April Frolic

"TERM Calendar Already Filled." reads an Emerald heading in Saturday's paper. Of these important "dates" there is at least one which ranks high as a tradition. That one is April Frolic, which has not only become a tradition, but has quite a body of mythology grown up around it.

The Greeks of old, we are often reminded, used to occasionally delight in bacchante revels. Something even in the philosophic temperament demanded a short while of letting off steam, so to speak. In like manner, the "serious young women" who formerly frequented the "female seminary" are now permitted within the precincts of the co-educational college to pursue their labors and learned researches.

The men, it seems, are not invited to this gay and festive affair. Those who enter the sacred confines of the Woman's building do so at their own peril, it has been said. It is of course, but a short while since April Fool's day, and almost anything might happen in the way of left-over jokes.

Dreams in Brick and Mortar

THE FORMAL dedication of the newly completed auditorium of the school of music on Saturday evening was the culmination of the dreams of many persons for years past. It means that music and talents musical have a permanent "home" on the campus—a fact of considerable significance after the Music building has for so long consisted of single small practice rooms and offices and the empty shell of what was one day to be the completed auditorium.

This idea of unity has been foreseen many times over by schools at the University. It was not so long a time ago that the school of architecture and allied arts was united with the uniting of the buildings as the outward symbol. The buildings were tied together by a simple ambulatory around an inner courtyard, with a small fireproof gallery as a further partnership room.

The rounding out of these schools not only makes a pleasanter atmosphere for the students, but it makes the citizens of the state who visit the institution view the schools as the individual forces they are. The school of music has for a long time been known as a cultural force, a self-supporting addition to the state University.

Rights and Riots

THE STUDENTS of Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, staged a tin-pan riot in February which culminated in the breaking of several windows, we are told in an article in The Nation for March 18. Three points of significance are to be noted in this connection. In the first place, the students of the university are negroes, the university being "one of the mission schools founded after the Civil War by generous-spirited white Northerners."

It may be that the president of Fisk considered the beating of tin pans as a relic of the barbaric past of the negroes, and seriously objected. It may be that he is by temperament averse to the sound of them. Yet liberty is not so old a thing as to cease to be dear. An infringement of it on his part even after an appeal from the Fisk student committee has tempted, stupidly or deliberately, a reversion to type.

SCHOLARSHIPS OFFERED FOR MEDICAL STUDENTS

It has been customary in the past to award three or four scholarships to medical students of the University of Oregon when they proceed to the medical school in Portland.

Each scholarship carries with it ordinarily tuition for one year at school," explained Dr. Harry B. Torrey, of the zoology department. "Preference is given to graduate students and seniors, who are also graduates of Oregon, but juniors are eligible."

Applications for these scholarships should be sent to Dr. Torrey before the first of May.

TENNIS PLAYERS ASKED TO AMPLIFY COSTUMES

The department of physical education for men has issued a notice requesting that the men playing tennis do not wear short gymnasium trousers while playing. The department has purchased long white pants for tennis wear, and they will be issued to all having uniform privileges. The new equipment should arrive in the near future.

CAMPUS MEN GOLFERS TO PLAY FOR TITLE

Varsity Team Also Will Be Chosen This Week

Plans for the second University of Oregon men's golf tournament have been announced by George Bronaugh, captain of the varsity team.

Matches will be played on the Eugene course this week as a basis for selecting the team, and all University men are eligible. The men chosen will go to Portland to represent the University in the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate golf tournament, to be held May 21 and 22.

All who wish to enter the tournament must play 18 holes and hand in their score cards before next Monday to Floyd Byerly, who will have charge of the tournament.

The first round of the tournament must be played by April 20. This makes it necessary that the cards be turned in early. As soon as the scores are in, Byerly will make up the flights, and these will be announced as soon thereafter as possible.

Communications

Letters to the EMERALD from students and faculty members are welcomed, but must be signed and worded concisely. If it is desired, the writer's name will be kept out of print. It must be understood that the editor reserves the right to reject communications.

SIGNS IN ALL THE LANGUAGES PRESCRIBED

Instead of intelligence tests for professors, I would suggest a primer on campus geography, and signs written in all languages, including "word of one syllable," for asinine dumb students, who can't distinguish between Dr. Barnett's courses in American Political Science, and Donald Barnes' English History. What is most puzzling is this: How did the said student prepare his assignments? Presumably by studying the same pages in his English history text that Dr. Barnett assigned in Beard's "American Government and Politics," or Bryce's "American Commonwealth."

COLONEL LEADER'S NEWS

LETTER INTERESTING GOSSIP Editor Emerald: Vancouver has been very empty of Oregonians all the winter. One gets so used to seeing them in the summer months, and in reply to my boisterous greetings the males always retort with "Colonel, for the love of Mike, where's the nearest government liquor store?"

Our basketball team made mighty good reading for an exile. It has always entertained me seeing our emissaries rushing over the U. S. to get coaches, when Bill Reinhart was so obviously a man in ten thousand. Given Shy's doggedness and Bezdek's lucky star, Bill would be the greatest all around coach on the coast.

The New Zealand "All Blacks," the Rugby world's champions, played three matches here. They were the most wonderful athletic machine I ever saw. Of course, they had practically no opposition here, but it made their performance all the more dazzling. Under our amateur rules a coach is not allowed, and the men have to pay all their own expenses except traveling and hotel bills, so it is a marvel how they have attained their wonderful team work.

If I had Lynn Jones and Bob Mautz up to see those games (as I meant to), I think it would have made quite a difference in our team next fall.

"Skinny" Newton blew in at my club this winter, and explained, bashfully, that he was going to be married to a divinity, and needed my wife and myself. I did my best for him and told him it was just like jumping off a dock, and offered to have him shanghaied, but it was all no use, so we pushed him through. Virginia Judy Esterly was up and left her usual atmosphere of peacefulness and gracious wisdom.

George Rebec was up and made a really good impression. In fact competent critics say that he is much too big a man to be preaching the glogies and oosophies, why the man could be a star forward in a shiny team. Our vacant lot is being built over, so we had to play on the road, and the puddles and ruts were bad owing to the rain. Once when the Dean hit the opposing line in a deep puddle, it looked like Aphrodite rising from the foam, and we had to hold him back by the "er" clothes to keep him from knocking out a drayman who had interposed his dray at a critical moment, and stopped a record run and a goal. The next time one of my Amazon shiny teams takes on a fraternity team, I shall have to camouflage the Dean and play him centre forward for us.

I hear nearly every week from Arthur Rosebraugh, who is really beginning to get the inspiration of Oxford. I hear from other sources that he is making an impression there, such as few Rhodes scholars from this country have done. He missed his half Blue for the quarter—by six inches. In the vacation, he did a tour of "Stately Homes of England" and told me that it was only there that he got the real Oregon spirit—a fact which I have preached to you for seven years.

Given from our place of hiding in the fourth moon of the fourth year of our exile.

BREAKFAST'S READY Doesn't the gang sometimes get everlastingly tired of the same breakfast? Get a bag of cornmeal and ask the cook to make you hot cakes tomorrow for a change. Wouldn't they taste good—browned to a crisp in sizzling bacon fat and spread with melted butter and thick maple syrup? And then for a change at lunch time—a plate heated with steaming squares of cornbread. And besides, cornmeal is inexpensive. Its use will help you keep down the house's food bill.
