The Students Are Concerned

THE PROPOSED Saturday class plan failed to be voted on at the faculty meeting yesterday afternoon and was referred back to the Schedule Committee for a more definite working out of details. In the original the motion was very general, and many different interpretations could be made from it with a consequent reduction in the possibility of ascertaining beforehand just how the scheme would work out in practice. To refuse to vote on the plan was justifiable for cause. To vote on any question which is worded in such general terms that the results of its adoption cannot be prophesied accurately would be an error in any body and show little judgment.

It is understood that in referring the question back the Schedule Committee was instructed to work out a plan for the six-day class week that could be made compulsory—that is, the faculty members would have to accept assignment to certain days and hours for their classes on an arbitrary basis.

There are faculty members who do not regard classes on Saturdays as advisable any more than do most of the students. In the proposed revision these professors would have to accept the teaching of classes on Saturday if the schedule develops the many conflicts which seem unavoidable. If faculty members would have to submit to assignment of teachings on Saturdays when they do not wish to, how will the student fare? No better, certainly. He will have to either accept university life on a six-day basis, or choose his course according to the days the subjects are given instead of basing his selection upon desire for a particular subject or professor.

Since free choice of subjects in undergraduate work is considerably frustrated by group requirements and other restrictions, the student who could manipulate his schedule each term for four years so that no required subject fell on Saturday would not need to go further in equipping himself for a livelihood. He could set himself up in business right on the campus and earn a considerable income juggling bewildered students' courses in similar fashion. The fallacy in this flight of imagination, of course, lies in the supposition that anyone could work out his course and avoid the undesirable conflicts mentioned.

The detailed report will be submitted at the next meeting of the faculty or at some special meeting which may be called. Any change of this sort, bound to affect campus life vitally if adopted, should be referred to the students in its final form before it is acted upon. The Emerald suggests that the final draft be printed in its columns some little time before it comes before the faculty for consideration, so that the campus reaction may be determined through the medium of communications or other expressions of opinion.

Every day communications are turned in without names being signed. The Editor must know who the author of a letter is, although the name need not necessarily be printed if it is not desired. Sign your name.

MILITARY DRILL TO DRAW CROWD

Colonel Sinclair Invites Civic Organizations

CEREMONY INSTRUCTIVE

Parade to Take Place South Of Barracks at 5:15

A large attendance is expected to witness the third of the series of weekly battalion parades being put on by the University R. O. T. C. unit, which will be held on the drill ground immediately south of the barracks, at 5:15 this afternoon.

A communication has been sent by Lieutenant Colonel W. S. Sinclair, commander of the R. O. T. C. unit, to the Chamber of Commerce, Lion's club, Kiwanis club, and the Rotary club, leading civic organizations of Eugene, extending an invitation to the townspeople to attend the weekly drills.

Colonel Sinclair's communication, in part, is as follows: "The army officers in charge of the military work at the University of Oregon desire to extend an invitation to the business men of Eugene and their families to attend, so that they may get some idea of the progress being made by the University students, whose military work constitutes a definite and important phase of the general scheme of National defense."

Battalion drills have been showing a marked improvement each week, and an attempt is being made by officers of the department to perfect the work in every phase, before proceeding with additional phases of ceremonial drill, according to Captain Frank L. Culin, executive officer of the department.

Competition Sharp
"Every man in every company is doing his best to place his own company first in these drills, and the results have been very encouraging," said Captain Culin. "However, we would like to have a larger attendance of spectators than at previous drills, not only among students, but faculty members as well. The ceremony will be found instructive as well as very interesting."

Assembly will sound promptly at 5:15, when all men are expected to be present, in full uniform and under arms. Adjutant's call, for the start of the parade, will sound at 5:25.

WOMEN'S CLASS TENNIS MATCHES START SOON

Plans for women's class tennis are being pushed at top speed in the hope of scheduling the matches as soon as doughnut tennis has been played off. A ladder arrangement is in use this season. By this system, the names of the girls as they appear on the sign-up list divided into four divisions (one for each class) are used as the starting point for final selection.

Any girl on one of these lists may challenge and play the first or second girl preceding her. The object is one of elimination in each class. It behooves the girl at the end of the list to begin playing immediately so that she may have a better chance for class tennis.

The first four names on each list will be those chosen for singles and doubles to compete in the class tournaments. Climbing on this ladder will count as practices, according to Irene Buckley. The seniors stand the poorest chances in the tournament, since only four from the class have gone out for class tennis.

Husted Wins Case; Collects Six Cents In Moot Court Trial

Dave Husted was given judgment in a damage suit against Steve Williams in a moot court trial, held last Tuesday evening, in the county courthouse. Dean Hale of the law school, acting as judge, awarded the plaintiff six cents, the amount sued for being $5,000.

Mr. Husted borrowed the car from Steve Williams, the defendant, who, it was charged, knew that the car was defective when he loaned it to Husted. Mr. Husted was racing the car on the Fair ground race track last Saturday, when suddenly the steering mechanism gave way and the car crashed into the grandstand. Mr. Husted came out of the wreck with a broken nose and many severely bruised spots.

Armand Fuchs acted as prosecuting attorney, and Margaret White was attorney for the defense.

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB HAS ANNUAL ELECTION

The Cosmopolitan club held its annual election Tuesday evening. The officers elected for the coming year were: Andree Pellion, president; Romulo Ayala, vice president; Ben Jower, treasurer; and Ruby Lister, secretary and reporter. Members of the executive committee, which comprises the officers, the faculty adviser and three other members of the club, were chosen as follows: Andree Pellion, Romulo Ayala, Ben Jower, Ruby Lister, Professor Warren D. Smith, Sigrid Martinson, Sinforsoso Padilla, and Hung Chung.

The balance of the evening was given to discussion of Sweden. Professor E. Thorstenberg gave an informal discussion of Sweden, which, because of the similarity of the origin and character of the people included sidights on Norway and Denmark. Miss Myrtle Jansson played two selections on the piano. Coffee, Swedish coffee cake and fkarpon were served as refreshments.

Plans are under way for a picnic to be held May 30. It is hoped that this picnic may be held in cooperation with the Cosmopolitan club of O. A. C.

Boston Ivy Clings To Walls of Many Campus Buildings

Even the campus buildings are turning green in response to the call of spring, for the Boston ivy, which covers so many of them, is fast reaching its summer verdure. Seventeen years ago, when H. M. Fisher, now superintendent of grounds, first came to the Oregon campus, the only ivy growing was on McClure and Villard halls. This was the old English ivy, an evergreen. Finding the English variety unsatisfactory, Mr. Fisher gradually had it removed, and caused Boston ivy to be planted in its stead.

The ivy clings to the walls by means of its blossoms. If these do not come in contact with the surface, they go to seed, but if they touch anything, a glue-like substance is formed. The tendrils then cling so tightly that it is almost impossible to jerk them loose.

Virginia creeper was formerly growing on some of the buildings, but all has been taken away except that on Deady.
