

Lyric Rainbow

Edited by Walter Evans Kidd

Separate

(To Hyacinth)

Only the bats swoop thru the heavy air,
Only the black night leans across the grass—
No star, no moon, no wind; and down the stair
No silver slippers flash. The shadows mass.
Heart of my heart, I'm lonely in the night.
My visions wane. My high throts cry untold
Within my soul. And love burns on. Our white
Youth swiftly goes. Too soon we shall be old.

Too soon we shall be dead. Death knows no end.
O my Beloved, come to me tonight—
Come to my breast—dream with me for a space:
We'll climb a hill in starry-mad delight;
Then we shall kiss and fearlessly descend
To darkness—you with rapture on your face.
—WALTER EVANS KIDD ("The Lyric")

Narcissus

It will not matter in a thousand years
That you have seen and yet not found me fair.
The moon will shine the same. My futile fears
And hopeless hopes will rest in dust somewhere.

Yet now is now, and I am here!
Narcissus blooms—my dear—my dear—

—MARGARET SKAVLAN.

The Blind Painter's Mistress

Yes, I am beautiful—Why did I choose
To spend myself on one who had no eyes?
"Think how the gods must laugh that he should lose Himself unwittingly in paradise!"
'Tis so they spoke, these foolish friends at tea
Upon the terrace.

How were they to know
My mad, barbaric joy? He comes to me
At night to kiss my outspread hair. I go
Into a sleep where I can share his dark,
And he to dreams of color and of light.
My beauty to our love is but the spark
To kindle it to flame, yet never quite
Can he possess the light whose warmth he feels.
I lie within his arms—his heart can find
How much I love—to him my spirit kneels—
So dear—so inarticulate—so blind.

—MARGARET SKAVLAN ("Overland Monthly")

Lilith

Once Cain the child of Adam played
With goldfish in a little pool.
The demon-woman passed the cool
Embered glade.

The baby-roundness of the child,
His curls, his gurgles of delight
Drew Lilith's eyes, and at the sight
She stopped and smiled.

She smiled again, then nearer stepped.
Wind-tossed of hair, strange, amber-eyed
She stood; Eve's son fled terrified.
And Lilith wept.

—MARGARET SKAVLAN (in "Palms")

To a Child Crying for the Moon

Hush, little one, and go to sleep—
It cannot be.
We all reach finite hands to grasp
Infinity.

(in "Overland Monthly")

—MARGARET SKAVLAN.

Interment

I hide the thought of you within my heart—
Too sweet to wrap in winding-sheet of verse—
And yet it so shall be. Egyptian art
Trapped mortal beauty ere it could depart,
Sealed it unfaded against Time's dull curse.

And who shall say in what dream-wonderment
I shall behold this love for you some day?
This princess was found buried, with the scent
Still in her jeweled hair, and wise men bent
To touch her little shoes, with tomb-dust gray.
—MARGARET SKAVLAN (in "The Fugitive")

A Mexican Laborer Sings

Only a Mexican laborer
Strumming a square tin can guitar,
Only a broken voice shrilling
In the fire flicker on the rough box car.
"Valga mi Dios"

Burdened pathos in a knotty tone:
Tomorrow only brings more labor,
Swing of the pick and clatter of tools—
Still he sees the bull-pit and flashing saber.

"Cuando sali a Habana"
The man in the moon must have made
A twisted, mirthless sideways grin,
While the black eyes ached with longing
As bitter as an untold sin.

His voice broke in an ashy sob;
The fire paled beggarly-low:
Through the nicotine dark
Only his cigaret's small yellow glow.
—ALFRED ANDREWS.

A Sonnet to Hyacinth

Now we shall live! We'll drink these April days
Like wine, with every sorrow hid behind
Your beauty: in your lyric eyes I find
The uplands of our love that dewily blaze
With buttercups in prints where danced the feet
Of Pan. Let's stretch upon the grass and twine
Faith with our folly—hear a lark repeat
The aching bliss your lips have taught to mine.

We'll let the sage (with whiskers down to here)
Frown at the morning blossoms of our mirth
And hide the dream of Pan and lean to peer
Into the cynic darkness of the earth—
Our souls, beyond his gaze, reach to a star;
Beloved, we live our lives for what they are.
—WALTER EVANS KIDD—"The Harp"

ALPHA DELTA SIGMA ELECTS NEW MEMBERS

Pledges Will Sport Sandwich Boards

An extraordinary recognition for work done in the field of advertising was awarded to four University of Oregon students by election to Alpha Delta Sigma, national honorary advertising fraternity, yesterday. Those elected are Milton George, Eugene; Jasper Crawford, Heppner; Calvin Horn, Falls City; and Earl W. Slocum, Portland.

George, Horn and Slocum are members of the business staff of the Oregon Daily Emerald, and students in the department of advertising. Crawford has had considerable experience on outside papers, and is studying advertising in the University.

Election to Alpha Delta Sigma is accorded the highest honor that is given to students in advertising. The W. F. G. Thacher chapter was granted to Oregon a year ago.

The men will stage a pre-initiation ceremony next Tuesday, when they will be required to wear "sandwich boards" all day long. Part of the initiation will be to sell the space on the boards to downtown business firms. Speeches on the library steps will also be part of the ritual.

The Sports Costume Must be Authentic

The most prominent and the most vulnerable part of the sport costume is the hat. Perfect harmony of colors and style are prerequisites.

Our sport section contains the smartest and most suitable millinery for any kind of sport occasion. The black and white hats are cool and summery and among the new are highly favored modes.

Comments on Eugene Shows

ANNE DEAR:

These marvelous spring days put enthusiasm into me; everything is so cheery and bright. However, this weather makes me think of good times rather than good lessons.

You don't know how thrilled I was when Harry, whom I have been cherishing as a secret sorrow, took me canoeing last night. Two other couples went with us. Everything had been so completely arranged by the boys, even to the dishes. Harry said that they bought a Lily Picnic package at Underwood and Elliot's Grocery, for in this convenient package the paper cloth and napkins, bread and butter plates, salad dishes, spoons and cups are packed. They are so easy to carry, and can be thrown away as soon as they have been used.

As I am having a date with Harry again tonight, I made a trip down to the Hasting Sisters this morning and had a facial pack. Now my skin has the pink, healthy glow that makes rouge unnecessary. There, one may get excellent facial shampoos, both plain and pack, as well as bleaches. The girls from the house all go there, as the work is done by experts.

When Geraldine and Peg were at Raup's Floral Shop getting roses and sweet peas for decorations for the tea we had the other day, they said that they saw two gorgeous bridal bouquets there, too. Judging from the way the girls spoke, I know they were elaborate affairs. Peg said that each contained large pink roses combined with sweet peas of the same delicate shade, a touch of foliage, and rich-looking lilies of the valley. Doesn't it make one wish that she were the one to carry such a beautiful bouquet?

Between classes, I stopped in at the Co-ed Barber Shop, which is on Kincaid street, next to the Co-op, and had a feather-edge bob. By means of an electric clipper—and professional barbers—a woman never fails to get a satisfactory hair cut there. Then, too, there are no men to gaze while one's hair is trimmed, for this shop is exclusively for women.

Dressmaking is generally a tiresome thing, particularly when one has to worry about pleats, or getting buttons to match the garment. These problems are all eliminated by patronizing the Art and Needlecraft Shop, which is just next to the First National bank, for there all seams can be finished neatly by hemstitching, or decorations can be applied in the same way. Besides, it is possible to get pleats of any type in any kind of material, as well as various kinds of buttons for every need.

The Style Shop is having a special today and Saturday on some very late arrivals. Smart hats in the Gloria Swanson shape made of leghorn and crepes are on sale for $7.50. Cbuc polo pokes of hair and straw cloth are only $5! And there are some close hats suitable for driving and suit wear for as little as two-fifty. These hats come in all colors and white.

"Moonlight and Roses Bring Wonderful Memories of You," how I love to dance to that! It's the latest hit, the college orchestras are playing it, and everyone is singing it. "Who Takes Care of the Caretaker's Daughter" has gone over big. The Eugene Music Shop is featuring both of these numbers.

The freshmen are going to give us a breakfast party up the race Sunday morning. Won't that be fun?

CAROL.
