology, education, international law, commerce and journalism.

These fellowships are established to do their part toward bringing about international friendship and good-will by creating a tradition of cooperation and reciprocity between America and Germany. Through an interchange of students of social and political science to study the institutions and psychology of the two countries this aim is hoped to be reached.

Requirements for eligibility are the following: (1) American citizenship; (2) A thorough knowledge of German; (3) Ability to carry on work at a German university, which implies at least two years in an American college or university; (4) Ability to do independent study and research; (5) A health certificate; (6) Good moral character and adaptability.

Application blanks and further information may be obtained from the American German Student Exchange, Institute of International Education, 522 Fifth avenue, New York City. These application blanks, properly filled out, must be in the hands of the committee on selection by March 15. Preference in selection will be given to applicants between the ages of 20 and 30, and particularly to those who are potential leaders in public life. The fellowships cover tuition, board and lodging during the academic term. Students will be expected to furnish a sufficient amount of money for traveling expenses to and from the German university and to care for vacations.

American Fellows will be required to report at the universities to which they are assigned at the time of official opening and to reside in Germany at least ten months. Fellows may indicate the university which they wish to attend, but in general their choice will be determined by their subject of study.

TWO FACULTY MEMBERS TO GIVE EXTENSION TALKS

Dr. Edmund S. Conklin, head of the psychology department, and Peter L. Spencer of the education department, are the two faculty members who will speak through the extension division lecture service this week-end. On Friday, Dr. Conklin will speak to the Portland Advertising club concerning the psychology of advertising. Saturday Professor Spencer will speak to the Junction City Teachers' Institute.

WYOMING STUDENTS PICK COWBOY AS TYPICAL MAN

University of Wyoming.—Students at Wyoming university have appropriately chosen the cowboy as the type of manhood which they consider representative of the state and the qualities which the university holds paramount.

At the Theatres

HEILIG—Tonight: Western Vaudeville, presenting five excellent acts drawn directly from big time circuits in the east. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad," the greatest masterpiece of film-dom.

Coming: "The Cat and Canary," Broadway stage success, Otis Skinner in "Pancho Sanza."

THE REX—First day: Reginald Denny in "Oh, Doctor," Harry Leon Wilson's far famed farce, rocking with laughter, thrills and romance, with Mary Astor and a great cast supporting; more fun, "Powdered Chicken," a rich dish of tasty tickles; Kinogram News Events; Robert V. Hainsworth in mirthful musical setting on the mighty Wurlitzer organ.

Coming: Constance Talmadge in "Her Night of Romance," with Ronald Coleman and James Rennie.

For Young Men
There is nothing like a
STETSON

MOST young men today know the importance of looking fit. Good appearance counts much in the game of life. The young man who dresses with taste has a decided advantage.

But—it is surprising how little thought the average man gives to his hat. It is his crown, yet he seems to stop dressing at the neck.

Be careful in your selection of your headwear. When you buy a hat, select a Stetson. Its style is right, its quality means long wear.
