At the close of every basketball season it is customary for all-star teams to be picked. The writers do not expect the readers to agree with them, in fact, they hope they do not. Disagreement is usually cause for argument. As baseball and track are more than a month distant, a friendly discussion and interchange of opinion would take the edge off a dull season. Furthermore, it fills space, and the meat tickets for most of the scribes depend entirely on how much stuff the city editor does not throw in the basket.

The first all-star team to make its appearance was published in the Eugene Guard this week. It selected two Oregon players, Okerberger, center, and Westergren, guard; two Oregon Aggie players, Stoddard, guard, and Ridings, forward; and one Washingtonian, Hesketh, forward.

BILL MULLIGAN'S TEAM NAMES WESTERGREEN

Bill Mulligan of Spokane, who umpired yesterday's Oregon-Aggie game, picked an all-northwest conference team. He selected a Gonzaga player at forward instead of Hesketh; Illman of Montana at center, instead of Okerberger; and Hale of Washington, guard, instead of Stoddard. Both writers picked Ridings and Westergren. As Mulligan is from Spokane, he naturally would be expected to select at least one Gonzaga player. Otherwise, perhaps, he would not be so popular with the Spokane folks. As it is, the vanity of the Spokaneites is completely satisfied.

OREGON PLAYERS HIGH IN SCORING

Okerberg is selected by the Eugene Guard because he is: "By far the best center. He seldom misses a 'cripple' and has outjumped every center he has faced this year. He leads the league in scoring with 91 points, shooting 33 baskets and converting 25 foul throws. He has been watched closer than any other man in the conference, including Ridings and Hesketh. Okerberg is said to have established a high-point record in the Northwest conference."

Westergren was chosen, because, according to the writer: "He has no equal at guard. He probably is the fastest guard in the conference and his ability to shoot baskets has been one of the features of the large scores Oregon has been running up this season."

Points scored by the all-stars follow:

	Field Goals	Foul Throws	Total Points
Okerberg	33	25	91
Hesketh	35	8	78
Westergren	30	16	76
Ridings	33	7	73
Stoddard	15	3	33

SCORE SYSTEM IN WRESTLING NEEDS CHANGE

The fact that the Pacific coast conference wrestling has no definite accepted method of scoring has been brought out during the meets among the colleges of the coast.

During the meet with O. A. C. at Corvallis, held last Monday, although Oregon lost by a score of 70 to 8 there was no definite strength given of the varsity in the scoring.

Coach Reed of O. A. C. and Coach Widmer of Oregon got together and decided to try to have a system adopted that would be uniform and prevent disputes. Under the present rules it is possible to figure merits any one of three ways; three points for a fall, two for a decision, and one for each man in a draw. Or, some figure five for fall, four for decision and three apiece for draws.

The method that is favored by Coaches Widmer, and Reed of O. A. C. is to give eight points to the winner of a fall, six to winner of decision and three to each man in a draw. Both mentors believe this method should be standardized for the benefit of the public and also will aid the newspaper writers to all get the same score. The best method to bring about the change for next year is for the various coaches to communicate with each other before the opening for the season next year.

Another rule that is becoming absolute is the length of time an opponent must be on top to win the bout. In the rules no definite time limit is set. Before meets the coaches must get together and set a time limit. That is if it is agreed that a man must have a 30 second advantage over his opponent he wins the bout. Often it is left up to the discretion of a referee. It is important that a definite time should be set in the rules.

JAKE SCHAEFER AGAIN WINS TITLE

During the past week the 18.2 balkline billiard world's championship has been in progress. Young Jake Schaefer for the second time won the crown from Willie Hoppe who has held it for 17 years. From all indications time is beginning to tell on the retiring champion for he did not put up his usual strong game. In the tournament Schaefer also set a world's record by running 400 points from the spot.

FANDOM TURNS TO DIAMOND GOSSIP

The sport pages of the metropolitan papers are beginning to carry the news of the baseball training of the organized teams. Whether Washington will again be able to cop the world's championship remains to be seen. With the return of Walter Johnson, star twirler, to the fold. Manager Harris has a strong pitching staff. The big question is—will the Senators let the championship go to their heads and not repeat or will they forget the past and work for the future? —Pete Laurs.

Students, Although Blind, Find Reason to Smile

Robbins and Scoville See World Through Veil of Darkness

They smile. Through a veil of eternal darkness—though they are not permitted to see the happy things around them—they smile.

Ed. Robbins and Ellis Scoville are blind, but they smile. Pass them on the street or campus and they are smiling. They make the best of their lot. They do not ask, nor want, sympathy. They require no special favors. They recite in classes just the same as any student—and usually much better than some.

They are learning to see the world through the eye of a trained intellect.

The other day they were in a restaurant, dining and talking together.

One said: "You ought to take some psychology, it's great."

"Yes, I'd thought of that."

"I got into a heated argument with my reader over—" and he explained some point which had seemed ludicrous to him.

They both laughed. It was a hearty laugh, and each meant it.

One reached into his pocket and produced cigars.

"Here, light up."

"Thanks."

Then they started talking and laughing again and rose to leave. With no hesitation they found their way to the cashier and out the door. Before the door had closed laughter was heard again from both.

They walked toward the campus together—smiling.

Y. W. TO GIVE ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP BANQUET

The annual membership banquet of the Y. W. C. A. will be held at the College Side Inn next Tuesday evening from 5:30 to 7:30. Announcements of results of the election of next year's officers will be made; toasts and music will complete the program.

All who wish to attend the banquet are urged by Miss Magowan to secure their tickets early as only 150 can be entertained. Beatrice Peters is in charge of the tickets, which will be fifty cents. "I want to stress particularly the fact that girls not living in organized halls and houses are to come to the bungalow for their tickets, as I have a number here on reserve for them," she stated.

Y. W. VISITOR GIVES IMPRESSIONS OF WEST

"One of the nicest things which comes from being a wandering soul is discovering how much alike people are," said Miss Grace Louks, of New York, expert on Y. W. C. A. discussion group work, who is now visiting the campus and holding discussions with groups of Y. W. C. A. women. Miss Louks is visiting the Pacific coast for the first time. "I like it very much," she said, "although it is not as different from the east as I had expected."

EL CIRCULO CASTELLANO GUESTS OF FRATERNITY

A large number of students turned out for the Sigma Delta Pi play, "La Broma," which was presented Wednesday night, on the program given by the national fraternity in honor of El Circulo Castellano, campus Spanish club. Other numbers on the program were a solo, by Augusta Hamilton, accompanied by Vivian Harper, and a talk, outlining the work and purpose of Sigma Delta Pi, by Hulda Guild.

The characters of the Spanish comedy, were all played by members of the fraternity. The meeting was held at the Y. W. C. A. bungalow. Refreshments were served after the program.

El Circulo Castellano will not hold any more meetings this term, but the bi-monthly sessions will be continued next term.

Oregon Students Fail To Grasp Opportunities Claims Former Co-ed

convenient for committee meetings and so forth. It would be impossible to hold meetings in the evenings as is the custom here, because all students do not have their residences in Evanston, but live at home in Chicago, and its suburbs, Miss Butterfield pointed out.

"Here you have your own little community with little outside influence," she asserted. "You take interest in the speakers who come from other parts of the country and you turn out well for their lectures. Northwestern being so near Chicago, the student often becomes indifferent to his environment. Chicago is a University for graduate work and many go there for just that, but Northwestern combines the academic and social life."

Social sports are as much a part of the student life in Northwestern as here, said Miss Butterfield. "You have your mill race; we have our Lake Michigan."

"I like your 'hello'," she continued, "we tried it at Northwestern but it would not work. "There is one thing that I have noticed at Northwestern which seems not to exist here, at least it is not very evident," said she, "that is a rather large sized body of liberal minded people. They are not radical, neither are they conservative. They form the most forward thinking group on the campus."

"The lack of co-operation between men and women is another thing in which the two universities differ," said Miss Butterfield. "At Northwestern there seems to be closer understanding between them while here at Oregon women are not allowed to be as active. I certainly miss the girls being able to participate in the organized cheering though they do their part in the unorganized yelling," she said. "As my alma mater I think that Northwestern is fine, but I do think that there is an advantage in attending my home university," she declared. Miss Butterfield is really a westerner, her home being in Enterprise, Oregon. She is a member of Delta Zeta.
